LIND MAKES PROGRESS IN HIS NEGOTIATIONS WITH GENERAL HUERTA

Presentment Delivered Is Preliminary, However, and Will Be Followed by Others Going More Into Details

STATE DEPT. EXPECTS NEXT STEP ON MONDAY

Contents of Further Proposals Will Be Made Public From Washington When Lind Submits Them to Huerta

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Substantial progress has been achieved, in the judgment of administration officials here, by John Lind, in the discharge of his delicate mission to Mexico. They feel the American embassy's adviser at least has made a breach in the wall, which theoretically had been erected by the Mexican government to obstruct his negotiations. The presentment he already has made is understood to be only of a preliminary character and will be followed by others setting out more in detail the object which the American administration had in mind in dispatching him to Mexico City.

The delivery of these supplementary communications, either orally or in writing, will depend entirely upon the reception which the Mexican government accords the first communication. This is now under careful consideration, a fact regarded as of the utmost promise for the ultimate success of the negotiations. It is understood that while there is nothing in these views in the nature of a demand for the withdrawal of General Huerta from the presidency, or for the arbitrary fixing of the date for a general election, there is nevertheless a distinct intimation of the administration's belief that some concession should be made by the Huerta government to terminate the present insurrection and to insure the ascendancy of a truly popular government.

If the fundamentals are accepted, the way will be open for conferences to define the means by which the desired results could be brought about.

NEXT STEP MONDAY.

It is expected at the state department that the next step in the negotiations will not be taken before Monday. The request of the Mexican government for time to consider Mr. Lind's presentation practically covered that idea. Meanwhile it is deemed essential that the principals to the negotiations shall surround them with the utmost secrecy at this interesting phase.

Not the slightest intimation of Mr. Lind's communication has reached any of the representatives of foreign powers. It is expected, however, that as soon as the Mexican government reaches a decision as to whether further overtures are to be received at all, steps will be taken to acquaint the representatives of Mexico and the foreign powers with the nature of Lind's mission.

The same information probably will be conveyed to the diplomatic representatives of the same powers accredited to the United States.

LODGE BACKS WILSON.

Senator Lodge had a long talk with Secretary Bryan today about Mexican affairs. In view of his formal declaration in the senate on this point to stand squarely behind the president, providing the Mexican difficulty could be kept out of the field of politics, this is believed to foreshadow a better attente between the Democratic and Republican members of the foreign relations committee that existed yesterday.

Henry Lane Wilson, retired ambassador to Mexico, remains in Washington, still undecided as to his future movements. Mr. Wilson today also was reflecting upon the communication which Secretary Bryan dispatched to Ambassador Page in London regarding his comment upon the statement attributed to the British foreign office. Whether he will make any further criticism in this matter probably will depend upon Great Britain's answer to Secretary Bryan's inquiry, which probably will be delayed until Monday or Tuesday.

MEXICAN BORDER PROBE.

Democratic members of the senate foreign realtions committee have determined that if the investigation of Mexican border conditions by the American financial support to revolutionists is to be continued by the special subcommittee that worked among the border last year that committee will be reorganized so that its control will rest with Democratic senators.

The investigation conducted last year was under direction of Senator Smith of Michigan and Senator Fall, both Republicans, who now are preparing reports. Prior to the end of the last congress, Senator Smith obtained permission to continue the investigation in to the present congress.

The foreign relations committee will determine next week as to whether the investigation is to be carried on. If the committee is authorized to continue, it will be reorganized so that three Democratic members will control it, and its chairman will become a democrat.

Several resolutions for investigation of Mexican conditions have been introduced in the senate recently, and demands are being considered by the foreign relations committee in the general discussion involving the future of the work of the existing investigating committee. The Smith-Fall committee was appointed under a resolution directing it to determine whether aid had been given Mexican revolutionists, but its investigations covered the entire scope of Mexican border conditions and the treatment of Americans in the border states of Mexico.

Big Mexic Battle With Heavy Losses

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Aug. 16.—According to reports received at Piedras Negras, Constitutionalist headquarters, the federal and Constitutionalist armies, exhausted after two days of desperate fighting at Rodriguez, Mexico, ceased hostilities late today with neither side having a decisive advantage.

GEORGIA MOTHERS INDEBTED TO HER

MRS. GEORGE BROWN.

Wife of the well-known specialist and former member of legislature who by her persuasiveness succeeded in getting a bill, recognizing a mother's equal right with the father to the custody of minor children, enacted into law at the recent session of the Georgia legislature. At Mrs. Brown's request Governor Slaton affixed his signature to the mothers' rights bill on the very day after the legislature adjourned. In recognition of the fact that this just legislation was largely due to her untiring efforts Governor Slaton presented the pen with which he signed the bill to Mrs. Brown.

GENERAL RESUME OF WHAT LEGISLATURE DID AND DIDN'T DO

MANY GENERAL BILLS KILLED OR SIDETRACKED

Some of Those Failing to Pass Were McCrory Schoolbook, Hixon-Searcy and Compulsory Education Bills

One week ago the casual observer of the deliberations of the general assembly of Georgia would have told you that the law-making branch of the state government had done nothing and was destined to do nothing save kill valuable time until adjournment sine die. And so it appeared until the beginning of the week with exactly four days to go.

Up to that time many bills of vital importance to the welfare of the state had been introduced but few had passed and the remainder seemed doomed to lie over until next summer. Such was the opinion of the younger members and those on the outside who had carefully watched the progress of the house and senate from day to day. But the older heads knew better. They had been there before and seen the legislature sluggishly plod along until the passage of important measures seemed to be a matter of impossibility. They knew that real results came during the closing hours and therefore harbored none of the evident uneasiness of the uninitiated.

And so it was during the last week of the present assembly. Things began to hum on Friday a week ago and with the advent of the final week, when house and senate started out on the home stretch, the prevalent idea of nothing being accomplished was completely dispelled.

As has been said a few bills of a general nature were put on the calendar during the earlier stages of the season but those of the greatest state-wide interest did not come up for passage until

FRANK SHOULD KNOW FATE BEFORE THE WEEK PASSES IS OPINION OF ATTORNEYS

While Defense Has About Forty Character Witnesses, It Is Not Believed That Their Testimony Will Take More Than One Day, and Frank Himself Will Probably Tell His Story to the Jury Some Time Tuesday.

REBUTTAL EVIDENCE WILL TAKE TWO DAYS AND THE ARGUMENTS OF ATTORNEYS TWO MORE

This Will Put the Case in the Hands of the Jury at the End of the Week — All Interest Is Now Centered in the Witnesses That the Solicitor Will Put on the Stand in an Effort to Break Down Fine Character Showing Made by Frank.

The present week will see the end of the trial of Leo M. Frank charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, all attorneys connected with the case believe.

Counsel expect to conclude the young factory superintendent's defense certainly before the end of Tuesday morning's session and probably during the day Monday.

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey says that he expects to be no longer than two days in introducing testimony in rebuttal. With two days for the arguments this will mean that the fate of Frank will be in the hands of twelve jurors by Saturday. The length of the Frank trial, which has passed through its third week, long ago broke all records for criminal cases in Georgia. While many civil cases have run over a much longer period of time, few if any equal the Frank trial in the matter of straight testimony delivered on the stand. The official court reporter, Judge H. L. Parry, states that his record shows 875,000 words. Judge Parry is working court reporters in relay and typing the evidence as rapidly as possible. The record now snows over 3,000 typewritten legal cap pages.

Interest in the trial centers largely in the rebuttal testimony, which will be offered by the state. Approximately fifty witnesses have been summoned by the solicitor general to give rebuttal testimony at the trial, and according to rumors some of the testimony will be sensational. The solicitor has indicated by questions to witnesses that he has under subpoena a girl, who will testify that two weeks prior to the tragedy Frank made advances to Mary Phagan, and that she was forced to leave her job with him to meet her alone. Much mystery surrounds the probable testimony of Dewey Howell, who was brought here from the Home of the Good Shepard in Cincinnati to be a witness.

The greater number of the rebuttal witnesses have been called as character witnesses, and they can only say that they consider Frank's general character good or bad, unless they are asked about specific acts by the defense.

The statement of Leo M. Frank will be one of the big features of the trial next week. Despite the fact that there is little which can be added to the detailed statement of his movements on the day of the tragedy made at the coroner's inquest, there is much interest manifested in the account which the young factory superintendent will give of his life.

NO WRITTEN STATEMENT.

While he will have a number of notes to which he will rerer, it is said that Frank will probably not have a written statement, but will tell his story largely from memory.

Little is said to be left in the defense's case except Frank's statement. According to well established reports W. H. Mincey, who claims that Conley made a confession to him, will not be put upon the stand.

While the defense will probably place about forty more witnesses on the stand practically all of them, it is said, will be factory employes, who will testify to the good character of the defendant, and to the bad character of his chief accuser, the negro Conley.

The putting of Frank's character in issue, which has greatly increased the length of the trial, is the result of Frank's own request, according to a well authenticated rumor.

Frank knew that his character could only be put in issue by his own lawyers, and they, it is said, put the matter up to him, and he requested that they let down the bars, declaring that the state could prove nothing against him.

DEFENSE NOT DISTURBED.

Despite the statement of Solicitor General Dorsey that he had several "high-class ladies" who attack Frank's character, it is said that attorneys for the defendant are satisfied that no credible testimony will be offered against Frank's character.

Frank has stood the three weeks of the trial well, and is ready and anxious, it is said, for a chance to tell his own story.

FRIENDS OF SULZER RALLY TO SUPPORT

Impeached Governor Writes Another Letter to Glynn, Deploring Strife Over Office

(By Associated Press.)

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 16.—An armed truce over Sunday in the present situation in fight for the governorship of New York state. Both Governor Sulzer and Lieutenant Governor Glynn, as acting governor, signed official papers during the day. Apart from this the only skirmish was the issuing by Governor Sulzer of a reply to Mr. Glynn's declination of the suggestion that their differences be taken at once to court. Governor Sulzer deplores this declination, pointing out that will probably lead to "trouble and litigation." The purpose of the suggestion, he stated, was to avoid the spectacle of two persons claiming to act as governor of this great state at the same time."

Mr. Glynn left his official fort on the third floor of the capitol early in the afternoon, but Governor Sulzer stood by his guns on the floor below throughout the day.

Governor Sulzer's letter which arrived after Mr. Glynn had left, emphatically denied that his communication suggesting that the controversy be taken into court contained any "suggestion that you should suffer away any of the functions attaching to the office of lieutenant governor, but simply that we seek a termination of what your and my rights and duties are at the present juncture. The letter continued:

STATEMENT INACCURATE.

"Your statement that the matter is now in the highest course of the state—the court of impeachment. I suggest to you is very inaccurate. The court of impeachment will not convene until the 8th of September. The court is not to determine who is to discharge the duties of governor pending trial of the charges presented to it, and of course, could not, in any event, determine that question before it convenues.

"Whatever the result of the charges against me may be, it is certain that future trouble and litigation will arise, growing out of your acts and mine, and it was to prevent, as far as possible, such future trouble, and to avoid the spectacle, of two persons claiming to act as governor of this great state at the same time, that I made the suggestion that counsel for you and for myself endeavor to agree upon some method of presenting the question as to who should act as governor until the decision and determination of the charges against me to the courts at the earliest possible moment, and that we abide by the law as it should be determined by the courts, not by counsel, and I regret that my efforts in that behalf are not to have your cooperation."

Mrs. Sulzer, who is suffering from a nervous breakdown, spent a quiet afternoon and was reported as resting more comfortably tonight. Her temperature was given as 102 1-2 and her pulse at 120.

Lynn J. Arnold, publisher of the Albany Knickerbocker Press and one of the governor's closest counsellors, announced tonight that he will undertake to form a national law and order committee to defend Governor Sulzer, "drive out of our public life and to punish the political bosses to the fullest possible extent under the law."

SUMMARY OF FRANK EVIDENCE AT END OF THE THIRD WEEK

Defense Has Attacked the State's Case at Every Point, Considering No Detail Too Small to Raise a Reasonable Doubt Against It.

WHEN the third long week of the trial of Leo M. Frank ended Saturday afternoon 203 witnesses had taken the oath and told the story what they knew of the circumstances surrounding Atlanta's greatest tragedy, the murder of Mary Phagan in the National Pencil factory on Memorial day, April 26. Of these witnesses thirty-four had testified for the state and 169 for the defense and among them all only one directly connects the factory superintendent with the crime. Jim Conley, the negro factory sweeper, is Frank's accuser. He not only accuses the superintendent of murder, but adds the charge of perversion and it is through this charge that the state hopes to show a motive for the crime.

Center of Attack

Much of the most determined work done by the defense during the third week, just finished, has been concentrated upon the testimony given by H. F. Harris, secretary of the state board of health, and upon the testimony of C. B. Dalton, both of whom were introduced by the prosecution.

In attacking Dr. Harris' testimony, the defense introduced several physicians who characterized Dr. Harris' conclusion as guesses and said that they attached no importance to them and believed them to be without scientific foundation. It will be remembered that Dr. Harris' testimony fixed the time of Mary Phagan's death, in the opinion of the witness, at not more than 45 minutes after she ate her last meal of cabbage and bread at home and started for town to meet her death. This was based upon the stage of digestion attained by the contents of her stomach and arrested by death.

Dr. Harris testified further regarding other details which had convinced him that violence of some nature was inflicted upon the girl, and that she was rendered unconscious from the blow upon the back of her head, being choked to death later by the cord around her neck. The defense assailed each of the conclusions, combating most vigorously the one that Mary Phagan was killed within a specified number of minutes after her last meal.

Witnesses from Walton county were introduced one after another to swear that they know C. B. Dalton and that they would not believe him on oath. Dalton's own experiences with the criminal law were revealed, the defense lawyers securing his admissions of them. Dalton's testimony was menacing to the defense because it purported to corroborate in incidental particulars the general story told by Jim Conley—whose evidence is the center of the whole attack by the defense.

Points at Issue

The state has sought to prove that Mary Phagan met her death in the metal room on the second floor of the pencil factory before 1 o'clock on April 26.

The defense has sought to refute this with testimony that it is impossible to determine the hour in which the girl died, and that there are chances that she met her death in another part of the building.

The state clings to the theory that the girl was struck on the head, rendered unconscious by failing against a piece of machinery, then was strangled to death by a cord.

The defense has put its witnesses up to testify that the wound on the back of the dead girl's head may not have caused unconsciousness and that the manner in which she met death is a question which possibly no physician can answer correctly.

The state has sought to prove that Frank was the last person to see the girl alive. So far nothing has developed in the trial to connect the girl was seen after she drew her pay from the factory superintendent.

By the testimony of Monteen Stover, who swore that she found Frank's office vacant at 12:05 o'clock on the afternoon of the tragedy, and waited five minutes, and left then without having seen or heard anyone, the state got before the jury the allegation that just after Mary Phagan was supposed to have entered the factory neither she nor the factory superintendent was seen around the office by the witness. On this too the defense directed a heavy attack, introducing witnesses who swear they saw Mary Phagan get off a trolley car as late as 12:10—thus tending to make immaterial Frank's absence from his office while Monteen Stover was there.

The state has produced a witness (Conley) who says he heard a girl scream after Mary Phagan entered the factory, but this same witness says that Mary entered ahead of Monteen Stover, and the latter swears she entered at 12:05, and then too according to the defense's witness Mary Phagan was seen outside of the factory after that time.

The state has sought to prove that violence was done the girl before her death. The defense has put its experts on the stand to swear that testimony that violence was done is only guess work; and many well known

A MILLION WORDS OF TESTIMONY

THE trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, is believed to have broken at least three records in criminal prosecution in the south.

More witnesses have been called than in any other case on record, more actual time has been taken up in hearing testimony, and the transcript of evidence is the most voluminous, so far as known, ever taken in a criminal court south of the Mason and Dixon line.

When court adjourned Saturday afternoon thirty-four witnesses had been called by the state and 169 by the defense, a total of 203; for three weeks the jury had listened to testimony, having spent approximately 115 1-2 hours in court; and the evidence transcribed by the stenographers exceeded 875,000 words.

It is considered likely that before the end of the trial nearly 300 witnesses will have been called and the transcript will total considerably more than a million words.

One of the most remarkable features of the trial is the way in which the court stenographers have taken down the testimony. The defense, anticipating the need of having a copy of the official record in their possession as quickly as possible after a witness' testimony has been taken down, engaged two extra stenographers to work with the two regular court reporters of the county. The four work in relays. One will "take" for an hour. He will then be relieved, and while another is writing down the questions of the attorneys and the answers of the witnesses he is either typing from his notes or reading from them into a dictophone. In the latter event an assistant takes the testimony as it is dictated by this device.

In this way the defense is able at any time to refer immediately to any part of the testimony which has already been given in the trial.

RELIEF IS IN SIGHT FROM KANSAS DROUTH

Rain Over Considerable Area and Temperatures Are Lower

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 16.—The end of the longest, hottest and most costly drouth in the history of Kansas is in sight, according to reports received here tonight. Rain of some consequence fell over a considerable portion of the state today and in many places continued tonight. Government weather forecasters said the rainfall probably indicated that the drouth was broken. Good showers were general over Missouri and northern Oklahoma.

The precipitation in Kansas ranged from light showers to one and one-half inches, the heaviest rainfall being in the southern part of the state. An inch of rain fell in the district between Emporia and Kansas City and between Lawrence and Topeka the downpour measured three quarters of an inch. A heavy rain visited the territory around Hilton and good showers were reported east from there to Leavenworth. Rain was general over the eastern part of the state tonight.

The first rain in 71 days fell in Concordia tonight. During the drouth the mercury climbed above the 100 mark in 25 days. In many places where rain fell today the drouth has been continuous for nine weeks. A drop in temperature was experienced at all points wher rain fell.

The high temperature continued in portions of central Kansas where no rain fell. Abilene reported 105 degrees, Emporia 104 and Salina 103.

A heavy rain visited southwest Missouri late today. At Joplin the rain was accompanied by a high wind and hail which shattered plate glass windows and tore down awnings in the business district.

At Kansas City today there were two deaths due to heat. A shower of fifteen minutes' duration sent the temperature down for a short time. In the section of the city where many poor people live an ice famine prevails.

REPUBLICAN FIGHT ON TARIFF ITEMS FUTILE

Senate Almost Completes Agricultural Schedule While Debating on Fish and Bananas

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The senate today almost completed consideration of the agricultural schedule of the tariff bill, disposing of a number of important rates protested against by the Republicans.

No amendments were adopted, though Republican leaders sought to increase the rates on straw, fish, apples and other fruits, to abolish the proposed duties on canary, caraway and anniseeds, and vigorously protested against any duty on bananas. Democratic leaders expect to complete the agricultural schedule Monday and express confidence that none of its provisions will be changed, free cattle, free wheat and their products already having been approved. The sugar schedule, upon which the greatest fight of the tariff controversy will be waged, will be reached next, and majority leaders are planning to hold night senate sessions beginning the middle of the coming week.

The principal debate today on the agricultural schedule centered about fish and bananas. Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, declared the 25 per cent reductions proposed on fish products, with fresh fish on the free list, would give Canadian fishermen control of the great New England markets. No change, however, was made in the rates.

BANANA ARGUMENT.

Senators Burton, Weeks and Sherman argued against the proposed duty of 1-10 of 1 cent a pound on bananas. Defending the proposal, Mr. Simmons said it was not levied against a basic food product, Senator Williams, of Mississippi, facetiously remarked that it would tax "the down trodden workingman" at the rate of "1-50 of a cent per banana."

Senator Sherman, of Illinois, referring to the fact that most of the bananas imported come from Central American countries, said this country should "cultivate friendly relations with the principal product of those countries sent to a friendly port," for, he continued, "we either have got to vitalize the Monroe Doctrine or ignobly abandon it."

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts, said the consumer eventually would pay the duty of approximately $2,225,000 a year on bananas.

The vote sustaining the proposed banana tax was close, 31 to 25, Senators Thornton and Ransdell, of Louisiana, voting with the Republicans.

Senator Stone declared there was a conflict in the bill relating to dead and dressed poultry and prepared meats, whereby both might be made dutiable at 20 per cent under one paragraph and free of duty under another. Senator Williams said it was an oversight and conceded that the matter be recommitted for redrafting. Senator Gronna sought to increase the proposed rate on live poultry from 1 to 2 cents a pound, but the amendment was rejected.

Senator Smoot sought ineffectively to increase the proposed rate on powdered cocoa from 2 to 3 cents per pound.

COFFEE TRUST.

Senator Norris, of Nebraska, protested against the pronouncing of 2 cents per pound on dandelion root and other substitutes for coffee, maintaining that they should rot on the free list. He argued that such a rate was "a direct protection to the coffee trust." Senator Williams, upon consultation with other Democrats, conceded the force of the paragraph go back to the committee with the prospect that Senator Norris' suggestion might be accepted.

Senator Gronna, discussing generally the agricultural schedule, declared the free list articles will be a burden to the farmers, and will cause a revenue deficit in the treasury of $25,000,000.

Early in the day Senator McLean, of Connecticut, addressed the senate in opposition to the finance committee amendment permitting importation of feathers of wild birds. Answering him, Senator Reed, of Missouri, declared it was a waste of time to talk about "heron and hummingbirds, while the business of the country was halted pending action on the tariff."

CRANE CO. TEAM CLAIMS RAILROAD LEAGUE FLAG

Manager J. C. Hall Asserts Forfeited Game Gives His Nine Pennant

Because they forfeited a postponed game to the Woodward Lumber company team, the Standard Oil team lost the pennant in the Railroad league, according to th contention of Manager J. C. Hall, of the Crane company team, who Saturday night laid claim to the honors.

Manager Hall declares that his team has won twelve games and lost three, while the Standards, the nearest competitors, won eleven and lost three.

A series of forfeited games and victories during the past few weeks threw the claimapts for the pennant to the top of the league standings. Three weeks ago the Woodward team forfeited to the Crane aggregation; West Point forfeited to the same team last Saturday. Yesterday the Gulf Refining company team forfeited to the Cranes. The Standards also conceded a scheduled gam eyesterday when they left the city to play an out of town team.

The is the season's line-up of the Cranes:

Resume of What Legislature Did and Didn't Do

Monday. It was then that the real lawmaking machinery began to make laws and make them quickly. Measures galloped from house to senate and from senate to house in rapid fire order and thence to the executive offices for the governor's signature. It was the beginning of the end and few meritorious bills were overlooked in the hurry.

Committee reports were for the most part sustained, and accordingly little time was taken up in bills unfavorably returned. The real work was done there and house and senate usually accepted the verdict.

TAX REFORM BILL.

Looming high above all legislation accomplished is undeniably the enactment of the tax reform measure known as the Lipscomb-Anderson-Miller bill. The eyes of the entire state were turned to it and before its passage the general assembly had engaged in the most spectacular battle of many sessions.

The length and bitterness of the fight for and against this bill can best be appreciated when it is pointed out that it was known as house bill No. 6, one of the very first to be introduced, and yet one of the very last to become a law. Its history begins within a week after the legislature convened and continues through the committees room and subcommittees to the house and back again, until passed by the house again and accepted by the senate and finally accepted by the house when with the vote a tie, the speaker voting "aye" prepared it for the governor's signature.

The bill as passed combines the features of a substitute introduced by Representative Harry Wright, of Floyd, some of the features of the original Lipscomb bill and some contained in the amendments offered by the committee of the ways and means committee. The final draft was made by Senators Anderson and Miller and Representative H. H. Swift, of Muscogee.

MEDICAL PRACTICE BILL.

Possibly next in importance among the bills passed was that of Senators Longino and Richardson, known as the medical practice bill, which does away with quackery in Georgia. It went through both houses by safe margins and, in its next session, amended by the house, lost none of its vital features.

To attempt to classify as to importance other measures that need only the signature of the governor to make them laws, would be a hard matter, an opinion is obliged to differ on the open question of merit. But there is one thing certain: no more popular bill has ever received the signature of a Georgia governor than that of Representative Samuel L. Olive, of Richmond; John Y. Smith, of Fulton, and Senator E. L. Smith, of the Ninth, giving mothers equal rights with the father where the question of the custody of minor children is involved. The majority in the house was 96 to 62, and in the senate there were but two dissenting votes, 36 being cast in favor of the measure.

Under this new law the prima facia right once vested in the father as the natural guardian of the child is taken away from him and the mother, while not being prima facie, has equal rights with the father, when the issue of a child's custody is raised.

The work of the Fulton delegation carriage has passed unnoticed by Atlantians. Through them three bills of more than passing interest have been successfully passed. One gives the Atlanta circuit of the superior courts an additional judge, the other is the new charter for the city, and the last abolishes justice courts in Fulton county, creating in lieu thereof a central municipal court.

WRIGHT'S IMPORTANT MEASURES.

Representative Wright, of Floyd, has the credit of getting through two very important measures. The one in which Georgians will be most interested is the resolution to create a commission to investigate into the terms of a lease of the Western and Atlantic railroad and recommend its findings to the legislature at its next session.

Aside from this, the commission may recommend, along with specific terms of a re-lease, the suggestion of extending the state's road to the sea. For this purpose, for the session an appropriation of $5,000 is carried.

A second measure, fathered by Representative Wright, provides for permanent registration of voters. Once a voter registers, he has only to send in his tax returns thereafter and his name is automatically retained on the books of the registrar.

The resolution of Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley, creating a committee to investigate into the price paid for school books in Georgia, passed both houses and is headed to revolutionize the price of these books in the state. The resolution carries with it the right for the abrogation of the present book contract for five years, should it be determined that the books can be purchased more cheaply elsewhere. The resolution is especially designed to provide for an investigation of the feasibility of the state printing its own school books.

"Get-Rich-Quick" Waffingfords and "wild-cat" schemes will be effectively blocked in the state through the passage of the "blue sky" law introduced in the house by Representatives Spence, of Carroll, and Wohlwender, of Muscogee. They must satisfy the secretary of state as to their standing before a license may be secured.

SURETYSHIPS INSURANCE LAWS.

The insurance laws of the state will be strengthened by the passage of the bill of Representatives Cook and Wohlwender, which specifies the conditions under which foreign insurance companies may withdraw from the state. If any company desires to suspend business in Georgia, it must first make a report of its financial condition to the comptroller general, show its assets and liabilities and re-insure every policy to the satisfaction of the comptroller before being allowed to withdraw. General William A. Wright, in commenting on the bill when it was introduced, expressed the wish that it would pass, as he considered it a most important piece of legislation.

After a rather long fight in the committee room, the Mills-Jones bill, providing for the Georgia Training School for Girls (known as the home for wayward girls), finally reach the calendar and was passed in the house. In the senate, however, the appropriation of $30,000 was cut to $20,000 owing to the depleted condition of the state's finances. The house at once concurred in the amendment.

As a companion to this bill, both of which were supported by prison reformists, the measure of Senator Tarver giving a judge the right to put a prisoner on probation was also passed. The provisions of the bill state that the trial judge shall at his discretion allow one convicted of a misdemeanor to serve the sentence imposed outside of a jail, prison or other house of detention and in the event a fine is imposed, to pay it in installments.

OTHER SENATE BILLS.

Other senate bills passed in the house were those by Mr. Smith, of the ninth district, to allow superior court judges to grant charters to individuals or corporations while on their vacation; by Messrs. Pope, Hixon and Tarver, to exempt certain farm products from taxation; by Mr. Huie, providing for the election of United States senators by the people and by Mr. McNeil, to allow through freight trains carrying perishables, to run on Sundays.

The first general act to pass was that of Representatives Swift, of Muscogee; Cole, of Bartow, and Slater, of Bryan. This is the inheritance tax which will levy on all inheritances over and above $5,000 at the time the transfer is made. The income from it is entirely problematical, but a good revenue is expected. Under such a law in New York the Astor estate has contributed nearly $4,000,000 to the upkeep of the government.

The occupation tax bill of Messrs. Slade and Akin, doubling the tax on foreign and domestic corporations so that the amount is now on a sliding scale of from $10 to $200 on the capital stock, is declared by leaders in the house and senate to be a most important piece of legislation.

Two other tax bills by Mr. Akin were passed, one increasing the tax on automatic bottling plants and the other making the automobile license $5 per year instead of $2 for the life of the car.

MANY BILLS KILLED.

Such is a short resume of successful legislation. On the other hand, there were many bills killed, some good and others bad, while more were not reached or tabled and will be overcome next year to be taken up in their order.

One of the most pernicious measures introduced this year and which, though it passed the house unobserved in the latter day rush, was tabled in the senate, was that of Representatives Cooper and Crawley, of Wayne, providing for an early primary election to be held not later than June 15 of the year before [illegible] election.) The flying trip for passage was nipped in the bud by Senators McNeil, Allen, Elkins Harrell, the latter conducting a filibuster in the senate to keep it from a second reading after it had been killed in the committee and subsequently reconsidered by the senate when it was apparently dead. The warning note was sounded by Representative Barry Wright on the day of its passage in the house and a further warning given in The Journal the following day.

It is generally hoped that the bill will never again be revived and threaten the pure election laws of 1908 with annihilation.

The pure shoe bill of Senator Peyton was killed outright and a like measure in the house failed to survive general judiciary committee No. 2, to which it was referred.

MCCRORY SCHOOL BOOK BILL.

An all-important measure that is sure to come up next year is the school book bill of Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley, which is in effect a companion bill to his resolution passed at the session just ended. The bill was read a second time in the house and carried a favorable report from the committee on education.

The measure as drawn by Mr. McCrory provides that the state school superintendent be empowered to ask competitive bids on certain of the books now used in the public schools of the state and let the contract to the lowest bidder. It is further specified that these books shall be sold to the school children of Georgia at cost.

INVESTMENT BILL DEFEATED.

The bill of Senator McNeil, which specified the nature and amount of investments that could be made by state insurance companies, thus taking that power from the hands of the insurance commissioner, was killed in the house by a large vote. A move to reconsider was lost by an even larger majority.

The important vital statistics bill of Senator Elkins, is held over until the next session. It never came up for a third reading and accordingly failed to get a chance at passage. Sentiment in both houses is favorable to the measure and even at this time there is every indication that it will become a law next year.

Senator Anderson's child labor bill was tabled, giving it a new lease on life that it may again be put to a vote. Like measures in the house failed to come up for passage, but the final session of this general assembly may see fit to enact one of them into a law.

The uncertain fate of whether or not free kindergartens should become a part of the public school system of the state was settled after many stormy sessions of the committee on education. The bill favorably reported in the senate the house kills it and vice to die at the hands of the house committee.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR BILL.

Representative Crawford Wheatley's lieutenant governor bill will lay over until next session. It was reported back to the house with the recommendation "do pass" by the committee on amendments to the constitution but never found a place on the calendar. This bill is getting to be a landmark in the legislative halls of Georgia. When it is looked upon with favor by the senate the house kills it and vise versa. The ultimate ending of the present measure is therefore looked forward to with no small amount of speculation.

Other bills that have a chance of coming up again next June are that of Representative Jones, of Coweta, to provide seats for women in factories and workshops; Representative Davidson, of Putnam, to allow prisoners to testify under oath if they so elect, and the white slave act of Representative Kimbrough, of Harris.

All efforts to change the state militia laws at the session just ended came to naught when the bills of Senator McGregor towards that end were tabled in the house. The principal feature of the measure and one that it is understood, meets with the approval of the adjutant general's office, is to have the officials calling for help from the state to first make an affidavit as the ordinary that his force is unable to cope with the situation before troops will be ordered out.

Four more senate bills stopped in the house and may or may not be brought up again next June are that Senator Kea to provide for the ventilation of factories, etc.; a bill by Senator Bush, Foster and Searcy, for a white slave law in Georgia; a bill by Senator Sweat, providing for compulsory education, and a bill by Senator Huie, making punishable the crime of passing worthless checks.

HIXON-SEARCY BILL.

The now famous Hixon-Searcy Webb bill, that created a sensation in the house when Representative Kidd, of Baker, charged the temperance committee with usurpation of power for not reporting on the measure one way or the other, is in the hands of a *subcommittee appointed to investigate in*to the United States supreme court decision on the constitutionality of the Webb law and report to the main committee next year.

It is probable that one of the first acts of the next session will be to reconsider the two administration bills of Speaker Burwell, providing that out of the ad-valorem tax of five mills, two and a half mills be set aside for the general school fund and one and a half mills for pensions.

Both failed to get the necessary two-thirds vote of the house and the notice for a reconsideration given by Mr. Fullbright, of Burke, was carried.

Such is a brief history of what the general assembly of 1913 did and did not do.

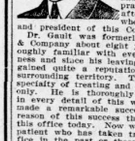
Important Change



We beg to call your attention to the fact that the J. T. Gault Chemical Company has now purchased the entire office, practice, equipment, instruments and good will of the Dr. Hathaway & Company office in this city and in the future the work will be looked after by Dr. J. T. Gault, assisted by a physician in charge, and president of this Company.

Dr. Gault was formerly with Dr. Hathaway & Company about eight years ago and is thoroughly familiar with every detail of the business and since his leaving this company he has gained quite a reputation in Atlanta and the surrounding territory. The doctor has made a specialty of treating and curing diseases of men only. He is thoroughly equipped and posted in every detail of this work and has certainly made a remarkable success and it is for the reason of this success that he is in charge of this office today. Now we wish to assure every patient who has taken treatment from this office in the past or those who may take treatment in the future that they will receive the very best of treatment and courteous attention, while we believe that the office of Dr. Hathaway & Company has been conducted in a straightforward manner for the past twenty-five years, yet we have made a few very many changes and additions in the methods of treatment and have added many new equipments which will facilitate our handling all patients by the most thorough and up-to-date methods. We doubt if there is any other office in the south that has enjoyed as wide a reputation or that has treated as many patients as Dr. Hathaway & Company's office has, and yet we find it is true that a great many patients have been displeased or dissatisfied with the treatment when they came to the office they could not find Dr. Hathaway and we feel that this has been one of the great drawbacks to the office, for it is true that Dr. Hathaway did not give but very little of his personal attention to the office, but depended largely upon his associates and assistant to conduct the actual practice and correspondence, but to those who come to this office in the future they can rest assured of being seen and examined by Dr. J. T. Gault personally and all correspondence will be conducted personally by Dr. Gault.

We will use our utmost endeavor in every way to give all patients entire satisfaction. Office hours 9 to 1 and 2 to 5. Sundays, 10 to 12. Suite 32-33-34 Inman Building, 22½ South Broad St., Atlanta, Ga.—(Advt.)

ATLANTA IS TO HAVE NEW MEDICAL COLLEGE

Local Physicians to Open Branch of Southwestern University on Luckie Street

That a new medical college for Atlanta will be opened this fall was definitely determined at a meeting of prominent local physicians held in the assembly hall of the Ansley hotel yesterday afternoon.

This new institution will become a branch of the Southeastern university system, and will open for the beginning of the fall term on September 25.

The building on Luckie street formerly occupied by the Baptist Tabernacle has been secured as a temporary location and is being remodeled and will be fully equipped for the conduct of a high-grade medical college. This building, it is stated, has an abundance of floor space, and will furnish ample room for lecture rooms, laboratories, dissecting room, amphitheater and hospital attachment.

It is understood that the management of the Southeastern university has contemplated for several years organizing a medical department which would prove a credit to the university, to Atlanta and the south.

Neither the faculty nor the board of trustees has been completed, but among the physicians who will occupy positions on the faculty are Dr. Charles Gould, Dr. Baxter Moore, Dr. W. E. Quillian, Dr. C. A. Rhodes, Dr. Hugh M. Lokey, Dr. George Mizell, Dr. J. O. Kinard, Dr. James N. Brawner, Dr. G. F. Spearman, Dr. Garnett W. Quillian, Dr. Walpole Brewer, Dr. W. T. Jones, Dr. George Murray, Dr. O. H. Matthews, Dr. Cosby Swanson, Mr. Martin, of the Hood's Pharmacy school, and others.

The board of trustees is composed of Judge Beverly D. Evans, Hon. Thomas W. Hardwick, Hon. James L. Mason, Hon. H. A. Etheridge, Judge R. B. Bissel, Mr. W. P. Anderson, Rev. J. A. Beltz and others to be elected.

The faculty committee, in a statement to the public concerning the purpose of the institution, says: "It is the plan of this institution to qualify within a short time for class A, according to the standards fixed by the council on medical education of the American Medical association, so that students entering the first year class this fall will at the expiration of their four-year course receive a diploma from a class A school and be entitled to practice medicine anywhere in the world."

It is understood that the catalogue of this institution will be issued from the press in a few days.

ATTORNEY TOLD RECORDER HE WASN'T ATTENTIVE

William A. Smith Stops Questioning Witness to Call Recorder to Task

The case in the recorder's court against Mrs. B. E. Carroll, who operates a boarding house at 15 Houston and 104 Ivy street, was dismissed by Recorder Pro Tem W. H. Preston Saturday afternoon after a lively trial.

Mrs. Carroll, who was charged with operating a boarding house without a license, was defended by Attorney William M. Smith, who charged that Recorder Preston did not pay attention to the case, which he was to decide.

Judge Preston was talking to license Inspector Hayes while Sergeant Barfield was being cross-examined by the attorney.

The attorney noticed that the court was whispering to the inspector. The lawyer stopped his questions and there was silence for probably a minute, when the court asked the reason.

"Your honor has not been paying attention," said Smith, "and now I will proceed to go over all of this testimony again."

Judge Preston declared that he was familiar with the points about which the attorney had been asking, but allowed him to go over the testimony again.

Judge Crisp has had the Cordele postmastership under consideration for several days.

A number of prominent citizens were applicants for the office, and the contest has been spirited from the first. The congressman weighed carefully the indorsements of each applicant and finally decided upon Dr. McArthur.

E. G. WHITEHEAD CHARGED WITH MISTREATING FAMILY

Former Athens Councilman Arrested on Neighbors' Complaint

E. G. Whitehead, of 263 Crew street, said to be a former city councilman of Athens, Ga., was arrested by the police Saturday night on a charge of disorderly conduct. Abusing his wife and two sons, aged five and eight years, is the specific offense of which he is accused.

According to Assistant Chief Jett, several neighbors called upon him Saturday afternoon and declared that Whitehead had mistreated his family. They said that Mrs. Whitehead had taken the abuse on several occasions without reporting it to the police. Finally several decided to place the matter before the police in a body and when they consulted with the assistant police head he advised them to notify him if another disturbance occurred. Saturday night the neighbors called him over the telphone and told him that Whitehead was again creating a disturbance. Officers were sent to arrest him.

At the police station Whitehead said that Saturday was his thiry-sixth birthday and that this was the first time he had been arrested.

A Correction

Mrs. L. P. Ellison, who gives her address as 11 Hull street, declared Saturday night that Miss Mary Brown, who contradicted a published story about Mrs. L. P. Gray, of 12 Hull street, does not live at 11 Hull street, as stated in Saturday's Journal. Mrs. Ellison asserts that she does not know of a Miss Mary Brown and that she certainly does not live at the address she gave.

OGLETHORPE UNIVERSITY NEARS ITS REFOUNDING

$300,000 Already Subscribed to Million-Dollar College to Be Located Here

The people of Georgia and Presbyterians throughout the south generally will be interested in the progress that has been and is being made toward refounding Oglethorpe university in this city. It will be recalled that this institution which was practically destroyed by the civil war, was the first denominational college south of the Virginia line. Among its long list of alumni it numbered Sidney Lanier, the greatest of southern born poets.

Toward refounding this institution there is being formed a board of founders or directors who will control the institution directly and through the committees which they will appoint consisting of some two hundred men, each of whom represents a gift of $1,000 or more to the institution. Seventy of these men are from the city of Atlanta alone, each one of whom is giving $1,000 or more to the enterprise. Out of some forty-five churches, all over the south, not one has failed to add a man to the board. On the basis of a million dollar institution, which it is planned to found, the directors have now in sight approximately $300,000.

In addition to this the members of the board in the city of Atlanta have authorized the secretary to announce publicly that sometime during the coming fall a campaign will be undertaken in this city to restore the former subscription of, a quarter million dollars made some years ago to a similar enterprise. When this has been done, Presbyterians all over the south will be called upon to raise the amount needed to complete the fund.

Among the records made during the past months in amounts given, are Columbus, Ga., First church, $6,000; Augusta, Ga., $6,000; Houston, Tex., $6,000; Nashville, Tenn., $5,000.

Negro Houses Burn

The fire department was called upon to combat fires in two houses occupied by negroes in different localities early Saturday night. Coals dropped from a stove in a residence at 162 Cherry street, and started a blaze which totally destroyed the building, valued at $800. Another fire consumed the roof and upper portion of a house at 18 Rawson street, entailing a loss of about $200.

TWO HURT WHEN AUTO JAMS BETWEEN CARS

Women in Machine Which Was Struck by Highland Avenue-Druid Hills Car

Caught between two trolley cars at the corner of Highland avenue and Ponce de Leon avenue just before 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, an automobile was wrecked and at least two of its occupants were injured slightly by broken glass from the windshield. In the car at the time were two men and two women, the women being seated in the tonneau.

The accident happened when the automobile, going out Ponce de Leon avenue, was caught in front by a trolley car on the Ponce de Leon-Druid Hills line and in the rear by a trolley car of the Highland avenue line.

The names of the occupants could not be learned.

Particulars concerning the accident were not obtainable, further than that none of the occupants was hurt seriously. No information concerning the matter could be obtained from the Georgia Railway and Power company an hour after the accident happened.

Deliberate Selection In Loose Diamonds

Our diamond rooms are especially arranged for the secluded and comfortable privacy of our customers, and to afford quiet and careful selection.

It is our desire to have our patrons know all that any expert can tell about a diamond, and we, therefore, display diamonds loose (unmounted), the only way in which any diamond expert would consider a purchase.

Diamonds come from the "cutters" in "papers" containing many carats of stones of wide variety of color, degree of perfectness and class. Every diamond we handle we buy direct from the cutters in papers aggregating many thousand dollars.

Our President assorts and classes these papers into grades and values, and they are gone over and over with unusual care until every value is absolutely correct.

This is not possible with the jeweler, both because it requires years of experience and an expert, and also a large amount of capital in our one specialty.

After selection, we mount our diamonds in any variety of elegant design that our customers could desire, using care that only the most perfect work is delivered.

The certainty of knowing what grade and value you are getting in any purchase has all to do with contented possession, and our price, grade and weight are always marked in plain figures.

Our one, plain figure price, from which we never vary, necessitates that we be sure that our prices are as low as the same diamonds can be bought for anywhere in the world.

"Our Diamond Book," Set No. 5, explains how our diamonds have a guaranteed cash return value, also exchanged at full price, and purchased on partial payments, by good notes running over as much as ten months.

BURWELL AND ANDERSON NAME JOINT COMMITTEES

House and Senate Heads Decide on Who Shall Make Ad Interim Investigations

William H. Burwell, speaker of the house of representatives, and Randolph Anderson, president of the senate, yesterday afternoon named two of their ad interim legislative committees and selected the chairmen and some members of another. This last will be completed Monday.

The committees named are in accordance with the action of the house and senate passing resolutions giving three important matters this direction; one to investigate the prices of school books in Georgia as compared with other places, one to make recommendations for the re-leasing of the Western and Atlantic railroad and the other to make a report to the next session of the legislature looking toward a better method of judicial procedure.

On the school books committee are Representatives C. R. McCrory, of Schley, chairman; Herman C. Shumtrine, of Chatham, and W. J. Nunnally, of Floyd, from the house. Mr. McCrory, who is the father of the resolution calling for the investigation, is a prominent lawyer of Ellaville and was active in getting his measure through the house. He believes that school books can be procured much cheaper than the price now being paid for them and for that reason succeeded in having the investigation of comparative prices ordered. The resolution provides that, should the committee find that school books may be bought cheaper it is in their power to abrogate the five year contract with the publishers within six month's notice.

Mr. Shumtrine is a well known Savannah druggist and is a member of the board of education in his city. The third member from the house, Judge Nunnally, of Rome, was formerly judge of the city court of his home.

SENATE APPOINTMENTS.

Mr. Anderson is not yet certain of his committee to serve with that from the house. Senator B. S. Miller, of the Seventeenth, will be one and Senator John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, has been requested to complete the committee but up to late last night he had not replied to a telegram from Mr. Anderson asking him to serve. Judge Allen is a former member of both the house and senate and Mr. Miller a former senator. Aside from the five members of this committee from the legislature there shall be appointed seven members from the state board of education.

Representative Henry J. Fullbright, of Burke, heads the house committee on judicial procedure which is composed of Messrs. H. W. Hopkins, of Thomas, and N. F. Culpepper, of Meriwether. It will be the duty of these three to recommend improvements in court procedure and present their findings to the legislature when it convenes next June. Mr. Fullbright, the chairman, hails from Waynesboro, where he is a practicing lawyer. He is a former member of the house and considered one of the strongest men in the present general assembly. Judge Hopkins, of Thomasville, like the gentlemen from Floyd, is an ex-Judge and was formerly a member of the house senate. Mr. Culpepper was formerly solicitor of the city court of Greenville.

From the senate, President Anderson has appointed Senators W. H. Elkins, of the Fifteenth, and M. D. Irwin, of the Thirty-fourth. Both are well known lawyers, the former having served as solicitor of the city court of Fitzgerald.

W. AND A. COMMISSION.

The Western and Atlantic commission is yet incomplete on the part of the three members from the house while Mr. Anderson has named his three, Senators W. D. McNeil, of the Twenty-second; Grant D. Perry, of the Twenty-eighth, and M. C. Tarver, of the Forty-third. Mr. McNeil is a criminal lawyer of Macon who has made a great success of a large practice. Mr. Perry farms at Madison and Mr. Tarver, the third member, is a lawyer, having at one time served as city attorney of Dalton. He is also a former member of the house.

Speaker Burwell has decided on Representative Barry Wright, of Floyd, author of the resolution, as chairman of the Western and Atlantic committee and Representative R. R. Akin, of Glynn, as one of the members. Mr. Wright is one of the strongest members in the lower assembly. His home is in Rome, where he heads the Cherokee Insurance company. Mr. Akin is an extensive naval stores operator of Brunswick and heads the important ways and means committee of the house.

Governor John M. Slaton is to add some appointments to these committees, but has not yet made his decision. In fact he has as yet only signified one of the resolutions providing for these commissions—that on judicial procedure.

Summary of Frank Evidence at End of the Third Week

The state has sought to prove that when Frank went home to eat lunch on the day of the tragedy he left immediately without eating, but the defense produces witnesses who swear that Frank remained in his office at least forty minutes at that time.

The state has sought to prove that the accused was very nervous on the day following the tragedy, and that has been admitted by the defense; but the defense has put up witnesses who swear that Frank was not nervous on the night or the tragedy and did not become so until he was informed by the detectives that a girl had been murdered in his place of business.

Attack Is General

In every detail, no matter how minute, the defense has attacked the state's case against Leo M. Frank. No particular has been considered too small to escape the efforts of Attorneys Arnold and Rosser to raise a reasonable doubt against it if they could; and no particular has been too small for Solicitor Dorsey and his assistant, Attorney Hooper, to permit an attack upon it to go unchallenged and unresisted. From one angle, then another, the defense aimed its bombardment; and at one angle, then another, state's attorneys have striven to fend off any damage to their case, impugning a witness when they could, striving to ridicule him or her, endeavoring to show interest, excessive zeal for Frank, or other controlling motive, and have been on guard at every moment against the determined onslaughts of the attorneys for the accused.

Week's Developments

Monday the defense continued its attack on the testimony given by Dr. H. F. Harris that Mary Phagan died within a half or three-quarters of an hour after eating her midday meal and that there were evidences of violence immediately preceding death. Dr. Leroy Childs began the attack on the evidence of the secretary of the state board of health on Saturday week, and on Monday Drs. George Bachman, Willis Westmoreland, T. J. Hancock and J. C. Olmstead testified and were followed and substantiated on Wednesday by Dr. W. S. Kendrick.

In nearly every instance where a physician testified for the defense the testimony, or parts of it, as given by Dr. Harris was refuted. When the evidence given by the physicians for the defense is boiled down to an essence, it is to the effect that in their opinion the statements by Dr. Harris could, strictly speaking, be true, but that the girl died within the time limit set by him is but a mere guess, and that his testimony that violence preceded death is a second guess.

The jury heard medical testimony that it would be impossible for any physician to determine conclusively from the stomach of any patient and the state the correct length of time the food had remained in the stomach. To substantiate this several jars of partially digested cabbage taken from the stomachs of several patients were exhibited to the jury with the statement of a physician that no one could tell exactly how long any of the exhibits had remained in the stomach.

Was Violence Committed?

Some of the evidence given by these physicians termed Dr. Harris' statements that violence had been committed on the girls shortly before death as a mere guess. It was testified that the distended condition of the blood vessels might have resulted from numerous causes.

It will be recalled that Dr. Harris testified that he examined parts of the body nine days after death, and that Dr. J. W. Hurt, the coroner's physician, testified he had made an examination prior to that by Dr. Harris. The jury was told that the first examination might have caused the conditions noted under microscope by the state board of health's secretary. As to the distended condition of the blood vessels, it was testified that the injection of the embalming fluid and several other causes might have produced the same conditions.

That Frank's work on the financial sheet, which it has been testified required expert work running into delicate decimals, could not have been done by any one committing such a crime as is charged to the factory superintendent immediately following the commitment, was what the defense hoped to show by the testimony of expert accountants who were put on the stand. Joel Hunter, the last witness to testify Monday, gave his opinion that the work done on the sheet made out on April 26 was the work of Leo M. Frank, and in substance was correct.

Dalton's Story Eliminated

Twenty-two witnesses took the stand on Tuesday and six of them gave testimony impeaching C. B. Dalton, one of the witnesses put up by the state to corroborate Jim Conley in his testimony that he frequently acted as lookout for Frank on Saturdays and holidays when women visited the superintendent at the factory. Dalton was pictured by the witnesses as anything but a truthful witness. His past was exposed in the court and when he himself was recalled to the stand admitted portions of the testimony derogatory to his character.

These witnesses against Dalton were brought to Atlanta by the defense from places where Dalton had formerly lived. They told of his indictment by a grand jury, of a conviction for a certain crime and stated that they would not believe him under oath. Dalton, it will be remembered, was expected to prove a strong witness for the state in its corroboration of the negro's story. He admitted visiting the factory after work hours with certain women employes of the place and stated to the jury that Frank frequently had women visitors at the time he made his visits. His impeachment by witnesses from his former homes, eliminates, to a certain extent, his testimony as material.

The defense scored again on Tuesday when Miss Magnolia Kennedy was on the stand. Her testimony refuted that given by Helen Ferguson that she asked for Mary Phagan's pay on the Friday before the murder and it was refused. Miss Kennedy works in the pencil factory and declares that she knew both Mary Phagan and Helen Ferguson. She told the jury that she followed the Ferguson girl to the pay window and that nothing was said about Mary Phagan's pay. She also declares that she went out of the factory immediately behind Helen Ferguson and both walked on down the street in the same direction.

Cook Denies Affidavit

Minola McKnight, the negro cook in the Selig home where Mr. and Mrs. Frank live, was also on the stand Tuesday and denied the truthfulness of her affidavit made to the police concerning the actions of the accused immediately following the tragedy. The negress declared that she had been forced to sign the paper and that most of the allegations were false.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, the father- and mother-in-law of the accused, took the stand in defense of the factory superintendent on Tuesday and corroborated the statement made by Frank to the coroner concerning his moves on the day of the tragedy before and after the hour in which the girl met her death. They denied any knowledge of certain facts mentioned by the Minola McKnight affidavit, reflecting on the behavior of the accused on the Saturday of the tragedy and the Sunday following.

Charles W. Bernhardt and Henry Wood were called to the stand to tell the results of their examinations of the Selig home and explain the blue prints of the home to the jury. Albert McKnight, husband of the Selig cook, stated that he was sitting in the kitchen and saw Frank enter the dining room on the afternoon of the tragedy, go to the sideboard and leave without eating. According to expert testimony it would be impossible for any one sitting in the kitchen at the point where the McKnight negro claims he was sitting to see the parts of the dining room as testified by him.

Character Evidence

On Wednesday the defense put the character of the accused to issue and no sooner had the character evidence started well when the real sensation of the week occurred in the court room. It was Frank's mother, Mrs. Rae Frank, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who startled judge, jury, counsel and spectators by shouting her denunciation of Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey when he asked a question of a character witness reflecting strongly on the character of the defendant.

John Ashley Jones, an insurance man, had been put on by the defense and had just told the court that after investigation, his company had found the character of the accused man to be good. When the solicitor began his cross-examination he asked several questions concerning the investigation made by the insurance company and then began a series of questions, all of which the witness answered in the negative, but nevertheless caused the jury to lean forward and caused the mother of the accused man to give vent to her indignation by shrieking a denial of a certain question before the witness on the stand could answer in the negative.

The solicitor asked the witness if he never heard of Frank's familiarity with little girls around the factory. To this Mrs. Rae Frank shouted: "No, and you haven't either!" Following her outburst she left the room.

The solicitor used the names of several with whom he intimated the factory superintendent had been familiar. He is expected to call them in rebuttal to the character witnesses who have testified for the state.

Can Dorsey Supply Link?

What evidence the solicitor has to use in rebuttal is indicated only by his questions to the witness Jones and by the sudden appearance in Atlanta of the former inmate of the Home of the Good Shepherd, in Cincinnati, in company with the police matron. The only evidence derogatory to this accused's character was given by the negro Jim Conley who charged perversion to the factory superintendent. While the state was having its innings no evidence was given to corroborate this charge because the character of the deefndant had not then been put in issue by the defense. Now that the defense has put up witnesses to prove the accused's good character, the state can put up testimony to prove the contrary.

It is understood that the solicitor will call this girl, who has just returned from Cincinnati, and other witnesses, who will be ready to blast the character of the defendant if they are asked the questions by the defendant's own counsel.

Judge Roan permitted the solicitor to ask defense witnesses questions reflecting on Frank's character Wednesday, and on Thursday refused a request of the accused's counsel to have the questions stricken from the record. The trial judge held that the prosecutor had a right to question character witnesses as to whether they had heard certain things derogatory to the defendant's character.

Frank's Story Corroborated

On Thursday the defense put up witnesses who, by their testimony, accounted for the presence of Frank at almost every hour during the day of the tragedy. The story of his movements as he told it to the coroner immediately after the murder was fully corroborated. He was trailed from his home in the morning to the factory, from his office over to Montag's office and back to the factory; from his office to where he took a car, and from the time he stepped from the car in front of his home until he left again in less than an hour. He was also seen on Whitehall street after getting off the car on his return to the office for his afternoon's work.

The members of the card club whose party was being given at the Selig home on the night of the tragedy took the stand and accounted for his presence that night. The state has proven, and to a certain extent it is admitted by the defense, that Frank was nervous on Sunday after being informed of the murder. The state contends that this was the nervousness of a guilty man, while the defense contends that under the same circumstances most anyone would have been very much agitated.

Those who attended the card party on the night of April 26 declare that Frank was his natural self; that his actions indicated anything but nervousness, and that he sat in the hall and read for at least two hours during their visit to the Selig home. By this testimony the defense hopes to show that Frank had no knowledge of the crime until informed by the detectives, and consequently was not nervous until after he learned that a little girl had been slain in the factory of which he was superintendent.

Court Records Broken

When Thursday morning's session of the trial opened all court records for Georgia had been broken. The testimony through Wednesday night amounted to 600,000 words, enough matter to fill 500 columns of newspaper print.

One feature of the past week's developments which stands out significantly is the loyalty of the defendant's classmates from Cornell. Several of the young men who attended college with him came from their homes in the east to testify to his good character. With them came two professors of the university.

Friday was taken up with testimony by Atlantians bearing on the good character of Frank and by evidence given by factory employes against the character of Jim Conley, the negro who accuses Frank of the crime and who admits having disposed of the body after the girl's death.

Members of Conley's own race delcared that they would not believe the negro on oath, that he could not be trusted and that from what they knew little dependence could be put in what he said. White citizens who knew both the negro and Frank told the jury that the negro was unreliable and that from what they knew Frank's character was good.

Forty-one witnesses, many of them prominent Atlantians, bore testimony to Frank's good character on Friday and were followed on the stand by the accused's own mother, Mrs. Rae Frank, of Brooklyn, occupied the chair Friday afternoon and resumed it Saturday. Nothing of great interest was developed by her testimony except that portion referring to the letter which her son wrote on the day of the tragedy and mailed to his uncle in New York. This letter was introduced as evidence. Its contents referred to Memorial day and to grand opera in Atlanta.

Saturday's Testimony

Fifteen girls who work or have worked in the pencil factory were on the witness stand Saturday and of the number, only one cast a slur on the character of the factory superintendent. Miss Irene Jackson, the daughter of Policeman A. W. Jackson, who has quit the employ of the factory since the murder, while under cross-examination declared that Frank had looked into the dressing room of the factory while some of the girls were in only half attire.

Solicitor Dorsey made an attack on the factory superintendent Saturday while W. D. McWorth, one of the agency's men was testifying concerning a bloody bludgeon found in the factory. The solicitor charged that the Pinkertons had not worked in harmony with the city police and had withheld evidence from them. Harllee Branch, a journal reporter, was the last witness on the stand and court adjourned while he was under the solicitor's examination. He told of Jim Conley's re-enactment of the tragedy in the presence of detectives and newspaper men.

Little Beulah Jones Dead

Beulah, the 19-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Jones, died of pneumonia in a private sanitarium Saturday evening at 7 o'clock. The child had been sick several days. The remains were taken to Harry Poole's undertaking parlors. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

PRISON REFORM ACTS PASSED BY ASSEMBLY

Legislature Enacted Most Important Prison Measures Since Convict Lease Law

Now that the legislature is over and the bills which passed have been submitted to Governor John M. Slaton for signature, it can be figured out definitely just how much was accomplished in the way of reforming Georgia's criminal court procedure and criminal laws by this year's legislature.

The bill which will have the most widespread effect is the one providing for adult probation and suspension of sentence in misdemeanor cases. This will become effective in every criminal court in Georgia as soon as Governor Slaton signs the bill. The operations of this new law are exceedingly simple and are thoroughly safeguarded to prevent the habitual criminal from benefiting from them. They provide that a first offenses and other cases where there are sufficiently mitigating circumstances, the adult convicted of a misdemeanor may be freed on probation to report back to the court or probation officer at stated times. This means, for instance, that a man convicted of deserting his wife can be sentenced, and instead of being put on chaingang work, where he will do no good to his family, can be sent back home and forced to work for his family under court supervision. This measure received the endorsement of practically every criminal court judge in the state and of the prison board. It applies not to superior courts alone, but to all courts in which misdemeanor cases are tried.

The second reform measure which passed is the bill establishing a home for wayward girls in Georgia, and providing $20,000 toward its establishment. At present Georgia has no reformatory to which it may send wayward girls, and has the alternative of either sending them to the prison farm with hardened offenders, or having them sent to institutions outside the state. Under this new law, Governor Slaton will appoint a board of five members, of whom two will be women, to put the work of establishing this home immediately under way. One of their first duties will be to select a site. The bill provides that if no site is given, the home shall be established at Milledgeville, but already two or three tentative offers of a site have been made, and there is no likelihood of it being necessary to put the new home at Milledgeville, a location which the friends of the measure believe would be ill-advised.

These are the only two measures which actually passed at this session, but one other notable thing was accomplished. A bill was framed providing for indeterminate sentence. It received the formal endorsement of the prison board, was passed by the senate and recommended for passage by the house committee. It has no opposition and is in such shape that it will almost certainly be one of the first general measures to pass at the 1914 session.

The prison association of Georgia, which framed the original measures, and the association's friends in the legislature, were largely responsible for the enactment of these measures.

While accomplishing a great work in straightening out the financial affairs of the state, the legislature found time to enact the most important reforms in dealing with prisoners that Georgia has seen since the abolition of the convict lease system.

WHEN PARENTS CLOSED DOOR TO HER SWEETHEART, ATLANTA MISS ELOPED

Charles C. McGinnis and the girl who eloped with him, Miss Margaret Rice, as they appeared Saturday afternoon just before boarding the train for Augusta to be married.

Cupid and a determined young man conspired to defeat parental authority yesterday afternoon when pretty Miss Grace Margaret Rice and Charles C. McGinnis hastily boarded the 3:25 train for Augusta.

They were running away to be married, the elopement being the climax of five years of devotion. The bride's mother, Mrs. S. Rice, of 175 East Pine street, objected strenuously to the match; and for the past two years had forbidden her daughter to even speak to the young man.

Tears and pleadings were of no avail, so the little lady stopped both, and seemed to acquiesce in her mother's decision. But she continued to meet her sweetheart, and in July definitely decided to elope. It took her until Friday to really make up her mind, though finally she consented.

When she kissed her mother goodby Saturday morning, she told her that she was going to spend Saturday night with her sister and not to worry. This morning, however, the mother, will receive a telegram from Augusta saying, "We are married now."

The young couple were met in Augusta by Mr. McGinnis's sister, Mrs. R. C. Copeland and her husband and went straight to the home of Dr. Howard T. Cree to be married.

When the pretty little bride-to-be boarded the train Saturday afternoon she wept at leaving her mother under a deception, but her last words were "Don't tell her where I've gone until tomorrow."

She is 20 years old and pretty and petite with curly blonde hair and very blue eyes. Mr. McGinnis is 27 years old.

They will travel for six months and then "maybe if mother forgives" her, she will come back here to live.

CO-OPERATION NEEDED TO END SMOKE NUISANCE

Chairman Harwell, of Smoke Board, Tells Necessary Steps for Abatement

That apartment house owners and others may fail to co-operate with the smoke board through lack of understanding of the board's attitude toward the smoke nuisance is the fear of Chairman R. M. Harwell.

"We are experiencing some difficulty with apartment owners about the regulation of their furnaces," said Mr. Harwell Saturday. "We let the matter go by last winter, but this year me must see that smoky furnaces receive attention. We wish to give the owners every opportunity to remedy conditions and all possible assistance, and we hope the owners will co-operate with us.

"The general policy of the smoke and gas commission is to carry on a campaign of education backed up by strong enforcement of the law. We believe this campaign of education and co-operation between this department and plant owners is the most practicable way for the ultimate solution of the problem presented by the smoke nuisance in this city.

"In general, we believe the best way to handle the smoke problem is to have a strong backing of business men and to create a strong public sentiment in favor of the smoke abatement together with the co-operation of all plant owners. If the business and commercial interests do not support the smoke abatement campaign, but little can be done, because the business interests are the ones who must spend the money and make the effort necessary to get the desired results.

"It is impracticable to enforce the smoke ordinance all over the city immediately. That is, it is not feasible to sue every one in town every day they violate the smoke ordinance. We therefore give the plant owner an opportunity to fix up his plant in the proper manner to stop the smoke.

"The popular conception of smoke consumer is some sort of a device that can be attached to hand-fired boilers to consume or eliminate all smoke. There is no device or apparatus that can be applied indiscriminately to all furnaces as a curecall for smoke.

"The point is often brought up about certain factories being unable to run their plants without making smoke. In general, all steam plants burning coal as a fuel can run without making smoke if carefully handled after being properly designed and built. If they are not properly designed and built the necessary changes can easily be made without spending a prohibitive sum of money. The requirements of a smokeless plant are correct design of furnace, well laid outbreeching, stacks of sufficient height and area, to give ample draft. Automatic stokers and all hand-fired plants must be operated by very careful men.

"The smoke and gas commission has used its earnest efforts to put at the head of this department an honest, experienced and capable mechanical engineer, and it is our sincere wish that the plant owners will give us their co-operation and support to abate the smoke nuisance."

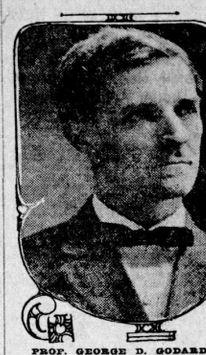
New Official for Georgia Schools



PROF. GEORGE D. GODARD, of Moultrie, who has been chosen by the state board of education for the position of supervisor of Rural Elementary schools.

Additional Supervisor to Have Special Charge of Work Among Negroes

The state department of education announces the appointment of Prof. George D. Goddard, for eight years superintendent of the public schools of Moultrie, Ga., to be supervisor of rural elementary schools in Georgia.

While this additional supervisor will aid Miss Parrish, Mr. Duggan and Mr. Land, the regular supervisors, whenever possible, the funds are provided by the general education board to encourage the industrial side of education in the negro schools of the state.

It is believed that the old form of education among the negroes has not been as effective as it should have been, that it has failed in some measure to reach the real need of the colored race, and that emphasis upon the industrial teaching will result in a more sane, common sense and reasonable training for the practical work of the negro.

The state department is pleased at the prospect for good in the new work which has been made possible by the generosity of the general education board. The three supervisors created by the state have not been able to help much with instruction for the colored teachers and this appointment will supplement effectively their labors. Stress will be laid upon domestic science, cooking, sewing, gardening, agriculture and hygiene. When this is done home life will become more of a reality to the negro and he will be a more useful and valuable citizen and better trained for the life he must live.

In several other southern states, notably in Virginia, this work has been most valuable and it is believed it will be equally so in Georgia. This state, it is said, has suffered in not providing the negro with the sort of education which will make him better fitted for his work.

Prof. Godard has already begun his work and from his past record and success as an educator of energy and ability it is confidently believed that in this new field he will be of marked service to the state.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

Spread to Back. Could Hardly Sleep for Burning and Itching. Caused Disfigurement. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Entirely Cured.

214 Brevard St., Tampa, Fla. — "Some three years ago I commenced to suffer from a rash on my face and back. Before the pimples came on my face there were a lot of blackheads. It looked as if the blackheads turned into pimples because after a little while all of them were gone and my face was covered with pimples. They were small at first but gradually grew and right at the end of each pimple it was all white. I carelessly picked them with my finger nails, which made them spread, and I soon discovered them on my back. My back was covered with pimples and my face the same way. At night I could hardly sleep on account of the burning and itching sensation they caused. I felt like a lot of small-sized crabs biting at my back. I did not like to go out because the pimples caused disfigurement.

"Seeing the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in one of the magazines I sent for a sample. At night I would put the Cuticura Ointment on my face and back and I was pleased with the result. I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and I am glad to be able to say that I am entirely cured of pimples." (Signed) Jno. O. Darlington, Jan. 25, 1913.

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

CITY AND STEEL FIRM CANNOT COME TO TERMS

The question of a right-of-way for the big sewer which the Atlanta Steel company has demanded that the city lay near its plant and which brought on a suit for $50,000 against the city, came up before the sewer committee Saturday morning. As the conditions on which the Steel company agreed to give the right-of-way were not satisfactory to the committee, it was agreed to appoint an agent, W. A. Hansell, Jr., to negotiate other terms.

The steel company agreed to give the right-of-way provided that it be allowed the privilege of connecting up with the sewer, that the city rebuild the company's pond, when the work of laying the pipes is finished and that the company be allowed to deflect the city's water through valves at an intersection in the pipes.

The last clause was the one to which the committee objected. Mayor Woodward, who met with the committee, said that the agreement was a one-sided affair all in favor of the company; that such an agreement would save the company $1,200 or $1,500 a year on water, and that he was not in favor of them getting a drop unless they paid for it.

"They've forced us to lay this sewer," said J. J. Greer, "and I am not in favor of their holding us up. We may want to cistern that water later, clarify it, and return to the reservoir."

It was decided that if the company would agree to an amendment whereby the city reserves to itself the right of stopping the water at any time it sees fit the conditions would be accepted.

If the steel company will not agree to the amendment, the right-of-way will be secured by condemning the property.

"That's what I am in favor of anyway," said Mayor Woodward. "It will be cheaper in the end."

DAMAGED COTTON OF NEWTON COUNTY SHOWN

Visual evidence of the great damage done to cotton in Newton county by a hail storm about two weeks ago was brought to The Journal office Saturday afternoon by A. B. Coogler, of Riverdale, Ga., passing through Atlanta on his way home from a visit in the ravaged section.

Mr. Coogler exhibited three stalks from which the leafage was stripped almost completely and on which one boll appeared. Two of the stalks were bare of any boll at all.

"There are some 2,000 acres in one district that show cotton damaged just like these stalks," said Mr. Coogler. "The sight is almost pitiful. The farmers that were hit hardest by the storm were named to me as Messrs. Cooper, Almand, Hitchcock, Crawley and Walker."

COLORED PEOPLE WILL CELEBRATE LABOR DAY

The colored pepie of the city will celebrate Labor day with races at the Speedway. The events of the day will be under the auspices of Big Bethel church, and plans are being made for motorcycle, automobile, bicycle and foot races.

Special provision will be made for the white people who may care to attend, and ample police protection will insure good conduct on the grounds.

The proceeds will go to the completion of the Big Bethel church.

Cotton Market Active and Higher On Covering and Bull Support

Active Months Reached the Highest Levels Touched Since the Rally Following the Publication of Government Report

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The cotton market was active today and prices advanced further on a renewal of yesterday's buying movement with active months reaching the highest levels touched since the rally following the publication of the last government report. Realizing for over the week-end or on private reports of more rain in Oklahoma than suggested by the official weather map, caused reactions after an early advance, but offerings were well enough taken to give the market a steady undertone, and last prices were 3 to 5 points net higher.

Higher Liverpool cables, encouraging reviews of the domestic dry goods situation and the more bullish sentiment created by yesterday's advance resulted in an opening improvement of from 3 to 6 points. There were a lot of overnight buying orders around the ring and prices soon sold 1 to 11 points net higher, on bull support combined with a continued active demand from shorts. Offerings became heavier around 11.25 for October, or about 32 points up from the recent low level, and the market later eased off several points from the best, with sellers encouraged by an idea that the short interest has been considerably reduced, and lower temperatures might be allowed by improved crop accounts from Oklahoma. The forecast bell forecast, however, was for generally fair weather tonight and tomorrow and this view of the situation was in line with reports of local map readers who said they saw no promise of any immediate change in the unsettled conditions.

Private cables from Liverpool reported sentiment more bullish there with the trade calling moderately, and with professional operators short of the market. Wall street, and houses with southern connections were heavy sellers on the advance here and it seemed to be the general feeling that the bulk of the demand represented covering by shorts, who are supposed to have been rendered uneasy by continued dry weather in the southwest, fears of an overstock market, and the fact that southern feeling has not yet shown itself on any important scale.

WEEKLY COTTON REVIEW.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 16.—Crop deterioration reports from the southwest failed to stimulate any general support in the cotton market during the latter week, and a moderate reaction set in today, sentiment, as expressed in local circles, reminded of a bearish saying, based on the reported procrastination of spinners, unfavorable foreign trade advices, and the prospect of early crop movement. Continued dry weather in Texas and Oklahoma and a firm old crop situation failed to attract support, however, and although price made new low ground on Thursday, the market has shown a better undertone less than actual weakness, with scattering shorts showing a disposition to cover on relatively small profits. A private report, published today, confirmed daily advices of deterioration in the southwest, making the average condition on the crop 78.4 against 81.3 two weeks ago, and combined with continued drouth, as well as an apprehension that a large short interest has been accumulated, caused a sharp rally during today's trading. There seemed to be less trade demand for bull support on this advance than covering of shorts, however, and it appears that in spite of adverse weather in the western belt, and comparatively low condition, the crop operator is still optimistic regarding supplies, and is awaiting the appreciation of a very large crop east of the river. Heavy Profit Taking by Bulls Checked the Advance in Corn

Much of the Selling Was Influenced by Forecast of Lower Temperatures and Possible Showers Monday

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Heavy profit-taking on the part of leading holders was a check today on an early decided advance in the price of corn. Closing prices were steady at a range extending from 1-4 to 3-8c off to a gain of 1-2c compared with the previous night. Wheat finished 1-8@1-4c to 3-8c net lower, oats unchanged to a shade off, and provisions unchanged to 5@7 1-2c lower.

Considering the activity with which leaders turned corn options into actual money, the market held up remarkably well. Much of the selling was influenced by a forecast of lower temperatures and possible showers over different parts of the corn belt before dark. Reports were rather in Oklahoma and Kansas, but the effect on prices appeared small, the moisture in both states being regarded as too late to save the corn crop.

New high prices, records for the season, now almost a daily feature, registered another slight upward revision. September went above the 75-cent level and December almost grazed 70c. As against the bullish claims prominent speculators here, it was alleged that the southwest and the country district in general were stocking to the hilt side of the market and confident of still higher prices being reached. Best quotations today, however, were reached early in the session and there was no important rally from a setback that took place almost at once.

Today is the date the winter crop had a bullish influence on the wheat market. There also were Canadian advices of a little late harvest and of considerable storm damage. In addition, unfavorable weather was reported as spoiling in Europe. Traders took what comfort they could through prospects of a large increase in the visible supply. Primary receipts were 1,208,000 bushels; shipments, 1,409,000 bushels. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equaled 826,000 bushels.

Lower unloadings and an advance wiped out most of an early rise in oats. Sales from the interior were comparatively light.

Provisions ascended on account of purchasing believed to be for European account. Local foreign buying was chiefly in lard.

'AUNT LUCINDA" SAVED NICKEL BY PAYING TAXES

DALTON, Ga. Aug. 16.—Exactly five cents was the amount saved by "Aunt Lucinda" Dukes an aged negro woman, taking advantage of city council's offer of a 3 per cent discount to those paying taxes prior to August 20. "Aunt Lucinda" was the first to take advantage of the offer. On looking over the books the clerk found her taxes amounted to $1.88. Had she waited until the last of December, when taxes are due, the city treasury would have five cents richer.

PRESENT PRICE MOVEMENT IS ON AN UPWARD SWING

Improvement Started on Tenth of Last Month and Continued Into August

The stock market during July, according to the movement of average prices as compiled by Dow, Jones & Co., showed the greatest net gain up to that time of any month since records her last. The low point for the month for the industrials and railroads was reached on the 9th when the industrials showed an advance of .54 points and the railroads a decline of .50 points from the close of the market on June 30. Only July 14, 15 and 16 once again touched the low price reached on the 9th.

From this low point, the market has shown an advance at the close on each day of 4.45 points for the industrials and 4.90 points for the rails. Since the end of July there has been a business depression, six of which first marked declines as well as the shippers. The commission houses for increased orders and the advice of several loads of mixed cattle ready for shipment tomorrow continues to supply the bulk of the better grades.

COTTON GOSSIP

Times Democrat says: Again the government reported only a very few light showers in the Texas cotton belt, and shorts began to permit to themselves that the drouth has assumed serious proportions. With such admission came a yearning for safety, a desire for compromise and a sharp advance. Dallas reported heavy sales and a good price gain of 50 points a cent. Liverpool's action indicated some uneasiness among foreign operators. The offering of Egyptcotton promised continued fair weather in the west. Under the circumstances a higher market was logical enough. New crop cotton has begun to swell the movement a little. Nevertheless, the world's visible supply of American cotton decreased 165,000 bales, to 1,050,000 bales, as against 1,336,000 on the same day last year. Galveston expects to receive 30,000 bales, today, which will compare with 7,000 bales received on August 16, 1911. The Times Democrat will publish, in the editorial columns of its Sunday issue, reports of its correspondents covering the condition of the cotton crop up to and including August 12.

Times Democrat has following from Dallas: Crops have not been injured seriously by dry weather, but there within the next week in most sections of the state to prevent crop damage. Country rains are reported over a large section of Texas. The weather has played a big role in the cotton crop movement in 1911. GEORGIA TOPS ALL STATES IN OUTPUT OF FERTILIZERS

(By RALPH SMITH.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 16.—Georgia is by far the most important state in the production of commercial fertilizers, the value of its product in 1909 representing nearly one-sixth of the total for the country," says a bulletin just issued by William J. Harris, director of the census. The bulletin deals with the manufacture and consumption of fertilizer, and will appeal particularly to the farmers of Georgia and the south.

The bulletin is based upon statistics of the fertilizer industry for 1909. It covers establishments making artificial fertilizers, the products being ordinarily ready for use without being subjected to further treatment. The raw materials used by fertilizer factories include animal, vegetable, and mineral products, while sulphuric and other acids are used extensively in the treatment of basic materials.

A TREMENDOUS INDUSTRY.

The total number of establishments reported as engaged principally in the manufacture of fertilizers in 1909 was 550, with a capital of $121,537,451. The number of person engaged in the industry was 21,950, of whom 13,378 were wage earners. The total value of all products of the 550 establishments amounted to $102,940,910, and the value, $69,621,140, was the value of fertilizers proper, the amount of which was 5,-440,161 tons. The sum of $11,882,815 was paid out for services, of which $7,477,179 was for wages.

In 1859, 47 establishments were regrowth of the industry from census ported as making fertilizers, with 308 wage earners and products valued at $891,344. The growth of the industry from census to census has been continuous and for the most part rapid., the value of products reported for 1909 being nearly 18 times as great as that for 1869. Between 1899 and 1909 the value of products increased 132.8 per cent, the number of wage earners 58.1 per cent., and the amount paid in wages 78.7 per cent. The growth of the industry was greater during the decade than in any other decade except that from 1869 to 1879.

GEORGIA LEADS ALL STATES.

Although reported from 34 states, the industry is largely concentrated in the seven states, the states of the South Atlantic division alone reporting more than half of the total value of products in 1909. In this connection it may be noted that, according to the census of agriculture, much the larger part of the expenditure of farmers for fertilizer is in the south. In 1909 the farmers of the United States reported the expenditure of $114,882,541 for fertilizers, of which $71,752,295, or 62.5 per cent, was spent by the farmers of the south. The farmers of the South Atlantic division alone spent $39,625,-130, or more than half of the total. Most of the expenditure for fertilizers outside of the south was reported from the three northeastern divisions, the country—the New England, Middle Atlantic, and East North Central division.

Georgia is by far the most important state in the production of fertilizers, the value of its product in 1909 representing nearly one-sixth of the total for the country. Maryland ranks second among the states in value of products of the fertilizer industry. Tennessee, one of the important states in this industry, shows the greatest rate of increase in value of products between 1899 and 1909, 675.8 per cent.

In Georgia the increase was 399 per cent, and in Virginia, Alabama, North Carolina, Ohio, Tennessee, Mississippi and Connecticut the rate of increase exceeded 100 per cent. Although the percentage of increase during the decade was less conspicuous for South Carolina, this state advanced from sixth place in value of products in 1904 to third place in 1909.

CHARACTER OF OWNERSHIP.

In 1909, of the total number of establishments reported for the industry 67.1 per cent were under corporate ownership, as compared with 57 per cent in 1904. In 1909 the value of products of these establishments represented 94.3 per cent of the total, and in 1904 90.8 per cent.

The reports show that 1.8 per cent of the establishments manufactured products valued at $1,000,000 or over in 1909, as against 1.5 per cent in 1904. These establishments reported 16.6 per cent of the value of products in 1909 and 15.6 per cent in 1904. By far the greater part of the value of products of the industry, 73.8 per cent, in 1909, and 70.5 per cent, in 1904, was reported by establishments having products valued at $100,000, but less than $1,000,000 each. The average number of wage earners per establishment decreased from thirty-six in 1904 to thirty-three in 1909, but the average value of products per establishment increased from $141,707 to $189,019, and the average value added by manufacture from $43,241 to $62,615.

CLASS OF MATERIALS USED.

As judged by the amounts expended for them, ammoniates, animal and vegetable, were the most important materials, followed by phosphate rock, potash salts, superphosphates, nitrate of soda, ammonium sulphates, sulphuric acid, fish, pyrites and kainit in the order named. The cost of materials aggregated $55,-360,423 in 1909, $28,975,713 in 1904 and $23,454,126 in 1899. Of these respective totals the cost of ammoniates formed 42.4 per cent in 1899, as compared with 34.2 per cent in 1904 and 29 per cent in 1909. The cost of phosphate rock shows only slight proportionate changes; it constituted 15.2 per cent of the total of the specific materials in 1899, 14.6 per cent in 1904 and 15.6 per cent in 1909. The cost of potash salts represented 12.2 per cent 12.4 per cent and 13.2 per cent of the totals for the respective years, and the aggregate cost of sulphuric acid and pyrites and sulphur constituted 13.2 per cent of the total in 1899, 11 per cent in 1904 and 13.2 per cent in 1909.

All fertilizer establishments manufacturing sulphuric acid employed the chamber process, sixteen using the Hoffman intensifier system, eleven the Pratt, nine the Gilchrist, three the Meyer tangential system, and one the Luney. The manufacture, for consumption in their own works, of 1,826,358 tons of acid phosphate was reported by establishments engaged principally in the fertilizer industry, and 12,507 tons were made and consumed by establishments manufacturing fertilizers as subsidiary products.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

MONTGOMERY.

Music lovers in Atlanta will be delighted with the announcement by the management of the Montgomery theater that Miss Anna Von Hoffmann, the talented grand opera soloist, who appeared at that theater some time ago, will return to this city for a limited engagement.

Miss Von Hoffmann won a warm place in the hearts of the patrons of the popular motion picture theater with her selections from grand and light operas, and it is due to her artistic expense and much effort that Mr. Clark, the manager of the Montgomery, has succeeded in booking her for another engagement. This gifted singer will appear in the latest light opera successes and many heavy grand opera numbers. During the afternoons Miss Von Hoffmann will confine herself to the lighter class of music, and in the evenings rendering the more difficult numbers.

SAVOY.

Bruno Lessing and Myra Kelly have given the moving picture public an intimate insight into the Jewish domestic character, but until now there has been none who has done a like service for the motion picture patrons. The immense possibilities of this field of expression has at last been realized in a two-reel feature, "The Heart of a Jewess," to be released at the Savoy Wednesday of this week.

For this production a company that comprised some of the best Jewish actors obtainable in America have been assembled and the scenes depicting the life of the people of New York's east side are the acme of realism. Especially effective are the scenes attended on a Jewish wedding, a glimpse of the emigrants on Ellis Island, the comedy of a scheming "Schadchen" and the selling of a suit of clothes to a greenhorn on Baxter street.

The action is spirited throughout and runs the gamut of the emotions involving tears and laughter, heart throbs and tragedy. Wednesday is the day.

The Vaudette offers a week of features, starting Monday with a two-reel feature, "The Fire Bug," a Keystone and some comedy all the way through, and a Thanhauser drama, "The Spirit of Envy." During the week "The Heritage of Eve," a two-reel Broncho, "Orphans of War," a two-reel K.-B., and "Success," a two-reel Reliance, will be shown.

Lamey and Coombs will continue as usual to furnish the best in character and harmony singing. One of the delights of this theater is the organ recitals, executed with the usual touch of a master, and this in itself is worth many times the price of admission.

"The Three Pecks," at the Alcazar, have made a decided hit during the past week and owing to popular demand have been retained for another week.

LOBBY PROBERS HEAR GRAVE BRIBE CHARGES

Congressman McDermott Accused of Having Accepted $7,500 to Defeat Legislation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The house lobby investigators centered their attention today on the statement of I. H. McMichaels, one time chief page of the house, that Representative James T. McDermott, of Chicago, had received about $7,500 for efforts to defeat a bill affecting local pawn-brokers and "loan sharks." After more than five months' work the committee was not much nearer a definite conclusion about the $7,500 than it was when McMichaels made his first statement.

The former chief of the house pages reiterated today his testimony that McDermott told him he got about $2,000 in the "loan shark" matter, and stuck to his story under severe cross-examination of James S. Easby-Smith, attorney for McDermott. The former Washington pawnbrokers who quit business when this bill became law, gave the committee no definite information to connect McDermott with any such fund or to disclose that the pawnbrokers ever raised any such amount for any purpose.

Abraham Bernstein, one of the brokers, said he contributed to a fund to be used in advancing the arguments of himself and his fellows. He showed a lack of memory on many details concerning the raising of the money and was subjected to a long and sharp fire of direct examination in which every member of the committee who was present took part. Pinned down time after time, however, Bernstein denied that the brokers raised more than $3,500 and swore it was used to pay attorneys to represent them before officials here and in their states.

He was asked to help, he swore, by George D. Horning, another local pawnbroker, who, according to McMichaels, made the arrangement with McDermott to work against the bill. He said he gave two checks to Horning amounting to about $700. He took no receipt, did not know how the money was used, but presumed it went to attorneys.

FORGETTING GOOD.

McDermott, he said, he had known about a year. He, Horning and Fritz Heidenheimer, another broker, interested in the bill's defeat, he said, called at McDermott's office on Capitol Hill once. The bill was before the year, and he wasn't sure whether McDermott was in at the time or who was there. He was sure, at first, he contributed no money to Horning in 1911, when McMichaels swore the deal was made, but later he remembered that perhaps he wasn't entirely certain about the matter.

Bernstein's failure to remember details finally became so frequent that every question of the inquisitor got a laugh from his colleagues but no information from the witness.

Bernstein denied that $3,500 was raised to "defeat legislation."

"Fifty-five hundred dollars never defeated anything," he said. "You might defeat it with $40,000 or $50,000."

Bernstein denied he ever talked with McDermott about legislation except in a casual way.

Bernstein could not fix the time when Horning first suggested to him they contribute something to defeat the "loan shark" bill. He said Horning, Heidenheimer and he talked about the matter frequently, but he couldn't give details of conversations.

We didn't do anything rash," he admitted finally.

Immanuel Steinem, another pawnbroker, said he contributed nothing to the fund to defeat the bill although approached by the trio who did put up money.

"I told Horning I would contribute if the bill passed with the pawnbrokers excepted from its terms," he said.

"You were willing to go in on a sort of insurance basis," suggested Representative Ferris.

"Yes sir."

Steinem said didn't think it necessary to go in on the fund. "I'm not out anything," he declared.

Although Bernstein swore that to the best of his recollections the activities of the three did not begin until 1911, Steinem testified he had been approached in that year. He had no idea, he said, how much money was raised or how it was spent. Horning and Heidenheimer, the other brokers will testify next week.

BOOZERS CHOSE SMALL-POX HACK TO PARTY

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 16.—After being driven from a livery stable in which they were engaged in passing around a quart bottle, a congenial bunch of imbibers had the misfortune to select upon an abandoned hack which had been used in hauling smallpox patients to the pesthouse.

While the imbibition was at its hight they were informed of the germs lurking within the cushions, causing them to beat a hasty retreat. As those exposed to the germs were soaked with "medicine," no smallpox epidemic is feared here.

Railroads Demand Increase In Pay for Handling Mail On Account of Parcel Post

Seventeen Western Lines Unite in Petition to Postmaster General Burleson, Not Satisfied With 5 Per Cent Increase Already Granted

(By Associated Press.)

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16.—Officials of seventeen western railroads, including the Santa Fe, Burlington, Rock Island and other trunk lines, signed a telegram that was sent today to Postmaster General Burleson urging the government to increase the compensation of the roads for handling the mails. The increase is asked on the ground that the volume of mail has greatly increased as a result of the establishment of the parcel post and will further increase after August 20.

The telegram was sent as the result of investigations conducted by a committee appointed by the railroads. The telegram says in part:

"The undersigned are prompted respectfully to ask you to consider whether the United States government is really dealing fairly with the railroads of the country as to the matter of pay in connection with the introduction and extension of parcel post service.

"The testimony of the post office department before the senate committee July 25 showed that the first three months' business of the department after the installation of the parcel post had a gross increase in postal revenue of 14.54 per cent, of which at least 9.16 per cent was attributed to the new parcel post business.

"On the basis of this statement the government must have collected not less than $1,266,000 in revenue during the parcel post for the first six months beginning January 1.

ONE INCREASE ALREADY.

"To remunerate the transportation companies for the additional parcel post business transported, congress provided, beginning July 1, a 5 per cent increase in their mail pay based on rates, zones and weight limit in the original act, although the additional business transported amounted to at least 9.16 per cent., according to the testimony of the postoffice department. The extension of the parcel post inaugurated August 15, when the weight limit was raised from 11 to 20 pounds and mileage increased, is certain to result in vast enlargement of business.

"The government will collect postage on this business but no provision has been made to pay the railroads for transporting it. Not only will they receive no compensation for this increased business but will suffer the actual loss of earnings previously derived from the same traffic when carried as express and freight.

"Congress is in session and can immediately remedy this condition in accordance with suggestions made by the committee on railway mail pay in letter to you July 30, which we endorse."

Officials of the following railroads were included among the signers of the telegram: Atchison, Topeka and Sante Fe; Missouri Pacific, Iron Mountain, Kansas City, Texas & Gulf, St. Louis and Southwestern; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; Illinois Central; St. Louis and San Francisco; Denver and Rio Grande; Texas and Pacific; Chicago and Eastern Illinois.

HIDDEN IN WELL, HOLDER ARRESTED FOR BURGLARY

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 16.—Bailiffs Gilbert and Hicks participated in an arrest decidedly out of the ordinary Saturday morning, when, in looking for John Holder, charged with burglary, they found him in the bottom of a well in East Dalton. Holder was averse to leaving the well; but when the bailiffs threatened to drop a few large rocks at his "bean," he was brought to his senses, and getting in the bucket, permitted them to haul him up. There being little evidence, the charge against Holder was dismissed.

GEORGIA AND HER POLITICS

Automobile Registry Law Will Doubtless Prove Unsatisfactory

Outside of the knowledge that the legislature passed a law requiring the payment of an annual registry feeon each and every automobile in Georgia, regardless of its value or carrying capacity, few persons in the state are informed of the other important provisions of this bill.

The original bill, when it left the ways and means committee of the house simply increased the automobile registration fee from $2 to $5 and substituted an annual registration and payment of the fee instead of the permanent registration heretofore existing. This bill passed the house in that form, but in the senate on the last day of the session, during the press of business, an amendment was tacked onto it requiring the state treasurer to apportion all moneys received from automobile registrations among the various counties of the state. This apportionment must be according to the rural route mileage in each county as is set out in the federal government reports.

The result of this amendment will be that the city counties will pay the greater portion of the fund from the fees, but will be the smallest beneficiaries.

There are more than 22,000 automobiles operated in Georgia. The owners of these machines will pay more than $110,000 a year into the state treasury. Quite the larger proportion of the automobiles are in the city counties, but in the main the greatest amount of rural mileage are in the country counties where there are the fewest automobiles.

Fulton county may be taken as an example. There are between four and five thousand machines operated in this county. They will pay about $25,000 a year in registration fees, or more than one-fourth of the aggregate sum paid by all the counties of the state.

The exact figures are not available just now, but it is estimated that on account of the very few and very short rural routes in Fulton this county's part of the $110,000 would be considerably less than $1,000. And even should the apportionment between the 148 counties be on an equal share basis Fulton would get less than $700. And what is true of Fulton is also true, to a greater or lesser degree or all city counties.

What is considered another rather serious defect in the bill is that outside of a clause designating the fund collected from automobile registration fees as the "state road fund," it fails to prescribe just how and for what purposes the counties shall use their shares of the money.

There can be no doubt that the authors of the amendment intended that the money should be applied by the various counties to the public roads, but failure to so specify leaves the expenditure to the will and wishes of the county authorities.

Under the old law all money derived from automobile registration fees went into the common fund and was used to pay school expensions, and other expenses of the state.

Senator Converse's Strong Plea for Georgia Mothers.

When the bill giving mothers an equal right with fathers for the custody of their minor children was up for passage in the senate last Thursday Senator W. L. Converse, of the Sixth district, was one of the senate leaders who made a strong speech in behalf of the measure. He followed Senators W. D. McNeill, of the Twenty-second, and Judge John T. Allen, of the Twentieth.

Senators McNeill and Allen are both able lawyers, and they pitched their arguments on the urgent need for such legislation and its legal effect. Senator Converse turned aside from legal arguments and delivered an eloquent plea in behalf of Georgia mothers, declaring that the pending law would result in nothing but good to them and would not cast my vote for anything that is adverse to the interests of the mothers, and I would rather have my tongue paralyzed than utter one word against them," said Senator Converse.

The senator from the Sixth has proven himself to be a conscientious and conservative legislator. His experience in the house of representatives as one of the members from Lowndes county stood him in good stead in the senate. Senator Converse is seriously thinking of entering the race for congress in the Eleventh district next year.

One Young Woman Who Can Keep a Political Secret

Miss Ida Henderson, the popular and efficient stenographer of the state prison board, who is said to know more Georgia politicians than any other young woman in the state, is spending her vacation in Mountain city, Rabun county.

Although Miss Henderson has a wide personal acquaintance among the politicians and takes a keen interest in politics she is neither a suffragette nor an anti-suffragist (whatever the distinction may be).

Miss Henderson is known as "one young woman who can keep a secret," and as a result of the confidence which they have in her many prominent politicians trust her with their political secrets. She has never been known to "tell."

Prison Reform Probation Bill Is Signed by Governor Slaton.

Governor Slaton Saturday afternoon affixed his signature to the bill introduced by Senator Wilmer Converse, of the Forty-third district, which empowers trial judges to put misdemeanor convicts on probation, and in the event a fine is imposed to allow such convicts to pay their fines in installments.

This bill, which was advocated by the Prison Reform Association of Georgia, is one of the most important humanitarian measures passed by the recent legislature.

Governor Slaton spent the greater part of Saturday afternoon at his office in the capitol reading and signing bills. About 200 bills have already been sent to him for his signature. The majority of these bills are of a local nature, applying to certain towns, cities and counties.

GEORGIA INVESTORS HELPED BY NEW LAW

Wilmer L. Moore Says "Blue Sky" Act Will Guard Against Fakirs of All Kinds

That Georgia's investors now will be saved millions of dollars a year by having their securities guarded against fakes is the assertion of Wilmer Moore, president of the Atlanta chamber of commerce.

"The effect of the new law passed by the legislature will be far-reaching," said he Saturday. "It will open up broader fields of investment for Georgians by stamping as honest those who offer solid stocks and bonds and general securities of real value, and by branding as dishonest those who hitherto have been almost unchecked in their distribution of fraudulent and otherwise worthless securities. The fakirs have been finding their best customers among people of moderate means, high intelligence and deficient worldly wisdom. It is those people, and through them the state, that the new laws will protect, substituting its own machinery for the experience which they lack."

Mr. Moore paid high tribute to the chamber of commerce committee of which H. M. Willett was chairman. "The blue sky committee," as it was called, worked diligently and effectively to encourage the passage of the measure, which was introduced by Representative J. R. Spence, of Carroll, and Ed Wohlwender, of Muscogee.

The new law provides that no stocks, bonds, debentures, certificates of participation, or other securities, shall be sold or offered for sale in Georgia until the person offering them shall have filed with the secretary of state a statement of all the necessary information required to insure legitimacy of the security.

JOURNAL WANT AD Horoscope

AUGUST 18.

People born on this date are noted for their personal appearance. Usually they are tall, with ruddy complexions, large and beautiful eyes with a clear and penetrating gaze and strong deep commanding voices.

For this reason they are physically as well as mentally adapted to follow a public career.

The governing sign is Leo and the governing planet is the sun, which imparts great vitality, warmth of affection, love of home and children.

There are no vices in this nativity, but merely faults of disposition. A tendency to be prejudiced against others quickly, a hasty temper and impatience are the worst faults to be overcome.

The coming week will be well favored by all planetary conditions for the sale through The Journal Want Ads of furniture, household goods and other miscellaneous articles.

Good salesmen will find positions through the Want Ads and agents will do well to answer The Journal Want Ads during the week.

Some Want Ads are inserted free in The Journal. For charge ads, ask that they be sent for, or telephone them to Main 2000, or Atlanta 423.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

The Value of a Male Thoroughbred

THROUGHOUT almost the entire south the breeding of thoroughbred animals and fowls has never been indulged in long enough to have the country any ways near supplied with thoroughbred animals of any kind except in limited numbers. Therefore, the country cannot hope to at once supply the demand on the average farm for all thoroughbreds. It would not be good policy to start with all thoroughbreds of high quality and would be bad business judgment and require fortunes, and the only way live stock and poultry is made to bring the increased values easy to take care of the nation's wants has been by crossing or improving the scrubs and using thoroughbred sires or mares on natives to improve the quality. The value of a good male at the head of a herd or at the head of a flock of fowls is untold and there is not one person in one hundred that understands how to actually estimate the value of a good thoroughbred male. For instance, for the price of $10 to $200 anyone can secure a firstclass Hereford or beef producing male animal, suited for cross on the native cows of the south. The first cross of this kind would increase on every steer produced from this make from 200 to 400 pounds of flesh at no more cost than the little inferior native animal is now costing to produce. With the average herd of cattle you can easily use one male to fifty to one hundred females, and at the very lowest estimation if the breeder raised fifty head of calves per year with an increase of 200 pounds to each calf he would have 10,000 pounds of increase flesh at no more cost to him. This would be all profit. 10,000 pounds of extra beef would bring on our market today, at present prices, $5,000 in increase weight at 200 pounds per head. It would bring another $2,000 in increased quality, and a $100 to $200 male would be worth to you in one year's time from $5,000 to $7,000. This does not look reasonable but it is a fact and this is the thing that has made the cattle breeder of the west such an enormous amount of money so quickly.

This opportunity is knocking at every southern farmer's door today begging to be admitted, but we turn a deaf ear to these opportunities. The same opportunity offers to the breeder of a thoroughbred male at the head of a good herd. The increase production or milk and butter by using a bull that can be had for $100 to $200 will on a herd of twenty-five heifer calves raised in one year, increase the producing capacity of these calves with the first cross $100 per year, making $2,500 of extra profit that this male would be worth to any dairyman in one year. This male could be used at least three or four years and repeat this extra profit every year. The same thing applies in using a high class Percheron stallion or a firstclass jack in the breeding of horses and mules. A good one that is capable of producing fro mseventy-five to fifty colts per year will add $5,000 to $100 each in the selling price of every colt that they produce for you.

Of all things that pays best poultry undoubtedly is the thing where a good thoroughbred male pays a larger dividend on the amount invested than anything a farmer can invest his money in. For instance, if a good Orpington, Plymouth Rock or White Leghorn male be mated to twenty ordinary scrub hens he will increase in weight the offspring at least one pound each and at the very lowest estimation two hundred chickens should be produced from the twenty hens he is mated to, making two hundred pounds of flesh at 15c per pound. This would amount to $30 and such a male can be bought for from $2.00 to $3.00 to $5.00, that is a bird that would be suitable for cross breeding, one that was not perfectly marked according to the standard but has the extra size and constitution to him. In addition to this say it one hundred pullets were kept from this cross he would increase the egg production not less than two dozen eggs per hen, making two hundred dozen eggs at 30 cents per dozen, which would amount to another $60, making this male actually worth in dollars and cents to you as an outcross $90, and he would be good three or four years and repeat this same thing every year. His actual value in dollars and cents cannot be estimated.

These are facts that cannot be denied, but how few people realize this and believe it possible.

In the breeding of hogs this increase is even greater than poultry or cattle, and amounts to more in dollars and cents with quicker returns than anything. We have seen this season thousands of head of cattle shipped out of Georgia to be used in the way as mentioned above. They will make the purchasers rich, will make them immense fortunes and piles of money quickly, and Georgia sellers who let them go will be the losers, and they will be the losers in the history that has not one-tenth the opportunities for them to get results for their feed as we have throughout the entire south. Ye we still are sitting idle and not taking hold of either of these opportunities as we should. When will the southern farmers see and take advantage of these opportunities? From present indications it looks like they never will, but prefer to stick to the one crop cotton continually and forever until some thing comes along to force them to take up something else.

Yours very truly,

THE PROPER WAY TO FEED HENS TO PRODUCE EGGS IN THE FALL OF THE YEAR

If you want your hens to lay during the Fall and Winter, read what the RIVERSIDE POULTRY FARM has to say:

RIVERSIDE POULTRY FARM,
STANDARD SINGLE COMB WHITE LEGHORNS.
Riverside, Ala., Oct. 31, 1912.

Mr. J. P. Gentry,
Memphis, Tenn.

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter asking how we liked Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed, we have this to say, and you can judge for yourself: You remember the day you were here we had just mated a pen of 50 pullets, and it was agreed that we should try your feed on these birds first. We have been feeding these pullets on Aunt Patsy's poultry Feed (dry mash) in a hopper or trough. Have also fed Aunt Patsy's scratch feed in a deep litter so as to make them scratch for exercise. Yesterday we gathered 31 eggs from this pen, and the day before that, 25 eggs, a record breaker with us so far as eggs are concerned, from pullets in the early fall.

Since feeding Aunt Patsy all of my birds are in a thrifty, healthy condition, and I am so pleased with results that I have ordered another lot of the feed.

With personal regards from the writer, we are,

Yours truly,
Riverside Poultry Farm,
E. D. Kimball, Mgr.

IT IS absolutely necessary for chickens to have green food during the winter. This can easily be supplied if you will plant out small patch of rye and rape, they both grow rapidly and furnish an abundance of green food all the winter. Now is the time to plant.

THIS is the moulting season and that means that the hens should be fed a good tonic. Pratt's Poultry Regulator and Conkey's Laying Tonic insures a quick and complete moult and that means plenty of eggs during the fall and winter when they bring the high prices. 25c, 50c and $1.00 sizes.

AVOID giving your chickens scratch feed with too much corn in it at this season. Use Red Comb Scratch, the percentage of corn is very small but it has just the kinds of grain that they need now. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

DON'T overlook giving charcoal, it helps to keep down indigestion and it is essential that the chickens have it.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Linden Street Lot, Between Peachtrees, Brings $25,500, or $300 a Foot—Sales and Building at Altoloma—St. Charles Avenue Sale—Loan Agent S ys Money Is Growing Plentiful. Canada a Better Advertiser Than Atlanta

The sale of a large lot on Linden street, between the Peachtrees, was featured in real estate announcements made on yesterday afternoon.

This sale was made by the Daniel Brothers' company to John W. Zuber, and the consideration was $25,000, or $500 a front foot.

The property is opposite the Davis-Fisher sanitarium, and is on the north side of Linden street, about half way between the Peachtrees. It has a frontage of 85 feet, and a depth of 260 feet along a twenty-foot side alley that extends through to North avenue, being the northwest corner of Linden street and the alley.

Mr. Zuber bought mainly as an investment, but he may possibly build next spring, although his plans are not definite in that direction.

This was the third sale ranging from $18,000 to $30,000 announced yesterday. All three sales were of vacant property, two being on the north side, including the corner of Peachtree road and Piedmont avenue, and the third in the Inman Park section on La France street.

MONEY GROWING EASIER.

The most encouraging feature of the market just now is the increased supply and the lower interest rate of money. A notable feature also is that money, contrary to the rule in force since anyone can remember, is becoming easier as the crop moving season is beginning.

The manager of the loan department of one of the oldest real estate agencies in Atlanta said yesterday that conditions had improved remarkably.

"Up to thirty days ago, there was no money to be loaned," he said, "but now it is becoming more plentiful and the rate is being reduced. One reason of this is that eastern capitalists are taking their money out of stocks and bonds and are putting it in real estate first mortgages, which are just as safe, or safer, and bring a better return.

"I have had a great many offers of amounts from $1,000 to $5,000 from northern and eastern people, and one man telegraphed me that he had $10,000 to put in mortgages and asked me to place it.

"Our loans are mostly small ones, ranging from $500 to $2,500. Loans of $1,000 and under we get 8 per cent on. The rest are 7 per cent.

"There is no doubt of the fact that the government offer of money for crop moving purposes has had the effect of forcing hoarded funds back into business channels. The government offer doesn't help the banks as much as it does the people who deal through the banks.

Another result of easier money is the encouragement to small builders. One builder, who has been holding out, has started erection of four two-story houses. Others are preparing to get back into the building business."

A prominent Atlanta merchant, who also operates in real estate, said yesterday that he had been visited by a man who said he had eastern money in sums of $50,000 and over, part of which he offered him for building work.

ALTOLOMA SALES.

Mr. W. P. Cole, manager of Altoloma, reports the sale of lots amounting to $26,000, and the completion of seven homes. Altoloma is one of Atlanta's new suburbs and is situated just beyond Decatur, on the Stone Mountain electric car line and the Georgia railroad. This property consists of some 350 lots, ranging from quarter-acre tracts to five acre tracts, which are being sold upon the liberal terms of one dollars a week to three dollars a week without interest. With the addition of several new salesmen, Mr. Cole expects a greater volume of business during the next 30 days.

ST. CHARLES AVENUE SALE.

The W. E. Treadwell agency, through H. H. Tyson, sold for Mrs. W. W. Franklin to Rev. L. E. Barden, pastor of the Jackson Hill Baptist church, No. 210 St. Charles avenue, a nine-room, two-story house on a lot 50x200, for $7,000.

HOUSES RENTED.

The Charles B. Glover Realty company, through Manager Aycock, of the rent department, announces the following houses and rooms he has rented during the past few days:

REALTY ORGANIZATION.

The first daytime meeting of the Atlanta Real Estate board last Friday was a great success, and the organization, judging by the attendance and spirit, is growing stronger all the time.

A feature of the meeting was the presentation, through M. F. Ramsey, of a watch charm to Charles P. Glover, the former president of the board.

Harris G. White, president of the board, and Mr. Glover, each of whom they saw at Winnipeg during the convention. Mr. Glover, speaking of his impressions of Canada, thought more than ever that our own values were conservative. He considered that we lacked exploitation rather than overexploitation. He thought we could learn something from Canada on the art of advertising a section.

A humorous effort was made for the impeachment of S. B. Turman, a delegate, who was charged with rank desertion, because, in short, his strikingly humorous talk—it didn't have a name to do with the convention—was made by Colonel J. J. Woodside.

Charles McKinney, the lawyer, addressed the board on the work of organizing the state chamber of commerce, and asked the cooperation of Atlanta real estate agents. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Van B. Smith, the new secretary.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16.—October 25, 1913, has been set as the date for the Atlantic fleet to start on its Mediterranean tour. Plans for the trip were discussed today by Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Read Admiral Badger aboard the flagship Wyoming.

Secretary Daniels also announced that the battleship Oregon, made famous by her run around Cape Horn from the Pacific to the Atlantic during the Spanish war, will come through the Panama canal next spring to lead the Atlantic fleet through to the Pacific. She is now at the Bremerton navy yards.

Invitations to all the navies of the world to meet at Hampton Roads in January, 1915 and pass through the Panama canal to the Panama exposition at San Francisco, accompanied by those from the United States navy, shortly will be issued by President Wilson, Secretary Daniels made this announcement tonight. Sea Island Bale

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 16.—The first bale of sea island cotton arrived here yesterday from Arthur Wisenbaker's place. It weighed over 500 pounds and was extra good quality, selling for 20 cents. Other crops, however, are doing splendidly and the prediction is made that south Georgia is going to make the greatest crop of sugar cane, sweet potatoes, corn, pumpkins, etc., that have ever been seen here.

WALLACE MILLER IS OUT FOR MAYORALTY

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MACON, Ga., Aug. 16.—Wallace Miller will run for mayor of Macon. He announced this morning, after a consultation with numerous friends, that he will be a candidate in the approaching primary. Nearly a hundred well-known citizens held a meeting on the second floor of the Dempsey hotel today at 11 o'clock and discussed the proposition of undertaking to elect a candidate for mayor. Mr. Miller was their unanimous choice, and he agreed to accept the nomination, stating that he thought they represented the community and the popular sentiment sufficiently well to justify him in entering the race.

Probably never before in the political history of Macon has a mayoralty campaign developed as early and attained such force as in the present case. Just a week ago Mr. Miller was suggested to illustrate mentally for mayor, and today he accepted the nomination of scores of his fellow citizens.

Mr. Miller stated that he would lay aside all his personal interests and devote his entire time now to working for the ticket. It is expected that he will make a public speaking campaign, and he will undoubtedly receive the assistance of numerous able speakers, who have taken a conspicuous part in other local municipal campaigns.

Wallace Miller is a son of Judge A. L. Miller, and is one of the most popular of Macon's young men. He made a success in the commercial field and is now regarded as one of the most promising of the younger members of the Macon bar. He entered politics for the first time last year when he was elected as the legislature, and his showing in that race demonstrated that he has a large following.

RELATIVES CLAIM BODY OF MRS. GEO. S. NANCE

Husband, Who Killed Her, Retains Lawyer and Stops Talking

(By Associated Press.)

HAMLET, N. C., Aug. 16.—Chief of Police Brazewell this morning received two telegrams from relatives of George S. Nance, who was killed here last night by her husband, the first of these being from a sister, Mrs. R. T. Baker, of Alexandria, Va., who asked that the body be prepared for shipment and held until her arrival today. R. A. Reeds, of Knoxville, Tenn., wired for particulars, stating that he married a sister of Mrs. Nance. Nance, in the county jail at Rockingham, today gave the address of his brother as Mrs. R. Nance, 24 Adams street, Washington, D. C., but says he came to that address was returned undelivered.

It develops today from papers and correspondence among the effects of the dead woman that she was a traveling representative of a millinery house.

Nance has talked very little today, but has retained counsel.

The body was sent today to the woman has been found on the floor of her room. It stopped at 5:15 o'clock p. m., and the body was discovered at 6:20; it is supposed that she had been dead for an hour. To the fact that the carpet on the floor of the room was an old one of slow burning quality it is attributed the escape of the hotel from burning.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

THE coming week is being looked forward to with particular interest by the members of the Athletic club and their friends on account of the water sports which will be held Saturday at the East Lake club.

It will be a water carnival in which canoes and row boats will form a flotilla manned by expert oarsmen, the boat races to be among the most interesting features.

Swimming and diving will be participated in by both men and young women, the girls not only to be interested spectators but to take part as well.

For the past few years Atlanta girls have taken as keen an interest in outdoor sports as the men and have developed not only a desire to excel in open air games, but the ability also, and the water sports to be no exception to others in which girls take part.

AMONG the young couples who will go immediately to housekeeping on their return from their wedding trip are Miss Willie Russell Law and Mr. Thaddeus Cheshire, whose marriage will take place in October.

Mr. Cheshire is completing an attractive home near Druid Hills, which he and his fiancee are interested in fitting up.

The engagement of Miss Law and Mr. Cheshire is one of the interesting announcements of today and a very cordial interest will center in their coming marriage, which will be preceded by a number of affairs at which Miss Law will be entertained. She is the second daughter of Mr. Fred B. Law and one of the most popular young women of Atlanta.

Mr. Cheshire is a son of Mr. T. J. Cheshire and is equally well-known and liked and has a host of friends to congratulate him. Mr. Cheshire is a prominent real estate man and is connected with the firm of B. M. Grant & Co.

The wedding will take place at the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Law in Druid Hills, which is not far from that being built by Mr. Cheshire.

DR. AND MRS. MARION MCHENRY HULL have issued invitations to the marriage of their sister, Miss Sallie Cobb Hull, to Mr. Philip Weltner, Wednesday, September the third, at 7:30 o'clock at the North Avenue Presbyterian church, the service to be followed by a reception at 505 Spring street.

The invitations come as the first formal announcement of the approaching marriage, the engagement having been an open secret among their friends for some time.

Miss Hull is the second daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Hull, of Athens, and is a first honor graduate of Lucy Cobb. She has spent some time with her brother and has won as many friends as she has in her former home.

Mr. Weltner is a son of Rev. and Mrs. Weltner, formerly of Augusta, Mr. Weltner being a prominent minister of the Lutheran church. Mr. Weltner is a graduate of the University of Georgia, later taking a degree at Columbia where he became actively interested in sociology. For the past two years Mr. Weltner has been secretary of the Prison Reform association and is one of the leading workers along social service lines.

Mr. Weltner is also a probation officer of the Juvenile court which he was largely instrumental in establishing.

Washington Seminary

ITS MUSIC DEPARTMENT

Recognizing music as a valuable element in a liberal education, Washington Seminary, Atlanta, maintains a first class conservatory of music—piano, voice, pipe-organ, violin, theory and harmony.

A full course in music is allowed to count as three units of the sixteen units required for graduation in the literary courses, except in the college preparatory course. Students are thus able to devote ample time to their music, receive credit for it, and not forced to take it simply as an extra.

Summer-Spoiled Skin Removed by Absorption

(From Home Queen.)

An undue summer exposure usually leaves an undesirable surface of tan, dust or grease, often freckles, too, it would seem more sensible to remove such *surface than to hide it with cos*metics. There's nothing better for this than ordinary mercolized wax, which acqually absorbs an unwholesome complexion. The thin layer of surface skin is itself absorbed, gently and gradually, so there's no inconvenience and no detention indoors. Just spread the wax lightly over the entire face at bedtime and take it off in the morning with warm water. If you will get one ounce of mercolized wax at the drug store and use for a week or so, you may expect marked improvement daily. When the underlying skin is wholly in view your complexion will be a marvel of spotless purity and beautiful whiteness.

Don't let those summer wrinkles worry you; worry will breed more wrinkles. Better to banish them by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in 1-2 pt. witch hazel. Used daily for awhile this will be found wonderfully effective.—(Advt.)

New Fall Suits For Women

Including beautiful Novelty Suits. Only a few of each, for nobody who buys such suits wants to run the risk of their being duplicated. The lustrous zibelines and velours de laine are rich and beautiful, the sort of thing one delights in when the autumn tang gets in the air.

The bronze greens, dark blues, lovely silvery taupe shades, rich plum, wine red, mahogany and russet brown are among the favored shades.

The suits are of various types, among them strictly tailored, demi-tailored and dressy models.

The demi-tailored types are of simple design, but touched up with trimmings on collar, cuffs and revers and with the vests which are coming into vogue.

The coats are all in cutaway style, 36 to 38 inches long in the back. On account of the popularity of vests, many of the jackets are cut away sharply in front, so that they appear quite short.

As for the skirts, they are draped—most of them—enough to seem almost voluminous, till you see them on; then they fall into slender, clinging silhouette.

A Peep at the New Autumn Skirts

Of fine wools; that doesn't need to be said, but also of beautiful silks; broaded messaline, moire and charmeuse. Draped styles in many novel effects, with broad plaited girdles and sashes. Many black silk skirts are prettily trimmed with black jet buttons.

Black silk Skirts are $12.50 and $15.

Fine wool poplin and whipcord Skirts, in black, are $10.

New plaid, tiered and draped Skirts in smart combined colors are $12.50.

Bedford Cord Skirts in colors and black are $6.75.

Constipation and Heat Often Fatal

Regularity of Bowels Very Important to Health at This Time.

At no time of the year should people be more careful of the condition of their bowels than in hot weather. Many things may cause constipation in summer, but whatever it may be the trouble should be promptly remedied. A constipated person lays himself or herself open to serious and often fatal diseases. That feeling of congestion, lassitude or dull headache is the first warning of trouble.

Don't try to remedy it by the excessive eating of fruit, which usually has a laxative effect but lacks action in extreme cases. What is needed is a reliable but mild laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take a dose of it at night before retiring—it is pleasant-tasting and free from griping—and by morning your bowels will be emptied and your head clear. You will feel energetic again.

You cannot obtain such results with cathartics, purgatives, salts or pills, as, unlike Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, they are without tonic value and entirely too harsh. Among the thousands of dependable converts to Syrup Pepsin are the families of Mr. F. C. Harris, Live Oak, Fla., who now finds his stomach better than it has been in ten years; and Mrs. T. D. Diemer, 835 San Pedro St., Trinidad, Colo., who is cured of various digestive troubles after all doctors that she knew had failed. A bottle can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents or one dollar, the latter size being for family use. Results as claimed are guaranteed or your money will be refunded. This great remedy is the safeguard of health to thousands of good American families.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

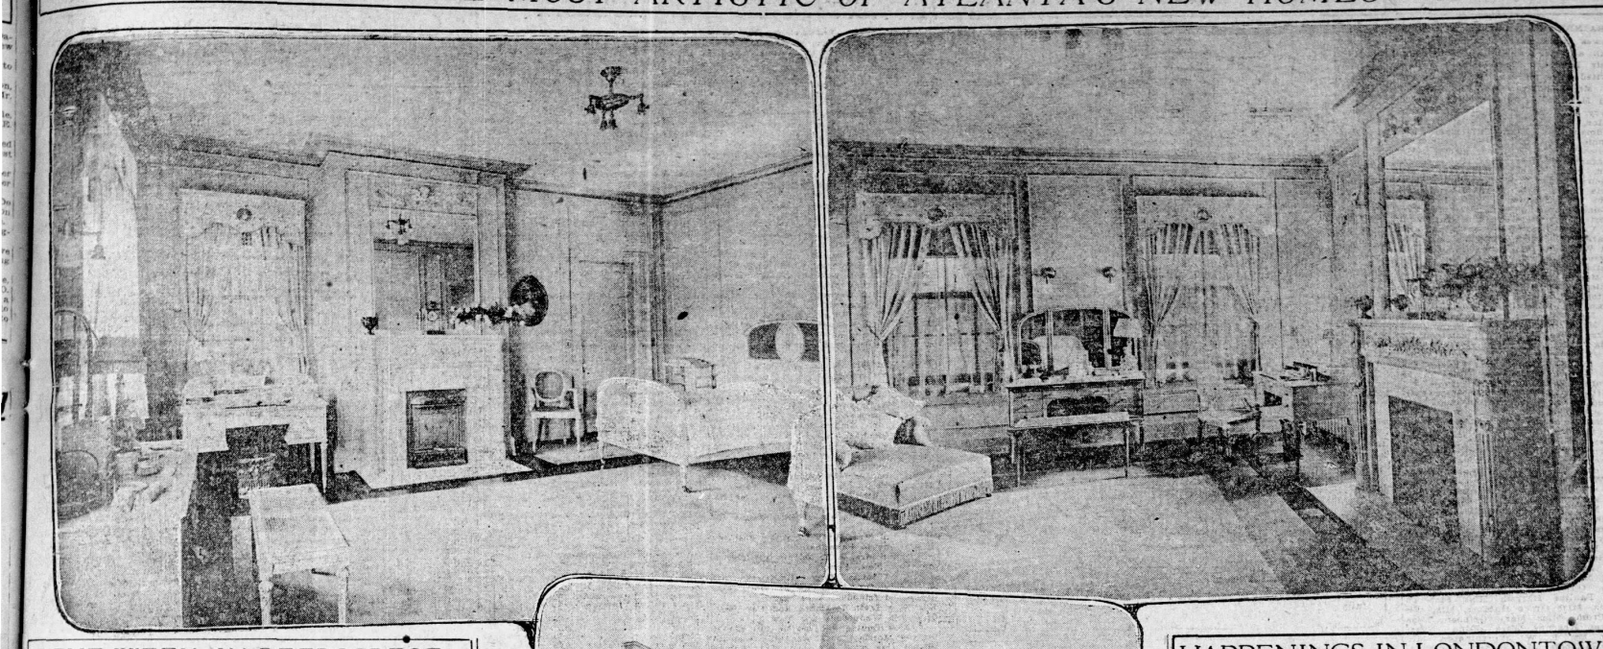
ONE OF THE MOST ARTISTIC OF ATLANTA'S NEW HOMES



The above pictures of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Adair show one of the most artistic of the new homes of Atlanta and one of the loveliest in Druid Hills where Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair and Mr. and Mrs. George Adair also have handsome homes. The exquisite taste shown in the furnishing of the house is characteristic of its charming chatelaine who before her marriage was Miss Margaret Ladson, the second daughter of Mr. C. T. Ladson.

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

THE Atlanta contingent is taking a prominent part in the gayeties which always make Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs the most interesting and delightful of summer resorts, the White having an historic interest and social standard which began in the days before the war when southern families by coach and four journey to the sheltered valley with their children and grown sons and daughters.

The past week began with a bal poudre, the cotillion being led by Mr. Thomas B. Paine and Colonel Jo Lane Sterne. A revival of the Riley was an interesting feature, twenty-four taking part in the stately dance, which seemed to bring back the old days of the White.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. James H. Preston, wife of the mayor of Baltimore, and one of the popular women at the White, was hostess at a "the dansant." Miss Alice Wilks Preston, her debutante daughter, being the honor guest.

Wednesday was a day of bridge parties, Mrs. Leggett entertaining in the morning and in the afternoon two attractive Macon women, Mrs. Florence Wadley Coleman and Mrs. Leon Duer, were the hostesses.

In the evening Miss Katherine Ellis was the central figure in a large supper party in the grill at which Mrs. Ellis entertained. Visitors who spent practically the entire day at the Casino closed the festivities Thursday, when forty responded to invitations extended by Mrs. George H. Van Vleck in honor of Lieutenant Commander and Mrs. Leigh C. Palmer, for a "disagreeable party." The souvenir place cards for supper bore exaggerated rules for those who wished to be disagreeable.

Friday Mr. George W. Stevens gave a morning german and Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant gave a lawn party in honor of their daughter, Miss Margaret Grant, and the group of Georgia girls who are at the White, among them being Miss Katherine Ellis, Miss Harriet Calhoun and Miss Martha and Miss Nellie Phinizy, of Athens.

Refreshments were served on the lawn about the casino, in which dancing was enjoyed. Monday Mr. T. B. Paine will be among the hosts entertaining at an evening german.

OF interest to their friends at home is the news of those who are abroad which reaches this side of the pond in series of post cards pictured with views full of historic interest or long letters filled with accounts of travel and visits to out-of-the-way places.

Mrs. Lucy Pace Owsley, who went to Paris last winter, has resumed her studies there, after a visit to Switzerland, where she was joined by her daughter, Mrs. Charles Breck Ackley, of New York. Mrs. Ackley will remain in Switzerland some time longer, where she will be joined by Mr. Ackley, returning with him in the fall.

Mrs. Owsley is one of the Atlantians who have been welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Burnside at their home on the Boulevard Raspail. Just now Mr. and Mrs. Burnside are in Switzerland, after a short stay in Beaucaire and Avignon. They will return to Paris to remain until October, when they leave for Africa, where they will make numbers of interesting sketches to be among those exhibited by Mr. Burnside in New York later in the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnside will spend some time in America coming to Atlanta to be with Mrs. Burnside's mother, Mrs. Virginius Hitt, for an extended visit.

During her stay in Stockholm Miss Mamie L. Pitts, who is making a tour of Norway and Sweden met Mrs. William Goddard and Mrs. Frank Freeman, of Washington, D. C. Both Mrs. Goddard and Mrs. Freeman are delightfully known in Atlanta, being kinswomen of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lowry, Mrs. Bates Block, Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Freeman.

Mrs. Eula Griffin and Mrs. Georgia McMichael are in the Dolomites, taking interesting journeys by diligence far from the railroad line of travel.

Mrs. Griffin and Mrs. McMichael have recently been in Russia, and are on their way to Paris where they spent last winter. They will return to Atlanta in the fall, after a two years' stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Harris, who have been abroad for the past six months, will return to New York on the 30th. Mrs. Harris coming to Atlanta to be present at the marriage of her sister, Miss Louise Collier, to Mr. Henry Stanton, of Cincinnati, which will take place at the home of her sister, Mrs. Robert W. Davis, the first of October.

Mrs. Harris will be with Mrs. Davis for a two weeks' stay before going to New Orleans to spend several weeks, returning on her way north to be with Mrs. Davis, Miss Martha Boynton and other friends.

ASIDE from the dinner dances at the Country club and the Piedmont club the largest affair of the week was the swimming party and buffet supper at which Mr. and Mrs. Frank Adair were hosts.

Swimming was enjoyed in the pool of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair's hometers of grapes in harmony with velvety peaches, red and yellow apples and tropical plums.

Mrs. Adair was a charming hostess, wearing a beautiful gown of gentian blue chiffon combined with cream colored chiffon, the corsage and skirt draped with blue, the waist defined by a girdle of chiffon in the two tones of the gown.

MRS. FRAMPTON ELLIS, who was formerly Miss Eloise Oliver, has been the honor guest at a number of the informal affairs which have made up the gayeties of the week.

Wearing the prettiest of her trousseau gowns, the lovely young woman has been a charming figure in the groups of friends invited to meet her. Among the hostesses entertaining for her were Miss Elizabeth Morgan, who gave a pretty tea at the Piedmont club, and Miss Mary Brown, who gave a swimming party followed by afternoon tea at the Capital City Country club.

MRS. CHARLES DONNALLY and her little daughter, of Pennsylvania, are being cordially welcomed during a visit to Mrs. Donnally's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stocking. Mrs. Donnally was formerly Miss Aline Stocking, one of the most popular young women of Atlanta, and has a host of friends to welcome her and her small daughter, who is on her first visit south.

WOMEN are taking a more and more prominent place in the professional and business world, and here and there one finds conspicuous illustrations of their ability to handle big affairs.

The most recent case in Georgia is that of Mrs. Jesse P. Williams, who, at the death of her husband, became the owner of the Georgia and Florida railroad and other valuable properties.

She controls a quarter of a million acres of land besides the railroad, and will herself direct all the business pertaining to the railroad and her lands. Her husband's estate is valued at $5,000,000, and the direction of such large interests requires much business sagacity. Mrs. Williams is the mistress of the former Walker P. Inman home on Peachtree, coming to Atlanta from Savannah several years ago.

Heart-Dice Party

One of the enjoyable events of the week was the heart-dice party at which Miss Brownlee entertained at her home on DeKalb avenue, in Kirkwood on Friday evening.

Riedel.

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

BY THE COUNTESS OF BLANKSHIRE.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—King Manuel, whose marriage celebrations are to take place on September 3 and 4 next, officiated recently as umpire at a cricket match which was held for charity, and was played between jockeys and champion athletes. During the week King Manuel was the guest of the Austrian-Hungary ambassador at dinner. The king was attended by Count d'Asseco, and amongst others present were Prince Alexander of Battenberg the Earl and Countess of Mar and Kelie, Princess Teano, the Marquis de Soveral, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Countess and Count Trauttmansdorff and others.

King George has approved the appointment of the Rev. R. H. Charles, D.D., to be canon of Westminster in the room of the late Canon Barnett. Dr. Charles is a great scholar, and has been speaker's lecturer in Biblical studies at Oxford. He is an Irishman who has been brilliant in his career. The early days of his education were spent at Queen's college, Belfast (now University of Belfast), and at Trinity, Dublin. Dr. Charles is a fellow of Merton college, and is editor and contributor of much to the Oxford edition of the "Old Testament Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha." He has written a number of other works, and is a keen golfer and motorist, and is generally to be seen at all motor exhibitions and large shows in the country.

His majesty, King George, with Queen Mary and Prince Albert, looking sunburnt and healthy since his voyage on the Cumberland, witnessed a church parade of the Territorial and National Reservists at Liverpool on Sunday. The ceremony, which took place in the open space in front of St. George's hall, was witnessed by dense masses of people. After the service their majesties and suite took up a position on the dais which had been erected, and watched the march past, in which it was estimated 9,000 Territorials and National Reservists altogether took part. It was a notable display, and all arms were represented.

His Majesty returned to town on Thursday, and minor engagements will be in the majority for the next few days. The foundation of the new buildings for the commonwealth will be laid by His Majesty on the 24th, and already there are rapid preparations in course for the ceremony. A large stand is being erected on the site facing the eastward end of the Strand, and it is anticipated that there will be very vast crowds to see the royal party. This will be a fitting opportunity for many who were unable to see their majesties on the return from the north to give welcome on their safe arrival.

King George and Queen Mary have intimated their intention of attending at the Drury Lane opera for the special performance of "Boris Godaunov." There is to be a particularly pleasing feature of the entertainment of this particular evening in that all receipts by the desire of Sir Joseph Beecham will be presented to the members of the Russian chorus, who have done such excellent work during the most successful season.

It was erroneously stated in the Press that the Duchess of Connaught has so far recovered as to be able to indulge in her favorite recreation of golf, but, unfortunately, this is not correct, as her royal highness is still in the convalescent stage. It was anticipated that the duchess would proceed to Germany for a cure, but she has decided that a stay in the highlands will prove more beneficial to her. The king has offered the use of one of his Scottish residences to the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and it is probable that they will be at Abergeldie for some time. The princess royal and her daughters are also going north, in fact, they will just remain in town in order to attend the state ball. There will be some quiet house parties at Mar lodge during the autumn, and the Duchess of Fife and Princess Maud will have some of their friends for golfing, of which game they are devoted exponents.

A great surprise is in store or the friends of a lady who is a leading light in the social world. Notwithstanding the fact that she had given them to understand she preferred widowhood, she has secretly become engaged to a distinguished army officer.

Another member of the aristocracy who is related to royalty is about to go on the stage. She is said to be a clever singer and dancer.

Puccini, the famous Italian composer, has completed the score of an opera, which, it is believed, will prove to be the finest work he has yet produced. The libretto is by Didier Golo, a young writer whose pen pictures of the Paris underworld are most powerful. The story, which is full of passion, takes place on a Seine barge.

Who is the titled lady that was so shocked at seeing her daughter dance the bunny hug at a ball that she immediately called her carriage and took the young lady home?

Not content with the mild cigarette, many society women in the privacy of their own homes have taken to smoking cigars and pipes. A leading West End tobacconist is doing a big trade in pipes for ladies. They are very light, and cost from $1 upwards, according to their mounting.

A lady who takes a prominent part in the social life of London has recently lost a considerable sum of money in speculation. Luckily for her a great friend, whose financial knowledge is second to none, had consented to undertake the task of setting matters right, and it is expected that as a result of his good offices the lady will be better off than she would otherwise have been.

There was much merriment among the diners at a fashionable West End hotel the other evening at the expense of a well known American. The latter is a bit of a dandy, and is always immaculately dressed. His greatest asset, however, is his curly hair, one particular lock which hangs over his forehead a la Benjamin Disraeli being ever admired by the fair sex. On the evening in question our Beau Brummel had no sooner entered the dining room than the rest of the diners began to bubble over with laughter. He sat down, but not for long. A friendly waiter went up and whispered something into his ear, whereupon he incontinently fled from the room. He had forgotten to take the curl paper from his lock of hair! Needless to say he did not return to face the music.

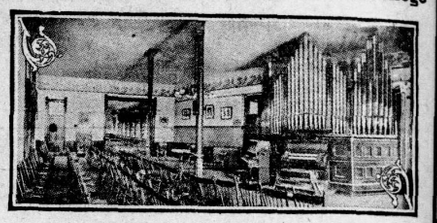
Christian Association Hall at Cox College



The above view represents the Y. W. C. A. Hall at Cox College, College Park, Ga., that has just been remodeled, showing its two-manual organ recently installed and giving a glimpse into the reading room.

The Association is the center of the religious and social activities of the college. Prominent ministers and missionaries have often addressed the young ladies and inspired them to higher and nobler things. Many interesting social gatherings where distinguished people from Atlanta and other cities are entertained, form a valuable feature of college life. At these gatherings students from the Conservatory furnish delightful programs. At times the guests are treated to a recital on the large three-manual organ in the chapel, which is considered the largest and sweetest toned college instrument in the South.

With the splendid environment of rural seclusion on the one hand and a great city near by all throbbing with life and the greatest intellectual and moral forces on the other, with the fine equipments and strong faculty, great things may be accomplished by the earnest student. The College points with pride to its alumnae who hold prominent positions all over the Southland.

Workmen have been busy throughout the summer, putting in many improvements which the students will appreciate and enjoy the coming session.

Cox College can be reached in a day from any point in this or adjoining states and many prospective patrons have visited the college this summer.

Preparations have been made to accommodate a larger student body than usual the coming year and all Atlanta is looking forward to the arrival of the students on September 10, when the seventy-first session of this time-honored institution begins.

Chronic Indigestion

Nuxcara

taken three times daily, one-half hour before each meal, corrects all irritable indispositions of the stomach, intestines and restores the digestive organs to a healthy normal condition.

DOLPH WALKER.

MR. DOLPH WALKER, Empire Building,

one of the most prominent and successful business men of the city, says: Nuxcara cured me of dyspepsia in its worst form after I had suffered for years. In spite of the fact that I took every digestive remedy that I could hear of I was almost an invalid, and so discouraged that I had about decided to give up all medicines advertised for stomach troubles, as I had about lost faith in drugs. My case was so bad that I could not see any improvement at all on the first bottle of Nuxcara, but by the time I had taken five bottles I had gained forty-five pounds and was stronger and in better health than I ever was in my life. It is certainly the most wonderful remedy known.

Lookouts Win Three in Four From Atlanta

Thompson Worked Pretty Game in Opener and Won Easily—Second Game Went to Covelesie—Bisland Star

Carl Thompson's pitching in the first game of a double bill proved too much for the Chattanooga crew, and Atlanta won, while in the second battle Harry Coveleskie was too good for the Cracker batsmen, and the Lookouts got away to an easy victory. This even break gave the visitors the advantage of the series by three games to one and slightly blighted Atlanta's pennant hopes.

In the opener the home bunch won 7 to 2, while Chattanooga got away to a victory by a 6 to 2 count.

Compared to the farce exhibitions of Friday the battles were good. There was plenty of sensational fielding, a lot of timely hitting, good pitching, and the games rocked along fairly fast. It was a most welcome sight after the class of ball the umpires allowed in the double-header of Friday.

Manager Elberfeld contributed his usual line of kicking and was again shooed from the game. But this was to be expected and was taken as a matter of course by fandom.

It was Carl Thompson versus Howell in the opener, and Carl got away with a good game. He allowed a very few hits, and after the first inning there was nothing to it but an Atlanta victory. Two runs were scored off the collegian in the first round, and after that he was most scimpy with his hits. Three hits gave the visitors two runs in the opener, and from then until the end of the game just four more safeties were counted.

Howell was put in a bad hole from the very start by erratic fielding back of him. It served to take the heart from his work and he was hit safely ten times, hits coming in most every round, and he was always in a bad hole. Manush and Bisland led with the willow with five of the ten hits Manush getting three. Bisland had a grand day in the field.

BISLAND'S PLAY.

Many are the sensational plays made on the local diamond this season but fandom has yet to see anything that eclipsed the sensational stop and throw by Bisland when he fielded Street's hit in the third. Flick was on first when Street hit one directly over second. It looked good for a sure hit but Bisland went back of the bag, picked it up and while on the run tossed the ball back of him to Wally Smith for a force out of Flick. While the stop was good the throw was much better.

Bisland got away with seven assists and a putout during the game and came through with a couple of bingles.

The second game was all Chattanooga's after the Crackers failed to get Coveleskie in a hole by scoring in the third round. In this round a base on balls and two hits put the team in line for a good lead but slow base running nipped a rally in any chance for a tally. It was not until Chattanooga had gained a 2-0 lead that the Crackers were able to tally and by then Coveleskie had gained sufficient confidence to hold the battle safe.

Both Coveleskie and Love began like a house afire. The Pole fanned the first three batters who faced him while Love whiffed five men in the first three rounds. After this, however, the lookouts got next to the elongated left hander and it was all off. The Lookout hurler continued his good work though he was hit safely 6 times.

Harry Welchonce did some excellent fielding and hitting in the game. He made two hits, one for three bags, and got off with 2 putouts, both of which were of the corking good variety. Graff, the visiting third sacker, put up grand ball throughout the afternoon and from all appearances he looks to be the best fielding third sacker who has been seen here this season. He is supposed to be with the slap stick but it was not shown Saturday.

John Voss essayed to do the flinging after Love was taken out in the sixth and while he seemed to show a lot of good stuff he could not prevent a couple of tallies. By the time he went to the firing line the Lookouts had won and were not to be robbed of their hits.

Tennis Stars Are Matched

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 16.—The placing of the aspirants for national lawn tennis honors in the all-comers' tournament, which begins Monday on the Casino courts, was made today by association officials. The matrices include virtually the entire American aggregation of lawn tennis stars and it is expected that the finals will not be reached until the middle of the second week.

In making public the result of the draw, President R. D. Wrenn announced that the championship match in doubles would be played Wednesday, instead of Monday, as has usually been the case. The postponement is due to the desire to give the present title holders, M. E. McLoughlin and T. C. Bundy, of California, a few days for practice, as they have not played together since the early spring. The doubles match will be a Pacific coast affair, McLoughlin and Bundy defending against two other Californians, John R. Strachan and Clarence J. Griffin.

The association officials are arranging a complimentary subscription dinner in honor of the Davis cup team to be held in New York after the all-comers' tournament.

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

Memphis took somewhat off of Montgomery's lead by slipping a five inning game over on the leaders before rain called it in. Mobile was rained out and tied, with the Barons and Atlanta remained stationary in the percentage column.

The Giants lost a game, but the Phillies lost two, failing still further above the would-be champs.

The Naps snowed their rivals, the Athletics, under by an overwhelming majority, climbing still closer to them. The Senators won also, so their relative stand with the Naps is unchanged.

LEADER WHO KNOWS HOW TO MANAGE

CARLETON "GLADYS" MOLESWORTH

MOLEY HOLDS BIG RECORD

In the seventeen years Carleton Molesworth played regularly in several different leagues he maintained a batting average of .314. Considering that he was in all classes of ball, this is indeed a good mark and stamps him as a great batter. And even when he quit active work he was far from being all in.

Molesworth's greatest work has been with the Birmingham club. He came to the Barons in 1906 and played actively for six years and was always right up around the .300 mark. The past two years he has been manager and not actively in the game.

Here is Molesworth's playing record with batting marks:

1895, Washington	.297
1896, Rockford	.325
1897, Shamoykin	.427
1898, Pelmara	.325
1899, Binghamton	.347
1900, Schenectady	.300
1901, Chattanooga	.320
1902, Chattanooga	.337
1903, Montgomery	.319
1904, Montgomery	.319
1905, Montgomery	.322
1906, Birmingham	.275
1907, Birmingham	.303
1908, Birmingham	.298
1909, Birmingham	.288
1910, Birmingham	.300

MUST HAVE FAIR SHOW TINKER TELLS HERMANN

Red Boss Does Not Believe in Throwing Away Young Players—They Should Be Used to Build Up Club

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—Joe Tinker, manager of the Cincinnati National league team, is ready to quit, he says, unless President Garry Herrmann of the club changes his policies.

Tinker today received a telegram from President Herrmann, notifying him that he had "violated baseball law" by publicly airing the differences in the club and requesting him to make no further statements at present. In refusing to be "gagged," as he termed it, Manager Tinker said:

"I realize I must take a stand with regard to the management of this club or step out. The team's showing has been a great disappointment to all concerned and I have held off as long as I could because I felt I am not a success myself, that the club has not been making money, owing to its low standard, and therefore that it was up to me to stand for some things I would not otherwise have endured.

"But when I found that our players were being sold outright to minor league clubs without options, and that I was constantly being urged to cut off players against my best judgment without waiting for a chance to make a trade which would help the team, I decided I must make a stand.

"If this statement does not meet with the approval of President Herrmann I can't help it and he has the right to let me out at any time. I would rather go out to my fruit farm in Oregon than to try to handle a club when I am not backed up by the owners."

Next Battles With Barons

Atlanta Managed to Take Three in Row Upon the Last Clash

"Gladys" Molesworth and his bold Barons will invade the Cracker camp Monday for a three days' encampment. The Barons remember with dry grins the last series with the Crackers, when they were trounced and defeated by an avalanche of hits, and even the mighty Prough was humbled in his great stride toward a record of straight wins.

The Crackers hit at a terrific rate on that memorable visit to Slagtown, and the Barons are out to avenge their defeat, so it looks as if the series will be a good one. The Crackers are a bit peeved themselves from the sting of the Noogas decisive defeat of three games out of four.

If the Crackers can get started on this series perhaps their old stride will come back and the pennant will not be so much out of the question.

Beginning with Monday's game, the starting time will be shoved up a few minutes. The games will start at 3:30 instead of 4 o'clock.

HANDLING BALL PLAYERS IS EASY FOR MOLESWORTH

Familiar with the likes and dislikes of ball players through the fact that he long was a player under many different types of managers, Carleton Molesworth, the roly poly leader of the Birmingham club, makes a most ideal boss. To be a successful leader, a man must know what the average ball player expects, and this knowledge can only be gained through many years of service as a player.

At Birmingham Molesworth has been a great success. As a player he always gave the club his best efforts and was popular with both players and fans, all of which caused him to be named manager some three seasons ago. And he jumped into the managerial work just like he had been used to it all his life, putting the Alabama village on the baseball map his first year as leader. And since then he has improved the baseball status of the Alabama city most wonderfully, last year getting a pennant in rather easy fashion, and this season being right in the running.

""Gladys," as the Baron leader is familiarly known, is the kind who treats his players alike. He plays no favorites and is not the kind who has a thousand or so rules. He believes in allowing each player to do as he wishes when off the field, provided they keep in physical condition and play to win. He always ways to play the game. All he wants is the best his men have, and their regard for him causes them to give him this kind of service all the while.

As an outfielder for the Birmingham club, Molesworth is quite well known by all fandom. His peculiar position at the plate made it hard for the hurlers to get them over to him, and often he would walk from three to four times each game. He had the crouch stance and you had to put the ball right under his neck to get it over the rubber. This made it difficult to get the ball over without hitting the roly poly boy.

In Birmingham Molesworth is popular with fandom and the club owners. Last season, though he won a flag, there was a move by some disgruntled scribes to have Molesworth ousted as leader, but this went by the owners refusing to listen to any pretty grievances against a player who had been as fair and hard-working as Moley.

Low Score For D. Brown

In the qualifying round over the East Lake golf links Saturday afternoon for the Lane trophy Dowdel Brown led the field by turning a card of 78. There were forty players to qualify, all the scores being low.

The tourney is divided into five flights of eight each and red play for the different cups is going to be strenuous, all the players in the different flights being very evenly matched. The East Lake links are now just recovering from a bit of work they have undergone and are in fine shape. The putting greens are good, having returned to their usual good condition and this enables the crack players to go the round with their usual accuracy and low scores.

The eight players in the first flight who will fight it out for the trophy are Dowdel Brown, Perry Adair, W. R. Tichenor, T. B. Payne, C. E. Corwin, W. F. Spalding, H. P. D. Corwee and J. A. Allen.

Pacific Boys Copped Match

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., J. S. Strachan and C. J. Griffin, the Pacific coast doubles lawn tennis champions distinguished themselves in sensational tennis here this afternoon by defeating W. A. Larned and W. J. Clothier, both former national champions in the singles, in the final of the doubles match at the Meadow club. The match went the route, 3-6, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Larned, seven times holder of the national singles title, went to pieces in the end. Clothier worked with a will, but could not withstand the rapid fire of the California boys.

Clothier won the singles by defeating G. F. Touchard in easy fashion, 6-2, 6-1, 6-3.

Golf Champions to Meet

The national open golf championships at the Country club, Brookline, near Boston, will begin one day later than recently announced, opening on Monday, September 15. It will mean two days to qualify.

ALPERMAN IS IN ATLANTA

Whitey Alperman, the Atlanta field captain who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis in Mobile, arrived in Atlanta on Saturday looking a bit feeble, but in good health. He will be here for three or four days before leaving for his home in Pittsburg.

The illness to Whitey came at a time when the Atlanta club was making a desperate effort to get right in the thick of the pennant fight, and greatly hurt the chances. He is known as a most heady ball player and was of great service to the Crackers in the upward march the team began just before he was taken ill.

During his four weeks' stay in the Mobile sanitarium Whitey lost twenty-five pounds, and right now looks a bit light, but in good health. He says he feels better than ever before and will surely be back with the Cracker team when the 1914 race is started. Whitey is pulling for the locals to hit a fast stride on the present home stay and get out in front of the race. He believes the strength to do it is here, and the team only has to get started to oust both Mobile and Montgomery.

COBB VS. JACKSON

Saturday's results in the Cobb-Jackson race for batting honors in the American league found Jackson breaking Friday's tie by pounding two hits out of three times up, while Cobb did not connect safely but once out of his four trips to the plate.

Building Club Of Youngsters For 1914 Race

Manager Smith Is Not Overlooking Any Young Stars. The Young Men Are the Ball Players of Tomorrow

While the Atlanta ball club has far from abandoned all hope for the Southern League pennant one of the main wishes of Manager Smith and the directors is to build up a good team to begin the 1914 season and with this idea in view they are picking up a lot of most promising young material so as not to be hampered by a poor get away. Young stars are being recalled and bought and others will soon be drafted.

The plan of the local club for the future is to secure young players and develop them. It is all right to have a few veterans to aid in teaching the youngsters the rudiments of the game but in the main the best ball club is the one made up of ambitious youngsters who are out to always deliver and get a trial in higher company.

In this day of advanced baseball every minor league manager is realizing more and more with the running of each race that it pays to get young players. In the first place they turn out better and more enthusiastic baseball and secondly they can be sold and keep the team in the running from a financial viewpoint. In fact some of the major league outfits are now buying minor league clubs just to develop young players. They all figure they will get better youngsters and at the same time save money, as all star players now cost a bunch of money and are hard to land.

YOUNGSTERS ON HAND.

Already the local bunch has picked up a number of young players and will shortly land others. Harry Holland, Rivington Bisland, Harry Chapman, Joe Conzelman, Carl Thompson, John Voss and Jacinto Calvo are all youngsters at the game and give promise of being real stars in a comparatively short time. Then, too, Walter Keating, Hammond Reynolds and Albert Nixon, who were farmed this season, have been recalled and will add to the long list of young players who will work for places on the 1914 squad.

The Cracker club, as it now stands, has very few old players but in 1914 it will be even younger. Joe Agler and Wallace Smith have already been lost while there is a chance that both Harry Welchonce and Tommy Long will go up. Neither of these boys are what would be termed veterans and they will be more than apt to be here if there is any chance to land them. They can hit and that is what is needed on a first class ball club.

TO DRAFT YOUNGSTERS.

Manager Smith now has in mind several young players who are starring in bush leagues whom he will draft. He has watched them closely and is sure they are ripe for faster company and has determined to make a riffle to get them. Of course there is a chance they will be nabbed before he gets a chance to use the draft but here's hoping they will be secured for Bill knows a player when he sees him and there must be something to those he is after.

COUPLE FOR CUBS

(By Associated Press.)

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 16.—Cheney's twirling was a big factor in the two games which Chicago won here today by 4 to 3 and 8 to 3. In the opening test the visitors made nearly all of their hits off Mayer count. Cheney went to the visitors' rescue in the eighth and returned to the rubber in the second game and kept Philadelphia's hits scattered except in two innings. Two home runs by Zimmerman and one by Archer, with three singles and some passes caused Rixey to leave the field in the sixth inning with Chicago ahead by 7 to 2. Manager Dodn sent in new several extra players, but could not get up a rally. Score:

DIVIDED TWO

(By Associated Press.)

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 16.—St. Louis and Brooklyn divided today's double-header, the visitors taking the first 1 to 0 and the home team the second 14 to 5. "Slim" Sallee in the first game had the Superbas at his mercy and Yingling was almost equally effective, but the Cardinals got him for two hits and a sacrifice fly right at the start, scoring the only run of the game.

The other contest was a walk-away for the locals who hammered Griner, Geyer and Trekell for twenty hits, including four home runs.

BOSTON BEST

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16.—While Leonard was invincible in the pinches, his teammates hit Leverenz when hits meant runs, Boston winning from St. Louis 4 to 0. About half the spectators, angered by a decision of Umpire Connolly, left the park in the eighth inning. Manager Stovall announced this afternoon he probably would not play again this year. The local manager is troubled with bruised hands, which have given him much trouble all season. "Bunny" Brief will guard the initial corner. Score:

American League Stars Still Bat Around .390—Speaker Bats .371—Henrickson Is Next

TWO GREAT STARS IN ONE CLUB

WALTER JOHNSON.

Long Tie Game By Fox's Club

JOE BOEHLING.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Fortunate indeed is Clark Griffith in possessing two such pitchers as Walter Johnson, the veteran and Joe Boehling, the youngster.

Of course, Boehling is still something of an experiment, but if he makes good in the future on his remarkable showing for this season, the Washington club will then possess the two best pitchers in baseball. With a few more good players Griffith would probably beat out the Athletics for the American League pennant. But he hasn't the players.

Macon Splits Double Fray

MACON, Ga., Aug. 16.—Macon and Savannah divided a double-header today, the visitors taking the first by 11 to 4, and the locals the second by 5 to 3. Pitcher Robertson was put out of the game and the grounds in the second game by Umpire Pender for kicking on decision of balls and strikes.

Seven men had faced him. He walked two and had given up three hits, two scoring. Mayer relieved him and fanned the first batter up. Manager Dolan planted Gordon in the fifth inning and struck out the next batter up. The second game was featured by heavy slugging, eight two-baggers being made during the game. Dowell was the hitting star, getting a triple, two doubles and a single. Score:

Waco Wins

Waco defeated Bremen Friday 10 to 7 in a very exciting game, largely attended.

The Waco boys' slugging was too much for the Bremen idol and in the third inning he retired in favor of Baskin who fared but little better.

Jeter was in the box for Waco and had the boys on the hip all through the game and after the first inning but two runs were made off of his delivery.

P. Parker caught a beautiful game for the Waco boys and not a man stole a base.

Batteries: Bremen, C. Edwards. Baskin and Norton; Waco G. Jeter and P. Parker.

Prough Now Has Margin On the Pole

With Winning Streak Broken, Birmingham Hurler Still Leads Covaleskie by 123 Points

There is a very pretty battle going on for the leadership of the Southern league in pitching honors. Bill Prough, Birmingham's marvel, had his winning streak rudely jostled by the Crackers last week, but he still has a good margin over Covaleskie.

Two Are Taken By Jay Outfit

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 16.—Jacksonville took both games of a double-header today. Both contests were exciting all the way through and were marked by good pitching and excellent fielding. In the second game Burmeister pitched remarkable ball. Only two of the Albany crew reached first base and only twenty-one men faced the Pensacola boy in seven innings of play.

The throwing of Bilting was a feature. Luhrson who pitched the second game for the Babies was sold today to the Pittsburg club of the National league and will join the club in New York at once. Scores:

Coveleskie in Double Bills

Chattanooga Club Out to Get Right Up With Leading Outfits

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 16.—Southern league fans are very likely to see Harry Coveleskie do the iron-man stunt during the closing days of the present season. Two causes are practically certain to effect the Hun's appearance unusually often during the remaining three weeks. The first is the belief that the Lookouts have an excellent chance to finish ahead of both the Crackers and Barons and right on the heels of the rag winner, and the second is that Covey is going to make a great effort to capture the batting medal offered by Randolph Rose, of this city.

The showing of the Barons before the Crackers at Rickwood field in which Smithfren made a clean sweep of the series and broke Prough's string of ten straight, and the success of the Lookouts in their invasion of the Georgia capital has convinced Elberfeld that he can finish as well as third by a spurt on the final stretch, and the fact that Coveleskie is the man who can carry the 'Noogan colors past the mounts of Smith and Molesworth.

Coveleskie has really hurled phenomenal ball this season, but poor support and a bad break in the pinches has deprived the Hun of the fame to which it is generally conceded he deserves at present. Harry believes, however, that by a spurt he can pass both Prough and Elmer Brown in view of the slump which their clubs appear to be suffering.

Too Much Cooper Again!

Smyrna, after winning 15 straight games, went down in defeat before the strong Standard Oil company team.

Cooper, for Standard Oil company, pitched great ball and did not allow a man to reach second until after two were down in the ninth. He was relieved in the ninth by Cannon. Then Cannon was relieved by Temple, who only threw two balls and retired the side. The entire S. O. team played good ball and hit when hits were needed.

Dunn, for Smyrna, was hit hard and was relieved by Kane in the fifth, who pitched good ball, Reynolds played star ball at first, bringing down several wild heaves.

Fancy Diver Will Defend His Title

JOHN F. DUNN.

John F. Dunn, of Yale, has announced that he will defend the title of high fancy diving national champion, which he captured last summer off the thirty-foot regulation tower. This is welcome news, for he was seriously injured last season after practicing an unusually difficult feat, and it was feared he would be unable to brave the dangers of the tall structure this season.

Dunn's first exhibition off the high platform since his recovery will take place at Travers Island, New York, August 23, when the metropolitan championship is to be competed for. His work will afford a good chance to study his form and size up his prospects of defeating the western candidates, Gaidick and Wohlfeld, who are expected to give him a hot fight for his laurels.

Dunn failed to beat McAleenan and Wohlfeld at the indoor national meet off the ten-foot springboard, but he was in very lady physical condition at the time, and he may now turn the tables on them at his favorite height.

Atlantic City Star to Try To Sail Boat

George B. Gale, Who Has Almost Been Raised in a Boat May Have Charge of the American Defender

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 16.—Atlantic City, cradle of American yachting and the only place in the country, perhaps, where the youngsters soon after they are able to walk get into sail boats and race one another instead of playing marbles, baseball, etc., has gone yachting mad. Recent developments indicate that Captain George B. Gale, who sails a sixty-foot sloop at the inlet, will be selected to defend the cup against the Lipton invader in 1914.

There has been gossip all summer regarding Gale's candidacy for America's highest yachting honor, but now the talk has become quite exciting in hotel corridors, on the boardwalk and streets when it was learned that there had been unearthed among some old papers a letter dated City Island, October 25, from Captain Charles Barr, who, as everybody remembers, successfully defended the cup several years ago.

The latter was addressed to Bart Bullock, a local yachtsman, and was in acknowledgment of congratulations. In the communication Captain Barr took occasion to say that he was glad to receive words of praise from Atlantic City, a place where so many good yachtsmen lived, and he expressed therein the wish that some day Captain Gale, whom he knew personally, might sail a defender.

"For," concluded Barr, "he is a grand sailor, and his knowledge of boats and sailing, when I talked to him on those subjects, impressed me greatly."

Captain Barr's letter was forwarded to the regatta committee of the New York yacht club in hopes that it might add more weight to the already large number of Gale's taking part in the elimination races to be held next spring, at which time a defender will be decided upon. Captain Gale's supporters declare he will outlast all the others in the regatta and thereby gain the right to handle the boat which will represent America.

GIVE SKIPPER CHANCE.

With the object in view of giving the Atlantic City man an opportunity to demonstrate his skill as a racing skipper, many influential residents of this and other cities have petitioned the New York Yacht club in Gale's behalf. Indorsements already have been sent to the same body by the city commissioners, Atlantic City Business league, Atlantic City Yacht club, Yachtsmen's club of Philadelphia, Ocean City Motor boat club, and other boating organizations along the coast. Within a fortnight a committee of the best citizens of the resort, headed by Mayor Riddle will go to New York to personally plead Captain Gale's case before the New York Yacht club's officials.

Captain Gale is forty-one years old. He does not look thirty. He has been sailing boats of all descriptions since he was ten. During that time he has won more than 500 races. At the annual regatta of the Atlantic City Yachtmen's association the blue ribbon event of the coast, in which participate the owners of pleasure sloops at the inlet, all of whom are great sailors, Gale has been beaten but twice and those defeats were due to accidents.

Captain Gale is a former city councilman. He has a pleasing personality, is well educated and is as much at ease in evening clothes as he is in his natty yachting suit.

Got Fadeaway By Accident

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 16.—Cy Falkenberg, the Cleveland right-handed pitcher, master of the fadeaway ball, which has gummed up the batting machinery of many a ball club this season, confesses that he learned by accident how to throw the deceptive twist. Nap Rucker had the same experience in finding his famous drop.

When Cy left the University of Illinois and broke into professional ball, his pitching repertoire consisted of a dazzling fast ball, a good curve and good control.

Cy served his apprenticeship in the Tri-State and Eastern leagues, from which he graduated to Washington. There he was advised to add a slow ball to his collection of pitching stuff.

He assisted Coach Huff to coach the University of Illinois team the following spring, and at the same time worked on that slow ball. He noted a peculiar thing.

Slow balls one afternoon, and remembered he had taken the wrong grip on the ball. His catcher was forced to drop to his knees to stop the sphere.

Falky tried the "wrong" grip again and to his amazement saw the ball take that same sudden shoot.

"I gues I've found something," he said to his catcher. He tried again and again with success, and then decided he would try the ball on the first batsman who faced him. The experiment proved a huge success, for the batter struck at nothing two feet above the ball.

When Bris Lord left the Naps to go to the Athletics he carried with him a tip on how to beat Falky when he used the fadeaway. Cy didn't catch on for a long time. When he did he changed his style of delivery. The Athletics, who had been itchin' 'em h. o. w. again as much mystified as ever by the odd-breaking ball.

TENNIS CUP HELD UP AT CUSTOMS OFFICE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—Through some technicality, the customs authorities have impounded the Davis international tennis cup, brought over recently after the victory of the American team in England. The cup originally was taken from this country and is not dutiable returning, but the customs house refused to permit its entrance until an inquiry had been made.

CARRIGAN AND BEDIENT NOW INSTEAD OF STAHL AND WOOD

They don't look like the same old Red Sox that won the world's baseball championship under Jake Stahl.

Then it was "Smoky Joe" Wood who burned up the American league and later pitched the Giants into a state of coma in the big series; and it was Jake Stahl who was hailed as the man-

But that was last year.

Now, Stahl is out of a baseball job and is worrying about his next meal just like any man who works at banking as a pastime.

And Hugh Bedient, who was a recruit last year and broke into the world's series as a lost hope, is doing the "Smoky Joe" act for Manager Carrigan's successor to Stahl as leader of the title holders.

Such are the fortunes of youth and ageand the shifts of baseball life.

Can't Kid Ump About His Sight

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 16.—Hascost Hardgrove, of the Barons, just $10 to announce what vocation he intended to follow when he retired from baseball. It all happened in Atlanta when the Barons were there on their last invasion. Bill Hart was the man that asked for the information.

"What do you intend to do, Hardgrove," asked Hart, "when you get too old to play baseball?"

"Oh! I'll get a job umpiring," answered the Baron star, "as soon as I get blind enough." Hart held up ten fingers as thanks.

Alfredo de Oro, holder of the three-cushion billiard title, will defend it against Benny Allen, of Kansas City, in New York September 15 to 17.

No Opponents For Langford; Box Jeannette

Two Have Fought No Less Than Eight Times, but Owing to Lack of Good Men, Will Have to Again Clash

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Now that Sam Langford has landed in the United States once more there seems nothing else for him to do but to resume battling Joe Jeanette. These men have met no less than eight times. At present the record stands at three wins on points for Langford and one for Jeanette, with two draws and two no-decision affairs.

Their last meeting was in Madison Square garden in 1911, and it was the best heavy-weight battle fought in that arena since the present boxing law was enacted. Since then Jeanette has undoubtedly gone back a trifle. Never since has he shown himself to be in such superb form. Possibly the fact that the men he has been called upon to meet did not warrant much preparation on his part may account for his subsequent loss of speed and force. At any rate, it has been quite noticeable that Jeannette has never since shown himself to be the same magnificent physical specimen he was when he climbed through the ropes that night at the garden.

It is hardly to be expected that Langford himself has improved during his two years' absence in Australia. As a rule the climate of the island continent does not improve white American fighters, although it may have no ill effect upon a negro. Still Langford is only twenty-seven years of age, so he ought to be at his best right now. According to Hugh McIntosh, who promoted most of his bouts while in Australia, Langford is better than ever. If such is the case Jeanette cannot be expected to do as well as formerly if they meet again.

None of their battles has been over fifteen rounds' duration. Jeanette has always insisted that he would win decisively in a finish fight. Probably Langford himself once entertained a similar idea, for he would never consent to meet the Hoboken negro in a long contest. The pair were tentatively matched for twenty rounds at San Francisco shortly after their last encounter in the garden, but Lanaford sailed away for Australia without waiting to put the matter to a test.

GLENN SHOWED NERVE WHEN HIS TIRE BLEW

Richards Captured Big Sweepstake Event, With Glenn Coming Second

A slim crowd witnessed the motordrome program which was postponed from Friday night and run off Saturday. The card was, however, up to the average put on by Manager Hudson, although it lacked the thrills of some of the past races.

The time in the first heat of the motordrome purse race was good. This time, 41 2-5 was made by Graves. The time in the other heats was rather slow.

Morty Graves captured the motordrome purse, winning the final two-mile heat in 1:24 2-5. Renel came second and Schwartz third. Lockner, the only other rider to qualify was left behind.

The special match race was hotly contested, though slow. Graves won the first heat and Schwartz the second. The third heat was run to a dead finish by Lockner and Schwartz, time 2:11 1-5 (for 3 miles.) The heat was immediately run off between these two riders, Schwartz winning easily. This gave him the race as he had won the second heat also.

Tex Richards sewed up the Velodrome de Buffalo sweepstakes race by winning the first two heats hands down, thereby amassing twenty points. In this race ten points were awarded to the winner of each heat, six to second man and three to third. At the beginning of the third heat Richards had 20 points, and Luther and Renel were tied for second with 9 points. In the third heat, Harry Glenn, the Atlanta boy, beat these two riders out by riding Richards down and winning the heat by a narrow margin. Making the final score:

Richards, 26; Glenn, 10; Luther, 9; Renel, 9.

Harry Glenn deserves special mention for his good showing in this race. In the second heat he was well up in front when he burst his rear tire and only saved himself from a spill by sticking to the track warily. This, however, did not break his nerve, and when he had his tire put back he took the lead in the third heat and kept it all the way, outriding Tex Richards, who fairly scorched his back wheel.

World's Series Proves Rubber

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Basing his prediction on the assumption that the Giants and Athletics will be the contenders, Frank Chance forecasts a remarkable struggle for world's championship honors this autumn.

"The leaders of the two leagues appear to be very evenly matched," said Chance, in discussing the teams, "and I look for a very close, exciting series. In my opinion the winning club will be the one that gets the early 'breaks' in the play. You can't eliminate the 'breaks' in baseball, and in a series as important and as short as the world's championship it has always proved a very prominent factor.

Elberfeld Will Return To Lookout Infield

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 16.—Elberfeld expects to return regularly to the infield during the final home stay of the Noogans and switch Dee Walsh to center field. The Kid is just now completely recovering from the blow dealt him by Brackenridge. In assuming his old position the Kid is actuated by the belief that it will strengthen the club for its final spurt and by the desire to make a study of Walsh's work in the outfield.

Dee was purchased from the Browns largely with thes intention of placing him in the garden, and it is not at all improbable that he will be seen in the outer defense next season. Walsh welcomes the change. He believes that he will hit and field better.

In this country it costs only 25 cents to see a bicycle or motorcycle race, but in Paris the Frenchmen pay $4.50 for seats in the oval. It is carpeted there and otherwise made attractive, wines and refreshments being served within the exclusive area.

Tire Prices Down
How We Did It Without Skimping On the Costliest Tire That's Built

Here are a few amazing facts which every tire user should know.

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires used to cost one-fifth more than other standard tires. And yet they gained the topmost place in Tiredom.

Three things caused this extra price.

In the base of each tire we vulcanize six flat bands of 126 braided wires. It is thus that we make a hookless tire—a tire that can't be rim-cut.

Then every No-Rim-Cut gets the "On-Air Cure." It is final-vulcanized on air bags. This is done to save blow-outs. It adds to our tire cost $1,500 per day.

Then we use in each tread base a patent "rivet" fabric. We paid $50,000 for this feature to prevent tread separation.

Now No Extra Price

Now these same tires, with all of these features, cost you no extra price. Not a standard tire of any type costs you any less.

And these are the reasons:

Our overhead cost, in days of small output, ran as high as thirty per cent.

It is now less than six per cent. Our multiplied output, in this one way, has cut our tire cost twenty-four per cent.

We have built new factories with modern equipment, with every new invention in labor-saving machinery.

We have clung to small capitalization. On this account we can and do keep our profits under 8½ per cent.

All these savings, as fast as we made them, went to users of our tires.

Note What Our Price Includes

Rival makers must in some way meet the Goodyear price. But please consider what our price includes.

A tire that never rim-cuts.

A tire built to save blow-outs, in a way so costly that no one else employs it.

That's Why They Outsell

Hundreds of thousands now use these tires. They far outsell any other. Yet the demand from users is now growing faster than ever before in our history.

That's for the reasons told you.

Rim-Cutting alone, with old-type tires, ruins 31.8 per cent—almost one tire in three. Blow-outs and loose treads, which our methods combat, are immensely costly items.

Our dealers are everywhere.

Select Court On Which to Play Matches

Americans Are Looking Around With a View of Finding Best Available Place for the Davis Cup Matches

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—Local lawn tennis enthusiasts are already asking where America will stage the Davis cup matches next year. The logical place would of course, be the new grounds of the West Side Lawn Tennis club at Forest Hills, L. I., which it had been hoped would be ready for occupancy next season.

Interest in the game of lawn tennis has so increased during the last four or five years that it is certain that a tremendous crowd will want to see the next cup matches. It is quite likely, too, that at least one tie will be played in this country in addition to the challenge round. Already West Side officials have discussed the possibility of Australia playing one of the preliminaries with Canada here in New York, although it would seem that if the Australians consented to come over and play the Canadians instead of going to Europe and playing England, France, Belgium or Germany, that Canada would want the matches to be held in either Winnipeg or Toronto in order to give a fillip to the game in the dominion. Of course, the ties between the European countries will all be played on the other side.

International tennis this year has certainly been prolific of surprises. Who would have thought that Maurice E. McLoughlin, the American champion, would be defeated, first by Anthony N. Wilding in the challenge round of the all-England tournament, and then by J. C. Parke in the challenge round of the Davis cup series? It was certainly lucky for the United States that Wilding was unable to come over here with the Australian team to play America in the tie, for had he visited us it looks now as though McLaughlin, Williams and Hackett would never have been sent to England.

Then the defeat of H. Roper-Barrett and C. P. Dixon, the English doubles champions, confounded the experts almost as much as the upset to the Californian. England confidently expected to win the doubles; in fact, that was the only match she did expect to win in the Davis cup series.

All these reversals, or so-called reversals, in form make for the good of the game. Tennis would be a poor game to watch and a poorer game to play if the winner of every set could be picked with confidence beforehand. No doubt there will be some more surprises sprung at Newport this month. It is pretty certain that McLoughlin will have to put up a wonderful game to retain his title.

McLoughlin Is Merely a Kid

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Maurice E. McLoughlin, who has made complete the supremacy of the Californians on the lawn tennis court by rounding out his career by returning the Dwight F. Davis international challenge cup to this country, is a thoroughly representative American player. He is but twenty-three years of age and he fulfilled his brilliant promise by winning the all-comers national championship at Newport last August.

McLoughlin was born at Carson City, Nev., January 7, 1890. It was when thirteen years of age that he took up the game in which he has won the highest American honors by taking both the national singles and doubles in the same year. This has not happened since 1905, when Beals C. Wright scored on both titles, in the doubles having Holcombe Ward as his partner. McLoughlin early in his career began to win championships, beginning with the junior titles in San Francisco. In 1905 he entered the California state championships, but did not win an important title until 1907, when he took the San Francisco city championship, and from that time on his rise has been rapid.

McLoughlin Returns

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Maurice E. McLoughlin, R. Norris Williams and Harold H. Hackett, the victorious American tennis players, who lifted the Davis cup, came back home today on the liner France. All will play in the national all-comers tournament at Newport beginning next Monday.

Greater Variety In Golf Courses

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—Variety of play is chief essential of modern golf course architecture. Different conditions of the land requires vastly different treatment to produce an eighteen hole link which will demand the hit of every shot test should be in the expert golfer's bag. Then again, every coarse should not be constructed for the sole pleasure and requirements of the expert. To strike a happy medium alike satisfactory to the expert and ordinary business man is what is desired near our large cities.

The National links in New Jersey, Lyopia in Massachusetts, and the National links on Long Island, are designed to thoroughly test the skill of the expert. If he can make a low score over these difficult links any ordinary course is merely a matter of swatting the ball and holding it out.

The old theory that a golf course should consist of the cup bunkers at from 100 to 150 yards ahead of every tee has given way to traps and mounds arranged in such a way that the short but sure driver can pick his way around the course nine or ten strokes behind the man who can make the longer carries.

A modern refinement to meet the conditions of the new lively ball is an increasing multiplicity of traps guarding the near approach to the green. Even a very short hole intelligently trapped around the green becomes a problem demanding the highest degree of skill.

35 horsepower Electric lights 114-inch wheelbase

Again the price comes down—

—again the value goes up!

—again we prove the power and possibilities of large production.

Last year we built 40,000 cars. This was not enough for the demand by nearly 10,000 cars. This year we will manufacture 50,000 cars (twice as many as we did two years ago) cover the car with additional value and what will strike you as most remarkable, make the price lower than ever. Such is the net economical result of manufacturing one type of automobile on an enormous scale.

You who have followed our success from season to season have watched our annual models grow in value and decline in price. And as our prices came down our production went up. We have always and unfailingly given the public more automobile for less money than any other manufacturer in the industry.

Here are the big 1914 facts!

The motor has been enlarged. The bore is 4 1-8 inch—stroke 4 1-2 inch. It is conservatively rated at 35 horsepower and will develop 50 miles an hour. It has a five bearing crankshaft and three bearings on the camshaft.

The wheelbase has been lengthened to 114-inches. This, as you know, is the average wheelbase of $1200 cars. And a long wheelbase eliminates road jars and rut jolts.

The tires are larger—33 x 4 inch Q. D. Large tires insure less upkeep expense, smoother operation and add to the appearance of the car.

The body design is symmetrical and graceful. It will appeal to those who admire the beauty of simplicity. It has a European cowl dash and full U doors (fore and rear) with disappearing hinges. The body is richly finished in dark Brewster green, edged with lighter green stripings and trimmed in heavy polished nickel and aluminum.

The upholstery is Turkish—soft, luxurious and comfortable. The rear back-cushion is 18 1-4 inch deep.

The foregoing is but a short digest of the newest Overland, yet it concisely itemizes and sums up the greater Overland value. When you fully realize what an exceptional and economical buy the 1914 Overland is—after the great value facts have become firmly lodged in your commercial and calculating brain, remember this—that in the very face of this increased value the price has again come down.

Price reduction is a condition that is controlled and regulated by factory facilities—the larger the manufacturer the lower he can market his merchandise. As we are producing more cars of this type than any other manufacturer in the world we can effect industrial economies which make it possible for us to market a car that will, on the average, cost you 30% less than any other similar model.

The Business Benefits of The Wilson Administration.

The wholesome business effect of the Government's assistance to Southern and Western banks for crop moving purposes is becoming broadly manifest. From the moment Secretary McAdoo announced that the treasury department stood ready to place fifty millions of its money in the agricultural sections on terms that could easily be met the entire country's financial temper grew more confident and composed. The offer within itself was reassuring; it allayed fear of an early autumn stringency and, furthermore, it showed not only that the administration was friendly and constructive in its attitude to business interests but also that it was prepared with definite plans and means to make this policy count.

Wall Street, for a while, was rather supercilious toward the McAdoo announcement. It assumed that there was no need for special aid to the South and the West and that the Government's proposition would meet with a chill response. But when conservative banking institutions throughout these sections hastened to avail themselves of the offer, there was no longer room for doubt or criticism of the administration's plan. Even the most reactionary financial centers were forced to admit its popularity and success.

Since then the markets have been steadily advancing. Stocks and bonds have appreciably strengthened and such fluctuations as we note today are of a perfectly normal character. Though the continued drouth in the West, which cuts down the corn crop, has had an influence somewhat adverse, conditions generally are sounder than they have been for months past. The outlook for abundant food harvests is still exceptionally bright. The underlying sources of prosperity are undisturbed; and since the Government's timely action to prevent a financial stringency, business of all kinds is moving hopefully forward.

The primary benefit of the administration's assistance is felt, of course, among agricultural interests but its good influence extends much further. By making fifty million dollars available for crop-moving needs, the treasury department has relieved New York and other financial centers of their usual responsibility in meeting such demands; and thus they will be able to accommodate mercantile and manufacturing enterprises without hesitancy or inconvenience. At this season in years gone by the South and West have found it difficult to get money for crop movements and at the same time, as a result of this extraordinary demand, commercial interests in other sections have been embarrassed. But when the Government placed its funds directly where the money was most urgently in demand, this pressure was removed from the country as a whole and business was enabled to go freely forward.

Besides the reassuring and stimulating effect which this policy has already produced, other important results are coming to pass. For one thing, the country is realizing that there is no natural reason why it should be financially dependent, as it has been, upon New York or any other monetary center. It is even now experiencing the healthful influence of a new freedom in this regard. Bankers and business men are asking, why not make permanently available the Government's plan by which we are now profiting? And that leads logically to another question: why not put into effect as soon as possible the pending banking and currency bill, of which this helpful plan is a distinctive feature?

The fact is the administration has not only rendered seasonable service to the South and West and helped immediate conditions the nation over, but it has also established a concrete, convincing example of the value of the banking and currency bill now before Congress. With tangible evidence on every hand showing the good sense and the good results of the principles which this measure embodies, the business public is naturally urging its adoption. The New York Commercial declares in this connection that private advices received by New York banks from out-of-town correspondents "prove to them that the banks of the interior will go to Chicago to attend the convention of the National Banking Association, prepared to support the currency bill as well as the policy of the treasury department to lend abundant funds for crop-moving purposes."

The Wilson administration has undoubtedly won the support of the country's sober financial thought in its plan for banking and currency reform. It has proved its ability as well as its sincere wish to deal wisely with those great economic issues on which business freedom and enduring prosperity depend. It has demonstrated that progressive government is truly sane government and that the American people have at length found a leadership under whom their political rights and their practical welfare are equally secure.

What the Legislature Did.

UNDER the old and comforting philosophy, all's well that ends well, the people of Georgia have ample cause to be gratified over the recent session of their General Assembly. In its earlier stages the legislative machinery moved with fearsome creaks and even as the latter days came on its workings seemed awkward and ineffectual. But when the final week arrived, with little to hope for and less achieved, there was a tightening of bolts, and a sudden infusion of high pressure; wheels began to hum, results came pouring forth and the session closed upon a record rich in accomplishment for the public good.

Some measures which deserved to pass were defeated or left in the lurch, such for instance as those for compulsory school attendance, free kindergartens, child labor reform, the establishment of a State bureau of vital statistics, the reclamation of swamp and overflow lands and provision for State aid and guidance in the building of highways. Yet, each of these causes is within itself so meritorious that it must ultimately win; and we may hope that next year they will all succeed. The important fact is that the new Legislature has proved itself distinctly forward-looking and has enacted a number of laws that will make for the State's material welfare and its social betterment.

Especially significant is the tax reform measure, the purpose of which is to bring about equality of taxation among all citizens and all counties and thereby assure the State of an income sufficient to meet public needs. Around this bill, the stormiest differences of the session were waged and good men honestly opposed its passage; but, happily, they were not the factional differences known in years gone by. The division arose over an economic, not a political idea. The issue has been settled and the new fiscal system will doubtless prove in every respect so far superior to the old that it will soon justify itself to its one-time opponents. Indeed, there is every reason to believe that tax equalization will lead to tax reduction, so that the State can deal more liberally with all the people and at the same time decrease the average citizen's burden. As soon as this fairer and more businesslike system is well under way, there should be no difficulty in paying the school teachers promptly, in supporting public institutions as they should be, in carrying forward enterprises for the development of our natural resources and in answering appeals for educational and social progress, by solving this fundamental problem of finance, the Legislature has cleared the way for a vast deal of generous, constructive work to come.

Bearing upon the general problem of revenues, though apart from the principal bill, several particular measures were enacted; one of these provides for an inheritance tax, another for an increase in the present occupation tax on foreign and domestic corporations, still another increases the tax on automatic bottling plants and another still, makes the automobile registration fee five dollars a year. From these various sources the State's income will no doubt derive an appreciable increase, though just how much can scarcely as yet be reckoned.

Other measures of far-reaching economic importance are the so-called "Blue Sky" law and a bill strengthening the State's insurance regulations. The former will protect the public against unsound or dishonest investment schemes. Georgia has hitherto offered easy fleecing to all manner of financial adventurers; it is said, indeed, that millions of dollars are lost in the State each year by victims of the "Quick-Rich Walshingfords." This condition has been as unfair to legitimate interests as to unsuspecting individuals. The new law by requiring all such propositions to be submitted to the Secretary of State will go far toward abolishing this evil. The insurance bill establishes stricter provisions for the withdrawal of foreign insurance companies from the State and affords necessary safeguards to the interests of policyholders.

No measure adopted at the recent session is more seasonable or more important to the State's business affairs than the resolution providing for a commission to investigate the future of the Western and Atlantic railroad. This is a matter which the Legislature could no longer have neglected without imperiling the worth and usefulness of a piece of property, the value of which is really incalculable. The present lease of the Western and Atlantic terminates a little more than six years hence. Within that time scores of weighty questions concerning its re-lease, its physical improvement, its extension to the sea, its terminal areas in Atlanta and Chattanooga and other practical interests must be determined. Clearly, therefore, if the State is to be prepared to act competently when the decisive moment arrives, it must begin without further delay a thorough inquiry into this many-sided problem. It is to be hoped that an able, trustworthy commission will at once be appointed and will enter vigorously upon its high task.

The public has become keenly interested during the past few months in the question of school book prices. Representative McCrory, of Schley, challenged State-wide attention when he asserted that a series of common school texts which cost a dollar and seventy-five cents in Georgia can be bought in Ontario for fifty-nine cents. The average school patron immediately wanted to know the reason why. The Legislature has done well, therefore, to adopt the McCrory resolution providing for an investigation of this subject. It need scarcely be said that the committee appointed for this purpose should approach its subject open-mindedly and with an eye single to the rights of the public and the welfare of the schools. Whether it would be advisable for the State itself to undertake the preparation of its school books is a question which only thorough and impartial inquiry can determine; but, if it appears that such plan is feasible, there is no reason why the State should not give the people its full benefit.

In addition to the important laws we have mentioned, relating to economic matters, the Legislature enacted a number of wholesome measures which concern human interests and social betterment. None among these is more noteworthy than the so-called "Mothers' Rights" bill which purges the Georgia law of a gross discrimination against mothers in cases where the legal custody of minor children is involved. Under the new and more enlightened statute, the father is given no prima facie right to the custody of a child but both parents are placed on an equality and the court, in exercising their discretion, are to consider primarily what award will best promote the welfare and happines of the child. By its enactment of this bill, the General Assembly rendered a service as wise as it was humane.

The Medical practice law will go far toward redeeming Georgia from a condition of affairs that was desperately dangerous to the public's health and the State's reputation. Its purpose is to elevate the standards of medical education and to protect the people against quackery. There is no profession so vitally related to the welfare of the individual and the home as that of the physician. It should be rigorously safeguarded against ignorance, incompetence or dishonor; and that is what the new law undertakes to do.

As an omen of our awakening to the importance of social problems, the bills establishing a State reformatory for wayward girls and providing for a system of legal probation are among the most gratifying the Legislature enacted. It is to be regretted that certain other measures of penal reform failed of passage; but these two will prove abundantly fruitful and they are a distinctive credit to everyone, either in the Legislature or out of it, who lent them support.

Considered in its entirety and judged by its general temper and drift, the Legislative session that adjourned last week was one of the most satisfying the State has known. Besides the acts we have briefly mentioned, it passed a number of other useful bills; and some that were reactionary in purpose it very properly killed or relegated. We congratulate the gentlemen of the House and the Senate on the results they have accomplished and we congratulate the public on the fruits which this goodly labor will bring forth.

There is real drouth out west—not prohibition, either.

It will be noticed, too, that President Wilson has put hope in the Washington team.

The best argument for the back to the farm movement is the harvest and the high prices thereof.

Democracy on the Job.

"We are ready to stay here till the snow flies to carry out the work before us."

Thus did Senator Simmons sum up the spirit and purpose of the recent Democratic caucus of the Senate in which it was determined that Congress should remain continuously in session until the banking and currency bill as well as the tariff bill had been disposed of. The wisdom of this virile and workmanly program cannot be doubted. It is at once expedient and just. It will probably hasten rather than retard action on the tariff. It brightens the prospect for an adequate currency measure. It forecasts the earliest possible settlement of these two great issues in which the country's business progress is so vitally concerned and which will remain, until they are settled, a source of disquietude and suspense.

The promptness and unanimity with which the Senate caucus put aside a suggestion that after the passage of the tariff bill a recess be taken until November the first or fifteenth, shows how loyally the Democratic congress is supporting the administration's plan of immediate banking and currency reform. The fact that the Senate as well as the House has taken the president's view of this matter is significant. A few months ago there was pronounced opposition in the Senate to the consideration of a banking and currency measure at the extra session. But this opposition, after moderating to a mild tolerance, is now transformed into a positive purpose that the banking and currency issue shall be settled without delay.

It will be interesting to note the effect of this decision on the progress of the tariff bill. Republican senators have let it be known that if the Democrats would only consent to an adjournment after the passage of the tariff bill, opposition to the latter measure would be virtually withdrawn but that if a continuance of the extra session were insisted upon, the minority would do its utmost to impede tariff legislation. The Democrats have sensibly concluded that the proper course is not to barter with the enemies of progressive and constructive government but to go forward independently, leaving the obstructionists to do their worst.

The declaration of this frank and uncompromising policy will have a clarifying effect. The Standpat minority must now assume full responsibility for the hindrance or legislation which the American people have demanded and for the unsettled conditions which delay on these important matters will prolong. Business interests are eager above all else for an end of the tariff debate. They have long foreseen the ultimate enactment of the pending bill; and they are prepared for such readjustments as it will make necessary. Their chief and, indeed, only concern today is that the changes which are bound to come sooner or later be put promptly into effect in order that every element of supense may be removed.

The minority cannot fail to see that by unnecessarily prolonging debate it will be doing the country a grave injustice; and the likelihood is that it will soon abandon so unpopular a course. Besides this, the Democratic majority in the Senate, though slender, is sufficient to hold the upper hand and, if needbe, it can force the Republicans either to talk incessantly from seven to ten hours a day or to permit the bill to go on its passage; and even the sturdiest lungs can sarcely stand such a test very long.

Hence the Democratic decision that currency and banking problems shall be considered in the Senate at this session will doubtless expedite the passage of the tariff bill as well as open the way for definite action on the companion measure. The outlook for banking and currency legislation in the near future grows continually more hopeful. The bill originally introduced in the House has been greatly improved, so much so, indeed, that banking influences themselves are now urging its passage. It has been approved by the House committee and will be approved in its amended form by the House caucus. Thenceforth, it will move forward "by calm seas and auspicious gales." It adoption by a large majority in the House is foregone; and since the Senate caucus has agreed that it shall be taken up immediately after the tariff is disposed of, its enactment before the extra session is over seems practically assured.

If these well-founded hopes are realized, the Wilson administration will have accomplished within the first six or eight months of its tenure more constructive legislation than the country has known for many decades past. Indeed, its record will be without parallel in American history. The passage of the tariff bill alone would be monumental but the achievement of two such tasks, both in behalf of the country's vital interests, will be little short of miraculous. And even now the miracle is taking form.

Straightening it Out

(New York World.)

The headway which John Lind is making in Mexico is due not more to the dignity of his mission and the firmness of the president whose personal representative he is than to the evident purpose of other nations to support the United States in its policy south of the Rio Grande. The American whose presence in Mexico was said a week ago to be "undesirable" is now in amicable but unofficial communication with General Huerta's minister of foreign relations. From this fact much may be expected.

Japan's rebuff to Feliz Diaz and Great Britain's announcement that its recognition of the usurper was simply as provisional president is now followed by the explanation that France and Germany recognized Huerta only because American Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, at the head of the diplomatic corps, last winter publicly congratulated him upon his accession to office. These disclosures are as full of admonition to Huerta as they are confirmatory of the mischievous activity of the representative of the United States in Mexico at the time of the overthrow and assassination of President Madero.

By his partisanship Ambassador Wilson involved his own country unnecessarily in a shameful revolution and at the same time misled several friendly powers which were inclined to act in harmony with ourselves. He is now engaged in abusing Great Britain for not standing by the Huerta government. It has been a bad business all around, but the president is straightening it out.

In Days of Doubt

(Chicago Tribune.)

The race for gold and the fame and power that go with it often raise gloomy reflections about modern man. He seems dwarfed and petty, incapable of great deeds and noble sacrifices. There are days—days of doubt—when even the most optimistic feel that there is little genuine kindness and less sincerity in this world, that philanthropy is but a bribe for fame, that genuine and disinterested friends of humanity are no more.

At the University of Wisconsin a professor retired the other day in comfortable, but not in affluent, circumstances. Yet wealth, immense wealth, and fame, and power, and monuments were within the reach of this professor. He brushed them aside as trifles with which the man who really loves his fellows can have nothing in common.

The professor—Dr. Samuel Moulton Babcock—was the discoverer of the milk test which goes by his name. The discovery enriched not only the American farmer but all the nations of the world. When Dr. Babcock announced his invention, in 1890, fortunes were at his feet. All he needed was to patent his discovery. But he did not patent it. He gave it free to humanity. Now, in his old age, he retires with no monuments to tell his glory, no libraries to blazon his fame, content in the knowledge that his services to humanity bore the stamp of genuine love and sincerity.

In days of doubt read Dr. Babcock's life and have your faith in man refreshed and strengthened.

In Defense of the Sparrow

And how wonderfully the dawn does come these early summer mornings! Before you could tell that the blue of night has changed to gray, the birds have turned in bed and twittered in their sleep. It may still be an hour before they will get up, that hour of semi-wakefulness which is the best of sleep, the hour you know you are still sleeping and yet can wake at will.

The sparrows are the first to chatter. In the old vine that grows outside the window of Georgina's bedroom they build and raise their three and four broods every year. There is much abuse to be heard concerning this rapacious creature, but I for one would stand in his defense.

In harvest time, no doubt, his only food is corn and in the cornfields can effect no little harm. But who counts all the gardening work he does in winter when the fields are bare? His only feeding then is the seed of weeds combined with caterpillars, worms and every grub which he can find. I always think of that when I see him busily engaged upon my raspberry canes. Would they be so good if he had not eaten the wireworms in the winter. The laborer is worthy of his hire.

And for their quarrels, too, the sparrows are abused.

Those sudden, noisy bickerings in the hedges are always sparrows settling their disputes. But I have known men and women—and do they make it up so soon?

Yet for all that abuse of him, the sparrow still confides and trusts in man. In waste places he will never build his nest, but wherever a man has set up his habitation, there a sparrow chooses his abode. I like his trustfulness and would not kill a sparrow if he sat and ate my raspberries before my eyes—and he does.

OUR DAILY BREAD

V.—BAKERS' ORGANIZATIONS.

By Frederic J. Haskin

Since some form of bread has existed almost from the beginning of the history of mankind, it is probable that the earliest organizations of industry were formed by the men who provided this bread. In the days of the early Egyptians public bakeries existed and the bakers formed a sort of league for the regulation of the price of bread and the cost of baking. Although baking since has been considered a domestic occupation, most of the bread used in that day was baked outside of the home and the men who controlled the strange cone-like ovens upon the outside of which the coiled cord-like cakes of bread were baked had a number of definite agreements as regards their business methods. An old account sheet found in the tomb with a mummy indicated that he had been a master baker in the time of the Pharaohs, and that he had been a leader in the development of his trade.

In the time of the Romans most of the bakers were Greeks, and they had several trade societies which were decidedly antagonistic to the bakers of other nationalities who attempted to ply the bakers' trade even in the Roman capital. Even when the Greeks, as a conquered race, were in a servile position to the Romans, freedom and special privileges were granted the bakers because of the importance of their work to the public well-being. The bakers of Pompeii and Herculaneum are known to have been a recognized privileged class, and formulas for the different kinds of baked food were authorized by a sort of committee elected annually by vote of all the bakers in the community.

The Bakers' guild of London is doubtless the oldest bakers' organization now in existence. Its history dates back to the tenth century, and it has detailed records extending to 1491. It is still a powerful organization. Its special privileges were revoked in the last century, and the guild is now a social and charitable organizations. It is in a prosperous condition, having a large amount of property. The old oath of brotherhood, as administered centuries ago, is still taken by its members, and many interesting old ceremonies are performed. In order to be a member of the guild a man must either be a baker or be a lineal descendant of a baker. Sometimes a candidate will be apprenticed to a baker for a short time in order to be eligible, because the old guild is no longer representative of the trade, although it is rich in its relics and records of the past. It has a fine building containing a magnificent banquet hall. The walls are of rare marble decorated with pictures showing the history of the guild. One of these represents the confirmation of the guild charter by King Edward in 1307.

The Bakers' guild of Munich is nearly as old as that of London, and is also rich in historical records. During the battle of Ampfing in 1322, when the armies of Ludwig of Bavaria fought Frederic the Handsome of Austria, the Bavarian monarch was surrounded by his enemies so that his soldiers could not reach him. The bakers of the town formed a solid body and secured their king. As soon as peace was restored King Ludwig showed his appreciation by erecting a large club house for the bakers of Munich. Another guild of Bavarian bakers is still in existence at Augsburg which has among its many relics a large solid gold drinking cup which, according to the inscription, was presented to it by a retired master baker of Venice in 1592. Bakers' guilds were in existence in France before the thirteenth century.

While these organizations at one time regulated all matters pertaining to their trade, they are now supplanted in actual authority in most countries by the more modern associations and bakers' trade unions which have now invaded most countries. In the United States the Association of Master Bakers has grown into a powerful organization which has had large influence in improving the bread of the entire world. The national association has branches in the different states, each of which has a large local membership. The larger body gives attention to matters pertaining to the real interests of the baking trade. It now supports a scholarship for research into chemical matters pertaining to bread. It is spending a considerable amount of money annually in educating the public as to the nutritive value of properly made baker's bread. A lecture has been prepared under the direction of the association, with stereopticon slides showing the various processes which take place in a modern bakery in the production of good bread. It has been delivered in different parts of the country with excellent results. This lecture, written for the purpose of Prof. Harry Snyder, of the University of Minnesota, follows the process from the planting of the wheat to the delivery of the crisply baked bread, and it is the baker's best rebuttal of the idea still prevailing in many localities that the bakery product contains drugs or other injurious matter, or that there is any lack of sanitary precaution in its manufacture.

The organization is composed of master bakers and does not take up the matters which properly pertain to a trade union. While its membership includes the heads of most of the large baking firms of the country, some of whom are responsible for an output averaging 100,000 loaves of bread a day, it is equally helpful to the small baker who is naturally at some disadvantage. The association is interested in labor from the standpoint of the employer desiring to secure competent help. This is not always easy because the supply of really capable bakers is always insufficient to meet the demand. One of the matters under the consideration of the National Master Bakers' association has been the establishment of a bakers' trade school where young men shall be able to secure the highest degree of technical knowledge in the art of baking. No such institution is now in existence in this country, and the courses of training for bakers which exist in some few institutions are incomplete, if not impractical.

The superior machinery used in American bakeries, no less than the superiority of the greater part of American milled flour, has placed American bread ahead of all others. The closest co-operation exists among the bakers' organizations of the world. A feature of the official journal of the American association is the exchange of formulas and directions for making bakery products which are contributed by bakers representing all of the leading nations of the world.

In England the National Association of Master Bakers of Great Britain and Ireland was founded in 1887, and now numbers over 3,000 members. Separate from this is the Scottish Association of Master Bakers, and both are similar in scope to the American organization, having for their object the promotion and protection of the trade in every way.

In Germany the most extensive organization is the "Germania," which has several branches such as the "Nordwest," the "Granken," the "Saxonia," and others, their names indicating their location. In Austria an organization called "Austria" includes the leading bakers of that country. In addition to these are trade unions which look after the sick and death benefits as well as other matters affecting the interest of the journeymen bakers. Italy has no general organization, although one is in contemplation because of the increased interest in bread improvement throughout the country. In Spain the first publication devoted to the interest of the baking trade has been recently established at Barcelona. It is known as "El Pandora," and is the official organ of the "Gremium," a bakers' organization existing in most of the larger towns.

COMMERCIAL SCHOOL AT TECH THIS FALL

Local Alumni and Business Men to Support New School Which Opens in September

With the completion of definite plans for the inception of a school of commerce in conjunction with the Georgia School of Technology, comes the authorized announcement from Tech authorities that the school will be open this fall when the 1913-14 term begins.

In 1911 the movement toward this result was started by W. M. Farnbrough, now president of the alumni association of Georgia Tech. From a small beginning it progressed each term until now the chair of business science at Tech gives way to the completely organized department of commerce. The new school is financed not by the state, but by members of the alumni association, who have underwritten 60 per cent of the guarantees, and by business and professional men of Atlanta, who have underwritten the remaining 40 per cent. The plans in detail have been compiled from information furnished by other schools and educators, and adjusted to local conditions. The course requiring three years of study, will put Atlanta on a par with the larger cities of the United States, with New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, and Denver.

The school will offer collegiate training in commerce, accounts, finance and commercial law, and will be distinct from the business college of the secondary school curriculum. It will supplant the system of apprenticeship, imparting to its students the useful knowledge which they need, from the experience of highly capable men who have succeeded, rather than leaving them to acquire it through the tedious and uncertain process of their own experience. Its appeal will be to Tech students and practical business men alike; to bookkeepers, clerks and accountants, bank clerks, credit men, insurance men, chief clerks, young engineers seeking the training befitting them for executive positions, railroad men, and others who wish to attain the highest efficiency in the science of business.

The commercial division is planned to meet three of the urgent needs of the time, urgent especially in the south: first, the need for a higher commercial education as a preparation for business; second, the need for academic training in preparation for certified public accountant examinations; and third, the need for instructors in the rapidly increasing commercial departments of city high schools. The classes will be held during the early evening hours on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday of each week. These hours will give opportunity for persons employed during the day to obtain a thorough collegiate training in business. The school will offer real university training in business principles, and business facts to the young men, also, who from commercial high schools, and from have graduated from business colleges, other schools of the secondary grade.

LOCAL SUFFRAGE LEAGUE HOLDS REGULAR MEETING

The Woman Suffrage league held its regular semi-monthly meeting in the lecture room of Carnegie library on Wednesday, August 13. Mrs. Harry Smith, the president, in the chair.

Mrs. Gardner, the secretary, gave a report of work accomplished. Numbers of buttons and badges had been sold, and suffrage literature, the Woman's Journal, and leaflets by the hundred had been distributed to inquirers, the report said.

Mrs. Bradley gave a full account of the funds she had collected from membership dues, sales and contributions. In spite of constant and heavy calls upon the treasury, the reserve fund was most gratifying.

Mrs. Helmer, chairman of membership, presented thirty new names that had just been passed upon by the executive committee. She stated that the enrollment was now approaching the 200 mark.

Mrs. Whiteside, chairman of education, outlined the work in political economics for the coming fall. Municipal government will be the first subject taken up. From the city the study work will proceed to the state, and then to the national government. She spoke of the reception of the "Pilgrims" in Washington, July 31, and said the senators from Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, fully indorsed their sentiments.

She referred to the work accomplished by the women of Chicago, who determined to keep Mrs. Ella Flagg Young in her position as superintendent of schools.

The feature of the meeting was an address by Prof. George Allen Loehr. He gave woman's work in its different phases and showed how fully she has measured up in every field she has entered.

BOTTENFIELD AGENCY MAKES MORE CHANGES

Owing to an increase of business, the L. P. Bottenfield agency has made further changes in its business.

Hugh J. Lynch has been advanced from sales manager to general sales manager; Eugene P. McElroy has been male sales manager of subdivisions, and Trieg A. Gumm manager of the city sales department.

Each of these is a specialist in his line. Mr. Lynch has had much experience in real estate and a wide acquaintance here. Mr. Gumm has had fifteen years' experience as a salesman, and Mr. McElroy, a subdivision expert, has developed a number of subdivisions of his own.

HERE'S HOW FAMILY OF SEVEN ARE LIVING 'TIL THEY STRIKE SPOT THAT FEELS "HOMEY"

Nebraska Family Has Been Traveling Since September and Intends to Keep Traveling in Two-Horse Wagon Until They Feel Like Settling

Traveling in an automobile is all no automobile an ordinary two-horse very well and good, but when one has wagon is just as good. At least that's the way Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Welch, of Karney, Neb., figured it out last fall when they wanted to go to Florida. And they have been on the road for a goodly part of the time since last September.

The wagon is cram full of things and people, with plenty of good humor to add to the measure. In addition to bedding, cooking utensils, provisions, and hay for the horses, the one wagon has accommodated Mr. and Mrs. Welch and their five children on many miles of road.

"We went to Florida because we thought it was a good place in which to settle,' said the Nebraskan; "but it's nothing but a frog pond where we were, so we started out again last April. Since that time we've been riding about the country looking for a place to settle, and when we find a place we like we'll stop right there."

Evidently the traveller did not approve of Atlanta as a residence for his family for he started that he would be leaving the city in thirty minutes. Just as soon as he could "get some views of this hyar town."

The five children range in age from twelve years to a little less than a year old; and the baby was born since the family started on its travels. There are Walter, the oldest; Elmer, Mary, Leonard and Martha, the baby; and they have had a jolly time on the road.

The horses are big and husky and friendly, and important members of the group.

They do not look the worse for their prolonged journeying, but started briskly out on the road toward Chattanooga wheer Mr. Welch and his family will stop next for a day or two.

AND THE TRAMP WENT ON HIS WAY, FREE BUT BROKE

Master Richard Paramore, of Valdosta, who is spending a few days with his friend, Master Terhune Sudderth, on Forrest avenue, tells the following story of a south Georgia tramp:

The tramp was in jail on a charge of vagrancy. A lawyer, knowing the tramp to be an expert painter, told him he would clear him if he would paint his house. This being agreed upon, the lawyer went to the bank and procured 100 $1 bills and instructed the tramp how to use the money.

When brought into court the judge asked the prisoner what he did for a livelihood and being told he was a painter the judge further asked if he had any income or means of support.

"Yes, I've got a little money," said the tramp, and showed his "roll."

The judge promptly dismissed the case but censured the man for being responsible for a scarcesss of money by keeping so much money out of circulation. The judge reprimanded the officer that preferred the charge against the man and warned him to be careful in the future about arresting people who have plenty of money.

The tramp returned the lawyer his 100 $1 bills, painted his house and went his way rejoicing.

BOLL WEEVIL THIRTY MILES FROM GEORGIA

State Entomologist Will Quarantine Three Counties From Approaching Pest

"We will have to quarantine three counties in Georgia for boll weevil against the rest of the state before the end of the present season, we are afraid," said State Entomologist H. L. Worsham at the state capitol Saturday.

According to Dr. Wodsham, the boll weevil, which has been making such great ravages on the cotton crop in Alabama, is within thirty miles of the Georgia line and the department expects the boll weevil to invade three counties in Georgia before the first frost.

The legislature which has just adjourned placed in the hands of the state entomologist the question of quarantining and the entomologist has lifted the quarantine against cotton lint and cotton seed hulls, which, it has been proven, do not transmit the boll weevil, but will enforce a strict quarantine against seed cotton and cotton seed from all infected points.

Members of the Cotton Seed Crushers' Association of Georgia are co-operating in every way possible to aid the department of entomology and the farmers to keep the boll weevil out of the state for it is realized that the boll weevil will strike a great blow to that industry when that pest enters Georgia.

The cotton oil mills of Georgia are beginning their fall crush and the outlook is good for a splendid season.

Miss Mamie Louise Pitts Writes of Norway Travels

BY MAMIE LOUISE PITTS.

VISNES STYRN, Norway, Aug. 16.—Country hotels are scattered throughout central and southern Norway for the accommodation of summer tourists, and they are always located in some picturesque spot. The Stalheim hotel is an immense timber building painted red with white trimmings and perched upon a cliff 820 feet high at the head of the Naerodal, a valley containing some of the finest views in Norway.

Carriages are not allowed to take passengers either up or down this steep cliff, so we walked down sixteen precipitous zigzags to the level road below. The story is told that Gladstone climbed this "kley" at seventy-eight, and after our panting efforts we considered this to have been a Herculean accomplishment.

But the valley is deservedly world famous for its scenery. On each side the mountains rise to more than 3,000 feet and are strung with waterfalls hanging in pairs, triplets, quadruples, all tossing up rainbows as they race madly to the stream at the base.

We stopped one night at Balholm, a popular resort on the Sognefjord. The weather was warm, though the place is rimmed with snow-clad peaks. Flowers grow luxuriantly, and cherry orchards, strawberry plants, currant and gooseberry bushes are laden with fruit. The hotel is typically Norse. It is built of timber, painted white, and stretches itself on the water front for a block. The ceiling of the dining room and parlors is very high and the walls are covered with large paintings of Norse scenes in dazzling blues and greens, the work of Mr. A. Normann, a painter of note, who has a villa in Balholm. Portraits of the king and the queen in gilt frames surmounted by crowns hang in a prominent place. Every hotel and lunch house has pictures of the royal pair, so we have become quite familiar with the features of King Haakson VII and Queen Maud.

The system of registering at hotels here is very unique. In the entrance is a large blackboard with numbered lines, and the guest writes his name opposite the number of his room.

In the long, narrow halls is posted this notice in English and German: "When going upstairs or closing the doors, kindly be quiet, so as to avoid disturbing the sleeping guests." That these two nationalities take the lead in noise making is a recognized fact. In all the public rooms are many pots of growing plants.

The dining rooms have long tables seating from thirty to one hundred people, and the waiters are girls dressed in native costume, consisting of black skirt, long white apron and white waist, worn under a red bodice elaborately embroidered in beads and finished with a beaded belt. Supper at 8 o'clock is the evening meal, dinner being served at 2. The table is always heaped with dishes of cold food—boiled ham, roast beef, veal loaf, tongue, slices of raw fish on eggs, boiled fish, cheese, jam, sardines, pickles, filling every inch of space. A hot meal is always served in courses, so the cold food is rarely touched.

The boats that ply on the fjords are miniature ocean liners and carry passengers, mail and freight. We spent a half day on the Sognefjord, winding in and out among towering peaks. This fjord is the longest in Norway, being 112 miles long and 4,000 feet deep in some places. Little flaxen-haired boys and girls meet the boat with big baskets filled with cherries put up in paper cornucopias and strawberries in cardboard baskets. There is no yelling of wares so common in our country. The children stand silent, the purchaser quietly makes his selection, and hands the child seventy ores, about 8 cents in our money. I counted thirty children at one small landing, and not a sound was made by any of them.

We have traveled 400 miles over the country roads. Last winter was exceptionally severe here, and the roads were not entirely free of snow the 1st of July. We walked through a cut with walls of snow fifteen feet high. Tall stakes mark the roadway during the winter. These splendid highways that thread Norway have been gradually built, beginning in the latter half of the last century. In many places they have been blasted out of the mountain side and are marvels of engineering. They are sandwiched between skyscraping walls of granite on the one side and on the other a quiet lake, whirling stream, or deep fjord in whose clear waters are reflected in startling vividness whatever peeps into their liquid depths.

Automobiles are rarely seen and they are the terror of the roads. Norwegian horses seem very much afraid of them. One of our ponies became so frightened that he refused to be pacified until the driver put his arms lovingly around his neck and found his shaggy head on his shoulder just as a mother would soothe a child. They are devoted to their horses. These ponies pay no attention to our commanding "Whoa!" but are stopped by a kind of purring sound made by fluttering the lips. Drivers walk when the road ascends, constantly getting out and in without stopping the vehicles.

All along the way we see women and boys working in the fields. I rarely see boys at play. They sweep the streets, wash windows, carry baskets of laundry, attend to the small children, look after the fish nets and do most of the driving.

Here in central Norway there is no night at this season. It is July the sun sets after 9 o'clock, and twilight lasts until morning. We never use our artificial lights. In winter, night last from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 the next morning. People who live here complain of the heat now, but I am uncomfortable without flannels and hevy wraps.

In every hotel the manager or the assistant speaks English, but the maids and table waiters do not, so a Norwegian vocabulary is a necessary asset. The language is rather difficult, but we have learned such phrases as "kogende vand" (boiling water) and "et haandklaede" (a towel.) The people are very polite, so we are careful to say "vaer saa god" (if you please) and "mange tak" (many thanks.)

Norway's waters must be fountains of perpetual youth, for this country shows no signs of age, but looks like a fresh western product. We can scarcely realize that in forgotten centuries its people discovered America, and fomented our ancestors until they put into their prayers books "From the Norsemen, good Lord, deliver us."

In the years to come it will share honors with Switzerland as the European playground. At present its people are poor in worldly wealth, but rich in self-esteem. Their wants are few and simple. They practice the strictest economy and have no luxuries, but appear to be happy. I can imagine no place more peaceful than a Norse village. I am at Visnes today, a town of less than 300 inhabitants. The houses are freshly painted in the Norwegian colors, yellow or white, the surrounding fields are green with growing crops, the orchards bend with fruit that will soon ripen in the long days of sunshine, a boat lies at anchor in the fjord. It is Sunday and there is not a noise except the ceaseless murmur of a waterfall, the scream of sea gulls, and the rustling of breeze swept leaves. Over the village stand tall mountains like silent sentinels.

It is to be hoped that invading tourists will not leave here a trail of extravagant notions and never ending wants, and pauperize these people as they have those of southern Europe.

HUPMOBILE ESCORTS IND. TOURISTS FROM ELY, NEV.

This Part of Tour Was Worst Going of Entire Trip

Much interest attended the trip of a thirty-two horsepower Hupmobile that ran from Ely, Nev., to Kerney's Ranch to meet the Indiana Tourists and to escort them from that place to Ely. The road was in bad condition. It runs through a wild part of Nevada, so that acting as a pilot both going and coming the Hupmobile performed a service that was greatly appreciated by the tourists. E. H. Patton, Hupmobile dealer in Ely, who made the trip, tells the following story:

"My Hupmobile, which has been driven 10,000 miles since last October over the same brush roads of Nevada, had the honor of piloting the Indiana Tourists from Kerney's Ranch to Ely, covering 162 miles, and climbing two very steep summits.

"With three other men I left Ely at 11 o'clock Sunday morning. We climbed Shelborn Summit, which is considered the hardest pull in this part of the state, averaging a 10 per cent grade for over five miles. Then we crossed the mud flats which had been rained on for the entire day. It was very sticky, but not so sticky as to prevent the Hup from pulling through like a fifty-horsepower car. But about half way up the summit the rain began falling in torrents, and a rancher on the other side of the mountain said that the cloudburst was the worst that part of the country had seen in forty years.

"We made the summit in good shape, but when he started on the other side we found that the dug-way had been washed out and a gulch about fifteen feet wide was all that was left. We took our shovels and picks and went ahead of the car and worked for hours making the best we could of the road.

"By this time it was night and we were terribly handicapped. But at last we pulled out of the gulch and we discerned the lights of the tourists' machines coming into Kerney's ranch about twenty miles off.

"We arrived at the ranch about 9 o'clock that night and the car was in perfect condition, although we had not put in oil or water or gas (or had a puncture on the entire trip). I immediately advised McK. White of the condition of the road and we decided to start the fifty horsepower pilot car and the Hupmobile at 6 o'clock in the morning. On the return trip to Ely our car was equipped with picks and shovels for eight men. We started off leading the tour with a pilot car following and the balance of the Hoosiers came on one hour later.

FIRST AUTO ADMITTED TO NATIONAL PARK

Speaker of Minnesota house of representatives makes 1,000 mile trip. Oakland first over Yellowstone trail. Car comes through with surprising record.

M. J. Dowling, speaker of the Minnesota house of representatives for the past two terms, is the pioneer of the new Yellowstone trail and has just completed a thousand-mile trip to the Yellowstone national park, driving an Oakland six-sixty all of the way and experiencing absolutely no mechanical trouble. He was accompanied by his wife and their three children.

This journey carries a wonderful significance and the people of the north west are greatly stirred up over it, the papers of Montana devoting considerable space to their conjectures as to its probable effect. This marks the termination of a ten-year struggle on the part of the motorists with those who, from ulterior motives, have restrained the automobilists from obtaining permission to enter the park. And that the government has opened the road as far as the "loop," which constitutes the main thoroughfare through the park, has been construed as an indication of ultimate victory for those who are working for the opening of the entire park.

Heretofore, the only method of viewing the beauties of America's vast national playground at close range, has been by means of private carriages or from the stage coaches which make regular trips. And thousands have found it necessary to forego the thrill of watching "Old Faithful" and viewing the wonderful "Paint Pots" because the comfort of making the trip in their motor cars has been denied them. The Yellowstone trail is the original route taken by Lewis and Clark in 1893, and interested people of Montana are now predicting a rival for the famous Glidden tour, since it has been demonstrated with what ease and comfort the Yellowstone Park Trail can be negotiated.

Mr. Dowling, who is a good roads enthusiast, started from Olivia, Minn., a small town about a hundred miles west of Minneapolis, and when he arrived at Yellowstone Park the speedometer registered 999.1 miles.

In speaking of his trip, he says: "I could easily have made the thousand-mile trip in six days, but as we were traveling with pleasure as our only object, we made numerous stops at many of the points of interest and were nine days on the way. My Oakland Six-Sixty came through in perfect condition and I experienced not one mechanical trouble whatever. This fact I consider remarkable, inasmuch as this is the first car to cover the entire route of the Twin Cities-Aberdeen-Yellowstone Park Trail and the road in some points was broken and in very bad condition."

Mr. Dowling is now congratulating himself that he had the temperity to take his wife and children over an unknown road, as every one of them thoroughly enjoyed the journey every inch of the way and, far from experiencing any inconveniences, remarked upon their comfort and declared they had been vastly benefited physically. He advises everyone to take the trip and says it can be made very economically as there are hotels located conveniently along the way.

MANAGER DIAMOND TIRES PROMISES PROMPT DELIVERIES

In an interview yesterday Mr. H. A. Price, local manager of Diamond tires, said:

"The majority of builders of automobiles sold most of their output earlier this season than ever before. As a consequence the rush for tires has been unusual.

"Shortly after the announcement six months ago that all Diamond tires were made of vitalized rubber, now popularly known as the 'more mileage' tire, our stocks here and all over the country were exhausted, owing to the unprecedented demand.

"Motorists everywhere welcomed the new 'more mileage' tire. Our factories at Akron began running day and night in an effort to supply this demand. In addition they erected new buildings, installed more machinery and increased their forces of expert tire builders.

"But we couldn't make the tires fast enough.

"As a consequence, many motorists have been disappointed by delayed deliveries, and almost each have blamed the local dealer, who was really not at fault at all."

In reply to a question, Mr. Price said: "We are pleased to announce that we are now filling all dealers' orders promptly. This will be glad news to the thousands of motorists, especially those who have had orders in for some time for our celebrated Diamond vitalized rubber tires."

THE HUDSON MOTOR CAR COMPANY DECLARES A BIG DIVIDEND

At the annual meeting of the board of directors of the Hudson Motor Car company, held yesterday, a $1,000,000 dividend was declared. This big melon was in the form of a 100 per cent dividend to all the stockholders of the company. Over a quarter of a million dollars was also carried to surplus account.

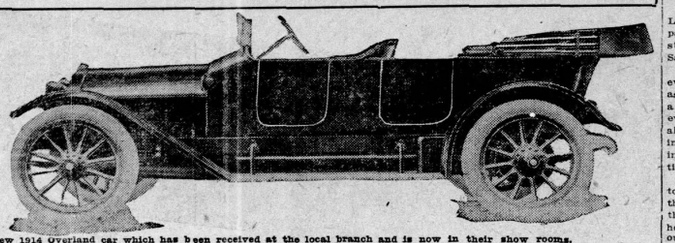
The annual report of the company shows no bonded indebtedness of any kind, and reflects a most successful season's business. The total volume of business done during the fiscal year ending July 1 amounted to $10,500,000, an increase of 50 per cent, or three and a half million dollars over that done during 1912.

The company has just announced its new 1914 Hudson six, at $2,250, and is now shipping these cars at the rate of thirty per day. This announcement also indicates that the Hudson company is another addition to the already long list of the leading American manufacturers who have adopted the six-cylinder engine exclusively for use in their cars for the coming season.

Dealers Should Specialize

That automobile dealers should centralize their whole efforts on that business, specializing even to the extent of handling but one line, is the belief of Ernest R. Benson, Studebaker sales manager.

NEW 1914 MODEL OVERLAND



The new 1914 Overland car which has been received at the local branch and is now in their show rooms.

Specifications of the new models of the Overland car, just announced by the Willys-Overland company, Toledo, Ohio, reveal a line applying three body designs to the same chassis construction. In keeping with the policy of the Overland company, not to announce new models to the public until prospective buyers may view the new product in the show rooms of the dealers, this announcement, through the first public description of the 1914 Overland line, finds Overland dealers in the possession of sample cars and ready to do business.

The 1914 Overland cars are not radically different from those of the season just past, although they show differences in a number of points, most of the changes being in the matter of dimensions and added equipment rather than in other respects.

A brief review of the details shows that the motor is very similar in construction to that of model 69, of which 40,000 were built during the 1912-13 season.

The motor is somewhat larger, 4 1-8x4 1-2 inches, and has been improved by the adoption of a constant level splash lubricating system. The push rods can be removed without disturbing the camshaft, being held in place by drop forged claws. The operation of th epush rods is made almost noiseless by the use of bronze caps fitted over the push tops.

In order to compensate for the lower volatility of present-day gasoline, the intake manifold has been redesigned and given a smaller diameter. The universal joint is larger than last year to compensate for the increased power.

The roadster body is of attractive design, also of the cowl dash type, with a 32-gallon gasoline tank at the rear. Back of the tank is a large steel tool compartment rectangular in shape and large enough to carry regular touring necessities. Both touring car and roadster have verticle tire carriers in rear, accommodating two spare cases. All spring ends have bronze bushings.

The radiator of the new Oakland cars is of an improved type, with large water spaces.

The touring car and the roadster are electrically lighted, current being furnished from a Willard storage battery carried at the right side of the running board and the dashlight which illuminates the instruments, such as speedometer, ammeter, etc., is connected with this tail light in series, so the proper working of the tail light is indicated by the dashlight.

The tops are hooked to the brackets of the side lights, which leaves the front of the car unencumbered and certainly adds to the slightliness of the covering when the top is up.

FAMOUS RACING DRIVER ENTHUSIASTIC OVER PAIGE

Charlie Mertz, second place man in the recent 500 mile speedway race, is enthusiastic over his new Paige "36."

Mertz says "that while I like dashing over a billiard table road at from seventy-five to ninety miles an hour, nevertheless for all-round enjoyment and rest I prefer driving my Paige over the surrounding country at a moderate rate of speed. One style of driving is a business for me, the other is a pleasure."

Recipe for Horsepower

Take the cylinder bore of any motor, divide it by two, square it, multiply by 3.1416, multiply by the stroke, multiply by the number of cylinders and divide by 7.5. The result will be a very close approach to the correct horsepower, as implied by the American Automobile association's standard of rating for competitive events.

FORD AUTOMOBILES PROVE TO BE VERY POPULAR

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 16.—One family in every sixty-seven in the United States is taking its pleasure in a Ford car; or rather on the basis of the number of Ford cars in use every sixty-seventh family should have a car. Some of them haven't got them because of the families that have more than one car, because of those which have been turned into commercial cars and the ones used in public work. But there are enough of them in existence to supply a car to one person in each 306 in the country.

The number of Fords in use today is approximately 325,000. Of this multitude 300,000 are in the United States. The population according to the last census was 92,000,000. It is easy to compute from this that one person in every 306 has a Ford car. Getting down to the family proposition, the official multiple for figuring the average number of people in a family is 4.53, which gives the fact that one in every sixty-seven families owns a Ford car.

CADILLAC EMPLOYES TO ENJOY VACATION

According to General Manager W. C. Leland, of the Cadillac Motor Car company, the annual vation of the employes started with the closing of the plant Saturday, August 16.

"This has always been an annual event with us," said Mr. Leland, "and, as the plant runs steadily eleven and a half months out of the year, the event is welcomed by the men. It is also made necessary in order to take inventory, to overhaul machinery, to install new and to make other preparations for increased output.

"In past years it has been customary to have the vacation period between the completion of the old model and the starting of the new. This year, however, we were prevailed upon by our dealers to delay the vacation until after the 1914 cars were under way in order that they could have samples and demonstrators and get an early start on new business. Up to the closing time 1,500 of the new cars had been shipped. The plant will reopen September 3, with increased force and equipment and start in on the remainder of the 13,000 cars planned for the ensuing year.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR FIRESTONE

"SANTA MONICA RACE, LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—Earl Cooper, in a Stutz, won; Barney Oldfield, in a Mercer, second; both cars equipped with Firestone tires. Time, over 72 1-2 miles per hour."

This telegram was flashed to the Akron office of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, announcing the fourth great Firestone victory within seventy days.

Firestone winning first and second place at the 500-mile international sweepstakes, Indianapolis, May 30, started the Firestone race landslide. On July 4 Firestone took first, second and third honors in the great Panama-Pacific road race, and July 6 and 7, at the Montamara festo races, Tacoma, Firestones were on the winning cars in all three races, including 100, 200 and 250-mile events.

The victory at historic Santa Monica is a fitting climax to the unparalleled success of Firestone tires this year. Never before in the history of automobile races has one make of tire captured every important race in the country, winning at least first and second place in each race.

"BLOOD IS THICKER THAN WATER"

Without good red blood a man has a weak heart and poor nerves. Thinness of the blood, or anaemia, is common in young folks as well as old. Especially is it the case with those who work in ill ventilated factories—or those who are shut up indoors in winter time with a coal stove burning up the oxygen or emitting carbonic (oxide) gas. This blood, or blood which lacks the red blood corpuscles, in anaemic people may have been caused by lack of good fresh air breathed into lungs, or by poor digestion or dyspepsia. Sometimes people suffer intense pain over the heart which is not heart disease at all, but caused by indigestion. Whatever the cause, there's just one remedy that you can turn to—knowing that it has given satisfaction for over 40 years.

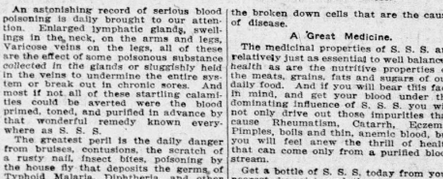
Glands and Veins Enlarge From Poisoned Blood

Operation Fails To Get At Source of Malady. Here's the Remedy.



Nothing But S. S. S. Can Overcome Such Afflictions as These.

An astonishing record of serious blood poisoning is daily brought to our attention. Enlarged lymphatic glands, swellings in the neck, on the arms and legs, Varicose veins on the legs, all of these are the effect of some poisonous substance collected in the glands or sluggishly held in the veins to undermine the entire system or break out in chronic sores. And most if not all of these startling calamities could be averted were the blood primed, toned, and purified in advance by that wonderful remedy known everywhere as S. S. S.

The greatest peril is the daily danger from bruises, contusions, the scratch of a rusty nail, insect bites, poisoning by the house fly that deposits the germs of Typhoid Malaria, Diphtheria, and other malignant diseases. And should harmful germs infect a bruise or contusion, instead of collecting in the glands or forming an ugly sore or ulcer the activities of the blood keep it in subjection and quickly cause it to be eliminated.

S. S. S. is a wonderful antidote. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissue cells to select their own nutrition and thus replace with healthy Fabulum the broken down cells that are the cause of disease.

A Great Medicine.

The medicinal properties of S. S. S. are relatively just as essential to well balanced health as are the nutritive properties of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food. And if you will bear this fact in mind, and get your blood under the dominating influence of S. S. S. you will not only drive out those impurities that cause Rheumatism, Catarrh, Eczema, Pimples, boils and thin, anemic blood, but you will feel anew the thrill of health that can come only from a purified blood stream.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today from your nearest druggist, and then write to The Swift Specific Co., 207 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., if you need further advice.

Do not accept anything else in place of S. S. S. Pay no attention to the "just as good" claims of those who would sacrifice your health to make an extra profit. S. S. S. contains no minerals, no crude drugs, nothing but the most beneficial botanical materials. So be sure you get S. S. S. and avoid disappointment. Get a bottle today and write for free advice.

CONVENTION SPREADS WIDE CITY'S FAME AS WHOLESALE MART

SALES' VOLUME LARGER THAN EVER BEFORE

Gathering Voted Biggest Success Yet Scored – Visitors Bid Atlanta Adieu Till Meeting in February

The largest crowd in attendance, the biggest number of new buyers present, the largest volume of business done by the jobbers; in other words, the greatest success of any of the annual meetings is the way the two weeks' convention of southern merchants which came to an end Saturday is summed up by President Bolling H. Jones. And his summary is backed by the results at the wholesale houses and given enthusiastic corroboration by the wholesalers themselves.

And as to the succes of the entertainment features, only the testimony of the visitors is needed. From the opening theater party Tuesday night two weeks ago to the closing ball game last Friday, with one voice they declare they had the time of their lives, with the big barbecue last Wednesday the climax of the merry making.

"The actual number of registered delegates will run close to 2,000," said Mr. Jones. "This does not include a very large number who did not formally register at headquarters but who were enrolled on the visitors' books at the various wholesale houses. I am sure that between 2,500 and 3,000 visitors were here during the two weeks, or 1,000 more perhaps than were here last year.

"I have talked to all the leading jobbing firms and they tell me that this convenation was the most satisfactory to them in every way of any yet held. The volume of trade has been immense. One firm tells me that they sold more than $70,000 worth of goods, whereas ordinarily they would have sold only about $15,000.

INCREASE OF TRADE.

"This increase of trade I attribute not only to the good trade and crop outlook now prevailing but also to the fact that great numbers of buyers came to Atlanta this year who had never patronized this market before. Their purchases swelled the volume of sales mightily and greatly enhanced Atlanta's prestige as a jobbing center. The number of new buyers were particularly noticeable from the states of Florida, Alabama North and South Carolina.

"These merchants' conventions are doing a wonderful thing for Atlanta. They are making the city and its market personally known to thousands of buyers every year who have been spending their money in northern and eastern markets. One visit here is enough to convince them that there is the place for them to buy. Some of the wholesalers tell me that they were opening new accounts hourly last week.

"To cite one instance: A merchant came to the convention from South Carolina. He took a view of what was to be had here. He had never bought in Atlanta before, but after his inspection, his purchases amounted to $5,000. Think of what a vast sum this will amount to when multiplied by the purchases of the total number of new buyers who were here. And this is not all. It means not merely the patronage of the new comers for this season, but their continued patronage. It means that Atlanta's market within two weeks has stepped forward with a mighty stride."

VISITORS DEPART.

Last Saturday brought to a close the two weeks' meeting. Throughout Friday and Saturday numbers of the visitors were still here, but they began leaving Saturday afternoon for their homes and all were gone by Sunday morning. They bid Atlanta and their Atlanta friends adieu, tired, but happy, and vowing that they will be on hand early when the next convention is held here in February.

After the election of officers of the convention during the first week of the gathering, Atlanta was selected as the next place of meeting and February the time. Already there is talk of the big doings that will come to pass then. The temporary organization of the merchants which was effected here this time will be made permanent as the Southern States Merchants' association and permanent officers will be elected and there will be another period of celebration and jollification.

50 PER CENT BETTER.

"I am very much pleased with the results of the two weeks," said C. J. Sullivan, secretary of the M. C. Kiser company. "As for the business we had, our sales to the visiting merchants are 50 per cent more than during last year's convention period."

"Our holiday goods sample room was

HOTEL BILL GOES OVER TO NEXT SESSION

Measure "Died on Calendar," Delayed by Legislative Wrangles

It was a case of too much talk and too little do. That's why the bill providing for a state inspector failed of enactment at this session of the legislature.

The house wrangled and delayed on the tax and appropriations measures and filibustered on the liquor matters until the hotel inspector bill never could reach a third reading in the house though it had been given the favorable recommendation of the house committee on sanitation and hygiene.

This was the status of the bill until within seven days of adjournment when the rules committee of the house tok charge of the calendar and lected for consideration those measures which they deemed of greatest importance to the state.

They evidently had a rather unique idea of what was really important for they did not include in their list the hotel inspector bill. How any measure could be of greater importance is hard to imagine, for the traveling men of the state and the traveling public every day throughout the year are suffering from the carelessness and impositions of certain hotels, a state of affairs that will never be remedied until a state officer is named and charged with the special duty of seeing that hotel proprietors live up to the sanitary regulations which have already been prescribed for them by the laws of Georgia.

But it is useless to grieve over the neglect of the hotel bill by the present legislature. There'll be another session next year and it's none too early for the travelers to begin now to see that their bill receives first consideration then. They should start now and write to the representatives of their counties reminding them that the hotel bill "died on the calendar" this year because it was shoved aside by what

HOTEL BILL A GREAT PROGRESSIVE MEASURE

Travelers Will Continue Fight for Bill at Next Meeting of Legislature

Editor Firing Line:

The traveling man is the most hopeful person in the world. That is the reason he is such a fighter for his rights. He does not know what it is to give up. The success of his business calls for that will power that is able to fight time and time again, under defeat. Or in other words, he will never acknowledge defeat, when he knows he is fighting for the right. Now, we the traveling men have been fighting years after years for the rights of the traveling public. We have accomplished great relief, and have banished roll after roll of red tape, and injustice that made traveling such a bogie bear to the unaccustomed traveler. We have forced the people who cater to the traveling public, to give, in a measure, what is paid for.

We thought we saw the great light ahead at the meeting of this legislature, for the correction of the hotel evil of unsanitary hotels. But our great solons seem to think that the health of the traveling public was of minor importance and sidetracked our bill after its favorable report from the hygienic and sanitary committee, and it could only reach its second reading at this session.

But the traveling man will not give up. Wherein it is disappointing to us to have to wait a year to get the hotel inspector bill passed, we will make it so plain to our representatives before the next meeting of the legislature, that this bill instead of being put aside as one of the minor bills, it will take its place beside the great progressive measures.

We thank the introducer of this bill, Mr. Stone, and all the members of the house and senate, that are only waiting for the chance to put their stamp of approval on this bill by voting for it. We thank the general public that have assisted us by their endorsement of the bill, and last but not least, we thank especially the firing line and The Atlanta Journal and the press as a whole, for their endorsement of this measure.

Yours very truly,

H. D. SHAKELFORD,
Chairman, Legislative Committee, United Commercial Travelers Council No. 18.

Two Lincolnton, Ga., Merchant-Planters Were the Hit of the Convention Barbecue, Typifying as They Did Its Spirit of Fun and Good Fellowship

"The barbecue twins" they were dubbed by the crowd of merchants and salesmen at the big outdoor feast at Ponce de Leon Springs Wednesday.

This name that some one had hung to them soon after they reached the scene passed around in the big crowd and they were soon one of the features of the occasion.

The pair were 510 pounds of joviality. And the name of "barbecue twins" hit them off exactly. Both of them of the great "Georgia plantation owner" size physically, each arrayed in a linen suit and wearing a big Panama hat, they looked the part of "twins."

"Barbecue twins" was especially apt, too, as they seemed to fit in with such an affair as naturally as the barbecue eatables. They were the personification of the barbecue spirit of fun and good fellowship.

Then it developed that they weren't really twins after all. When they and the crowd which was clustered around them were separated long enough to give the camera man a shot at them and their names were learned by the Firing Line one was found to be William C. Powell and the other John B. Cullars. They are from Lincolnton, Ga., and are in fact big Georgia planters and merchants.

That didn't matter with the crowd, however. A little thing like that wasn't going to spoil the title that had been given them and they are still "the barbecue twins" and will be next year if they come up to the merchants' 'cue—and every one hopes they will.

SILVEY CO. CARRIED BIG PARTY TO 'CUE

One hundred of the visiting merchants were carried to the barbecue grounds Wednesday in two big sightseeing automobiles by the John Silvey company. The party formed at the Silvey store on Marietta street at 12:30 and were stored, sixty in one automobile and forty in the other. They were than whisked to Ponce de Leon, a cheering, gala crowd.

CITY SALESMEN WILL HOLD ANNUAL BARBECUE

Will Gather at Cold Spring Next Saturday for Feast and Dance

One big time eis on the program for the city salesmen and their friends who will attend the barbecue to be given at Cold Spring Saturday, August 23, by the City Salesmen's association.

It will be the occasion of their annual celebration and they have laid plans for making it bigger, better and in every way more enjoyable than ever before.

The 'cue will be served by Verner whose fame as a caterer is known throughout the city. There will be music and dancing and a good time for everybody. A crowd of 350 is expected.

The committee which has charge of the arrangements is composed of Paul S. Pause, chairman; C. F. Holt, R. L. Harwell, J. S. Launius.

The barbecue will form the second of the annual entertainments which the city salesmen give. The first this year was the six-day outing at the Isle of Palms which proved a memorable pleasure trip for all who went. The barbecue will prove no whit less enjoyable.

"All the arrangements for our feast at Cold Spring are about completed," said H. L. Simmons, president of the association. "We expect a big time and you may rest assured that we are going to have it."

BUSINESS OUTLOOK IN GEORGIA DECLARED GOOD

In reply to a telegram from them asking an opinion of business conditions in Georgia, John Silvey & Co. wired the New York Evening Post Friday a very favorable opinion of the outlook in this state.

The inquiry from New York was evidently one of a number sent to different sections of the country by the paper with a view to publishing the replies as a summary of the prospect for fall business over the entire United States.

"New York Evening Post, N. Y. City:

"Business outlook in this state unusually good. We notice steady improvement in trade at present and we look for this to continue during the fall. It is our opinion that corn crop and money market will not, to any extent, interfere with business in this section. Crops have been made on an economical basis. Secretary McAdoo's offer to the banks of the south very helpful.

CHATTANOOGA JOBBERS POSTPONE JUBILEE

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 16.—The Chattanooga Wholesalers and Jobbers' association has postponed the fall trade jubilee here. It was first planned to have the jubilee during the G. A. R. reunion, but so many of the local jobbers are working upon the various committees that it has been deemed advisable to postpone the meeting so that the visiting merchants can be given more attention. The jubilee will probably be held during the first week in October.

MERCHANTS' MEETING SHOWS THE NEED OF PERMANENT EXHIBIT

Had Manufacturers' Display Been in Operation When Visitors Were Here, It Would Have Been Crowded Daily

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN ON TO GET SPACE SIGNED

Convention Merchant Declares Exhibit Would Prove of the Greatest Convenience to All Visiting Buyers

Now for the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods. The Southern Merchants' convention has come and gone. It was a great success. It did untold good for Atlanta. Thousands of merchants came, saw, and bought and resolved that hereafter Atlanta is the place they will purchase all their goods.

The next big achievement for the city is to make certain the year round show of the products manufactured here, so that visitors may come at any time and see and be convinced of Atlanta's greatness as an industrial center even as they were convinced during the last two weeks of its greatness as a jobbing center.

The merchants' meeting furnished a striking demonstration of what a lack of a permanent exhibit means and the good that would come from supplying this lack.

Had the exhibit been in operation when the merchants were here it would have been crowded daily with visitors. There they would have been able to see under one roof everything that is manufactured here and that just about includes every article of human need. They would have been able to ask and learn prices and make purchases. In an hour's time they could have inspected what it would have taken them the entire period of their visit to inspect had they attempted to visit all the individual factories.

WORK TOO LABORIOUS.

Thework of making such a visit of course prevented it from being undertaken. Hence few of the visitors went away with any conception of the wealth of goods which the plants of Atlanta turn out daily.

The campaign is now on to have all the space in the proposed building signed for at once so that the enterprise may go forward to completion. Committees of manufacturers under the leadership of the chamber of commerce are meeting daily to report the progress of the campaign. The retail grocers in order to help have agreed to push the sales of Atlanta-made goods every Wednesday as soon as the summer Wednesday afternoon half-holidays are over.

"We have seen the result in the last two weeks of merchants coming here and personally seeing what the jobbers have to offer," said Bolling H. Jones, president of the Merchants' convention and a booster of the permanent exhibit. "The jobbers won hundreds of new customers and made immense sales. A permanent exhibit would win new buyer for Atlanta-made goods every day in the year. Once let the merchant see what is here and he becomes an Atlanta patron. The eastern markets are able to hold him no longer. Atlanta puts them out of business. But the merchant has got to see and know before this can happen. The permanent exhibit would educate him and he can be successful in no other way.

A MERCHANT'S VISIT.

"During the convention, a merchant from North Carolina visited our stove factory. He was simply amazed at what he saw. He had been doing some buying from us but declared that hereafter we would get all his trade. This was a result solely of his seeing with his own eyes what we made. The permanent exhibit will make the greatest salesman and greatest advertisement of Atlanta-made goods that it is possible to conceive of. By all means we must have it and have it at once."

Even the merchants themselves who were here for the convention commented on the campaign for the proposed exhibit and declared they knew of no better move which the city could make.

Typical of such expressions were the remarks made by W. E. Stowe, of W. E. Stowe & Co., of Newborn, Ga., to a representative of the Firing Line. Said he: "The biggest thing Atlanta has done yet is its launching of the campaign to secure a permanent quarters for an exhibit of the manufactured goods here.

"As a merchant, I am delighted over the result of the campaign which is about to make this idea a reality. It is going to mean far more to the merchants who buy in Atlanta than many people realize.

"We merchants recognize it as a great convenience to us in our dealings with the factories we already patronize and many of us will doubtless find articles on exhibit that we will want to add to our line, resulting in new accounts for the manufacturer. This exhibit idea is going to be a bigger asset for Atlanta factories with the merchants of the south than anything they have ever done."

We Did All We Could Possibly Do

We have been more than delighted with our last two weeks' business. Every road man was in the house and everybody was busy, and every man we sold was delighted with the lines we had to offer.

kept as busy throughout the two weeks as during the one week of last year's convention," said J. C. Mathews, of Montag Brothers.

"We have been kept busy handling the merchants and showing them over our place, especially during the second week," said A. W. Rosenfeld, of the Rosenfeld company. "Our sales were ahead of last year's merchants' week."

R. B. Ridley, president of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, is highly pleased with the success of the convention.

"It will become a regular and permanent custom and be a bigger affair every year," said he. "Our company is delighted over the immediate results the convention has brought and also over the good work done for future conditions.

"Every comment from the visiting merchants I heard on the convention showed they were all pleased immensely with their visit to Atlanta; not only the retailers, jobbers and maufacturers, but all Atlanta should benefit because of the advertising the city gets," said H. S. Collingsworth, secretary-treasurer of the Gramling-Spalding company. "We will be ready to help again next year to hold a convention that will eclipse this one."

"It was a great success from beginning to end," said J. R. Little, of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company. "Every one, merchants, salesmen and house men, are better acquainted and the Atlanta market strengthened thereby. The merchants were pleased with the treatment they received, too. I heard three commenting on the fact that they were shown as much attention after they had bought as before."

"Everybody had a good time and it was altogether the best convention we have ever had," said Willis E. Ragan, of the Ragan-Malone company and chairman of the finance committee who engineered the convention. "The entertainment features were well received, thtre were some excellent speeches and as for the matter of business transacted, I know sales at our house were far ahead of the convention period of last year."

"The convention has done Atlanta good and it has done the merchants who came here much good," said H. B. Wey, of the Dobbs & Wey Co. "A large part of the good work done does not show up immediately, but these yearly conventions are going to tell in the future growth of the Atlanta wholesale market. And the merchants are learning that they each have the same problems and that they can help each other by meeting and discussing them. The publicity given Atlanta by the convention is especially valuable to us wholesalers. Merchants who didn't come will feel added confidence in the Atlanta market by reading of the praise of the lines shown here in the interview of buyers who did come."

"I am more than satisfied with this year's convention and the visitors it brought to our house to get better acquainted with us," said E. G. Thomas, manager of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company. "Our sales have been heavy during the two weeks, too. I was particularly impressed with the cheerful and hopeful attitude of the merchants toward the prospects for fall business. They were thoroughly optimistic, much more so than last year."

"We consider the two weeks a great success," said R. K. Hambo, of John Silvey & Co. "It was an especially enjoyable time for us as it was our first opportunity to entertain many of our customers in our new store. I think every merchant who came to town enjoyed every minute here. I didn't see one grouchy merchant during the two weeks. All of them were feeling fine over the business outlook and showed it. And as for sales, we sold 40 per cent more goods than during last year's convention."

"The wholesalers and manufacturers of Atlanta should make it a regular semi-annual affair," says W. A. Ward, of the Ward-Truitt company. "This year's convention repeated the successes of the previous ones and helped bring our company an excellent two weeks' business."

could not have been but was considered things of more importance and request ing them to see that it is passed the first thing next session.

"The hotel bill is marked House bill, No. 76," said C. H. Stone, of Taliaferro county, who introduced it for W. A. Webb, special representative of the United Commercial Travelers of Georgia. "It is now No. 6 on the calendar for next year and will undoubtedly be passed the first week of next session."

Mr. Stone is a traveling man himself and did all that was possible to put the bill through at this session of the legislature, but was powerless in view of the condition assumed by the legislative calendar.

"There never would have been any trouble about passing the bill," continued he, "if it ever could have reached the house for final vote. The house was in thorough sympthy with the travelers in their demand for stricter enforcement of the hotel regulations. It would have taken no time for the house to grant them the relief which they desired.

It was likewise the opinion of Senator J. N. Watts, of the Eleventh district, who is also a traveling man, that the bill would have had an easy passage of the senate. Mr. Wajtes pledged his support to the measure and was ready to get behind it and push it through the senate had it ever reached that body.

An early beginning now will make an early beginning for the measure at the session next summer. Let the travelers of the state start now to urge their hotel bill upon the next legislature.

Attends Meeting of Five and Ten Cent Assn. and Predicts Big Business

C. W. McClure, of the McClure Ten Cent company, who attended the meeting of five and ten cent merchants at Indianapolis and is now on his way to Europe to purchase goods for his wholesale department, writes to E. P. Lewis of his company, from Indianapolis as follows:

I am pleased to know that you are getting so many opening bills. I have no doubt that you will continue to do so. I will leave New York, if nothing happens, Thursday morning, August 1. My address will be Hotel Bristol, at Berlin, and Hotel Huffa, Leipsig. I expect to get some big values over there. By visiting some of the various factories in Germany and Europe, we will be able to offer some very flattering prices on import stuff another year.

You have been very successful this year in establishing stores and departments. You can figure on giving better prices in 1914. We have often spoke of establishing stores in all the towns south of the Mississippi, and I feel more assured of the fact that we will be able to do this.

I have attended the Merchants' Five and Ten-Cent association in Indianapolis, and have never seen so many buyers and managers of general stores attend any convention as attended this one. This only shows you how the general merchants are becoming interested in the five ten cent business.

Trust that you are having a nice trade and with your force of help will be able to wait on all. I am as ever

"True Friendship's Laws Are by This Rule Expressed, Welcome the Coming, Speed the Parting, Guest"

The good word that's passing up and down the line today, anent the Convention, is "All's well."

We believe everybody had a good time. We tried to make it so, and without laying any unduly flattering unction to ourselves, we feel that we have had a pair of mighty pleasant weeks.

The prospects for the coming season are brightening every sixty seconds. The smile is chasing away glum doubt. The step that yesterday was fearsome and cautious is today strong and steady. The mists are rolling up and away and the good old sun makes genial shining for us all.

Look about you and see what's happening. Get ready for the reaping. And while you do it, have this thought in your mind, you Men who Merchandise:

We Southern folks are bound together in peculiarly close business relations. Our section is our empire! We can make it. We can shake it!

If we who WHOLESALE and you who RETAIL will pull together, push together, work together, trade together, we will PROSPER together.

Good sentiment, but better business!

ATLANTA is the logical Base of Supplies for you Southern merchants. She's your best bet when it comes to the goods you need. She's your surest ally in the upbuild of your own particular section, because her vision is broad and her interest is not selfishly local---it's all-Southern.

Come to see us just as often as you can. The right hand of fellowship will greet you every time. We want you to know us and to like us and to feel sure of us and to make us your MARKET.

CHARPING DELIGHTED OVER ATLANTA MARKET

Georgia Merchant Praises Firing Line and Declares Jobbers Here Best Ever

Among Georgia mercantile firms which have built up a big business from a small beginning none stand out more prominently than Charping's Variety store of Barnesville, Ga. This firm patronizes Atlanta's wholesale market and W. C. Charping has written the Firing Line an enthusiastic letter on the value of buying goods here. His letter follows:

Editor Firing Line:

I thought I would tell you a little about the advantage of buying goods in our leading city of Atlanta. We have learned that it pays to buy goods in the capital city, as you say that Atlanta is "Always Ahead" in everything she does.

We can buy merchandise in your city of just the same quality and price as we can in New York or Chicago. We can send a mail order to any one of your jobbers one day and get the shipment the next day. We always get the best goods at a nice price, and we are always treated good by all with whom we deal. That's the reason we like to deal with them.

When we come to Atlanta we are given a cordial welcome by all the wholesale men we visit. Take the McClure Ten Cent company, for instance. They are nice fellows to deal with and they will treat you fair and square and give you nice 5 and 10-cent goods at the very lowest prices considering other markets. We have always bought goods from Atlanta since we started in business, and will keep on doing so. The Firing Line is a great department.

Wishing Atlanta good luck and rejoicing in her growth, I am

Very truly yours,

W. C. CHARPING.

Barnesville, Ga., Aug. 13, 1913.

Fame

It was a geography lesson, and the teacher had been asking what some of the different states were noted for. Looking at one of the little girls, she asked:

"Tell me, Florence, what Rhode Island is celebrated for?"

ADDITIONAL PICTURES OF SCENES AT MERCHANTS' BARBECUE

COUNCIL 505 FORMS MEMBERSHIP TEAMS

Editor Firing Line: United Commercial Travelers council 505 has organized two membership teams to contest for the largest number of new members to be initiated in October. The officers of the council are pitted against the members and the losing side must set up the winners to a banquet. Council 505 has received eight new members within the last two weeks. Where is that application of yours that you were going to send in?

Brother W. A. Andrews was taking orders near Atlanta last week after an extended trip through his south Georgia territory.

W. H. Hester, of the Pittsburg Steel company, is back on the job after a pleasant vacation.

A. R. Tucker, the Armour man, was on his vacation last week. It is reported that he did not get very far from Atlanta.

J. M. Wingfield is quite ill at his home at 94 East Pine street. Members of 505 are requested to go out and see him.

Brother J. W. Currie has at lasts returned to Atlanta. All U. C. T.'s and all his other friends are delighted to welcome him back.

J. J. Kennedy of the Enterprise Manufacturing company is a recent addition to council 505.

Brother A. M. Sheats of the Remington Typewriter company has recovered from the injury to his eye received some time ago.

Very Truly yours,

P. S. BROWNLEE,

Secretary U. C. T. council 505.

LEWIS HAD BUSY TIME DURING CONVENTION WEEK

E. P. Lewis, of the McClure Ten Cent company, made a trip to Ball Ground, Ga., Friday. He carried with him plans for the opening of a five and ten cent store at that place. Mr. Lewis had numerous callers during the convention who came to consult him on adding five and ten cent departments to their stores.

Among his callers were T. W. Boothe, McRae, Ga.; Freeze Brothers, Hendersonville, Ga.; F. C. Miller, Clermont, Ga.; T. C. Richardson, Eton, Ga.; R. O. Whatley, Ramer, Ala.; J. L. Johnston, Sylvester, Ga.; W. S. Johnson, Thomaston, Ga.; B. C. Wright, Sharon, Ga.; Griffin Brothers, Cave Springs, Ga.; Hurst Supply company, Luthersville, Ga.; Johnston Department store, Washington, Ga.

UMBRELLAS WAGE MERRY WAR WITH RAINCOATS

Raincoats So Far Seem to Have All the Best of the Contest

Three umbrella salesmen representing eastern concerns arrived in Atlanta almost simultaneously last week and were calling the same morning on the several concerns of the wholesale district that handle this line. They usually arrive during the same month, but it is seldom there is such a row of salesmen for one specialty at the jobbing houses the same day.

In Atlanta, as in most other places, the umbrella men are not finding the demand for their wares as heavy as in former years.

"There is no doubt," says Mark Bernstein, one of the three, "that the raincoat idea has materially affected the demand for umbrellas. I really believe, however, that umbrellas will 'come back.'

"The manufacturers are not doing anything to offset the raincoat's effect on their business. They do not see anything they can do. They are just selling what they can and waiting. But sales have not been cut down as much as some people suppose. Umbrellas can still be classed a staple article all right."

The other two salesmen here are Messrs. Henryson and Kaufman.

CONVENTION ECHOES

Doings and Sayings of the Great Gathering

Mr. Strickland, of Hasty & Strickland, Chipley, Ga., went from the merchants' convention to Indian Spring for a vacation.

By all means keepup the merchants' convention. Hold 'em one week twice each year—says many travelers.

Tom Murray, of J. E. Tunison, spent the entire week past in Atlanta. Said he: "I have found just what I wanted for by business; had a good time and am going back to enjoy the prospects of good business in the near future."

Both Mr. Hearn and Mr. Upchurch, of Hearn Bros. & Upchurch, of Burwell, Ga., spent two busy days in Atlanta during the past week getting up their merchandise needs for fall trade. "We haven't time to go to the ball game," they declared, Friday mornnig. "We want to see where to get all the goods we hope to sell this fall."

J. Fain Johnson, of Pruitt & Murray, Thomaston, Ga., spent all of the past week looking over the jobbers and manufacturers. Mr. Johnson says the Atlanta market gets better every year.

R. L. Huff, of Conyers, Ga., spent several days in Atlanta during the convention. "I enjoyed the barbecue and have had a fine vacation," said Mr. Huff. "I am ready to meet my fall demands for business. I have replenished my stock, expecting good business."

C. E. Otwell, of Cumming, Ga., arrival via auto and several punctures very late for the barbecue Wednesday. Some knights of the sample case had him fed and irrigated, however, and he left in the afternoon expressing himself as well paid for his visit.

F. I. Orgain, of Sparta, Ga., spent five days in Atlanta the second week of the convention and completed his buying for the early fall season.

D. S. Driskell, of Jullette, Ga., was very busy buying a medium early fall supply of merchandise Friday and Saturday of the past week. "I'll buy much heavier on my return the last of September," said Mr. Driskell.

J. B. Johnson, of Conyers, Ga., was in the city looking around for a new stock of furniture and undertaking goods for a branch store. His company proposes to open in Decatur, Ga., during the fall.

I. N. Binder, of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, was among the busiest of the barbecue entertainers. He proved of especial service in helping get the groups together for the Firing Line pictures.

Clifford Fambro, of Rockmart, says all he can see wrong with the merchants' convention week that it came right at his vacation in other parts, and he only got a good peep in.

Judging by the number of callers and lookers at the Atlanta Furniture manufacturing building during the past two weeks this fall's business will surpass any in the past three years, say the managers and salesmen.

Henry Wesley, of Wesley company, Lithonia, spoke very encouragingly of the outlook for fall trade. "I am preparing for a good business," he said.

C. E. Almand, of Social Circle, one of the livest young merchants on the Georgia railroad, spent three days at the convention. Crops all good. I expect to sell all I am buying by January 1, and more too," said he.

Mr. Elliott, of Elliott Furniture company, Millstead, Ga., visited Atlanta on both business and pleasure last week, and was very busy every moment. I'm just from a two weeks' vacation and now getting up my needs and returning to business.

That hustling crowd of young merchants of Conyers included M. H. Flunket's fine new automobile for several trips to the convention. "I make 'em eat my dust every time when I can slip off without Roland Huff.

Paul Jones, from Canton, Ga., was a merchant who put in a busy day Wednesday spending two hours at the barbecue and the rest of teh same day buying his fall goods.

PLAYING AGAINST BOGEY, LIQUID SALESMEN'S GAME

Are Going After Record Needed to Raise Atlanta Branch to Third Place

The Atlanta office of the Liquid Carbonic company will gain third place among the company's branches, which they have been striving hard to reach for the last several years, if the pace the sales force is making toward a recently established "bogey" is kept up the rest of the year.

The first of this month H. H. Ware, the Atlanta manager, did some figuring and made a careful estimate of the total sales that will be needed for 1913 to boost the branch to the coveted third position.

After making this estimate, a fair quota for each salesman based on his territory and past record was set and the salesmen given the figures. One of the force has during this month made one-third of his quota needed for the rest of the year. Some others are making showings nearly as good and every man on the force is working hard to make sure that if the Atlanta office is still fourth next December it will not be his fault.

The inroads each of the salesmen are making on the total set for them is shown in a report published to the sales force weekly and interest in the race for the goal is running high.

At What Rate Do You Do Business?

Fire insurance rates on a building are based not only on the chances of that building catching fire, but to a larger extent on the facilities at hand for putting out the fire, should it occur.

The more convenient the Fire Service, the lower the rate.

Just so in merchandising; the cost of doing business is directly governed by the convenience of a merchant's source of supply.

Take shoes, for instance; the Southern merchant who buys his stock in the distant markets of New England and the West, is paying a mighty high rate to do business.

Here are the extra costs he pays:

1st—Excess freight charges.

2nd—Interest on half the stock he now carries that would be unnecessary with a near-by efficient factory connection.

3rd—Loss on accumulation and depreciation of dead styles.

Its Mail Order Service is the best remedy for the High Cost of Doing Business.

Postal brings catalog or salesman.

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

W. E. Dawson, of Jones Brothers & Co., was at Fitzgerald, Ga., last week and sent in an order for a car of vinegars, preserves and pickles.

H. L. Singer, of the H. L. Singer company, writes his house from Franklin, N. C., where he is spending his vacation, that the fishing is fine at that place. He is expected to return to Atlanta early this week.

W. R. Simpson, of Jones Brothers & Co., spent last week at Millen, Ga., where he took orders for a car load of his company's products. L. C. Miller, of this company, sold a car load of preserves last week at Greenville, S. C.

Mrs. Callie McLean, general merchant of McRae, Ga., was one of the visitors during the convention. She expressed herself as highly delighted with the way she was entertained during her visit. While here she had the insurance adjusted on her stock of goods recently burned.

Dear to the salesman's heart are new accounts and that is why C. T. Gause, the Montag Brothers salesman, is feeling happy over his recent house sales season. He has tallied up more names on his new customer list out of his Carolina territory than in any like period before. The record shows a third more new business than for the same time last year. Go to it.

At the McCord-Stewart company the factory is now running full capacity turning out farm Bell brands of coffee and candy.

Joe Wallace, traveler for the H. L. Singer company, was down the West Point road last week. He had an excellent business and rivaled his big record of the week previous. He attended the picnic of the retail grocers at Warm Springs Wednesday.

H. A. McDonald is still vowing his loyalty to the Pink Lady mentioned in Hal Riviere's letter in the Firing Line. It should be understood, however, that the Pink Lady is one of the popular brands of flour sold by his firm, the McCord-Stewart company.

S. I. Bagwell, bookkeeper of the H. L. Singer company, left last week for St. Louis on his vacation.

H. J. Atwood, trader for the McCord-Stewart company, turned in a fine lot of orders on his company's entire line from his northeast Georgia territory last week. W. B. Childsey, of this company, whose headquarters are at Rome, Ga., has returned with his family from a two weeks' vacation at Hot Springs.

H. H. Ware, manager of the Liquid Carbonic company, spent several days of last week on a special South Carolina

C. M. McKain, city salesman of Jones Brothers & Co., attended the grocers' picnic at Warm Springs Wednesday.

James R. Callier, the Hirshberg company firing liner, was hailed as he stood on the platform waiting for a train a few days ago with something like this, "Hey, you, are you a drummer?" It was from a ten-year-old boy of the cotton mill type, who was reading a copy of the Firing Line. He asked the salesman his name and proceeded to look him up in the columns. "From his interest in those pages, I bet he will be on the road himself some day," says Mr. Callier.

J. C. Porter, special representative of the American Cigar company, is with C. C. Phillips, the Capital City Tobacco company salesman. They will cover Mr. Phillips' entire south Georgia territory together.

Dr. Chaffin, of the Chaffin Drug company, Sharon, Ga., was one of the visitors who enjoyed the hospitality of the Capital City Tobacco company last week.

H. B. Block spent a few days in these parts last week for the first time in six months. Politics, which are claiming much attention in Alabama now, are not keeping the people from planning for a big fall business, he says. Mr. Block travels for the Rosenfeld company and makes headquarters at Montgomery. He returned to his territory yesterday.

The M. C. Kiser company feel proud of the sale of a certain opening bill last week. The merchant looked over the lines in another market before he came here.

W. C. Tennant, traveler for the Hirshberg company, will be back on the road this week after a stay at headquarters.

G. A. Gossett, of the Liquid Carbonic company sales force, has just finished a splendid week's business, his sales for the week including contracts for three fountains.

The Liquid Carbonic company has just secured the order for a handsome large fountain for Nunnally's Birmingham place.

J. M. Frankel is still hors de combat. He started last week on his Tennessee trip for the Rosenfeld company, but was forced to turn back at Chattanooga and is now in Atlanta under care of a physician.

J. R. Jordan and E. Feibelman will open a holiday goods sample room for Montag Brothers tomorrow at the Hillman hotel, Birmingham, and will be there three weeks.

J. M. Bennett left for South Carolina several days ago with his new fall line of S. P. Richards company stationery and durggists' sundries, and G. H. Huff has started the season for this firm in his Georgia territory.

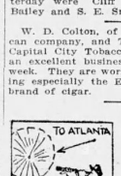
C. T. Gause and S. F. Hein will open the Montag Brothers' holiday goods sample room at Columbia S. C. August 25 for a three weeks' stand. G. Y. C. Bulce is in charge of the display at Raleigh and will be there for several weeks.

The entire city sales force of Fain & Stamps, consisting of Ben Messer, W. S. Gaston, T. N. Clyatt and W. A. Quarles, attended the grocers' picnic at Warm Springs last Wednesday, and report having a most enjoyable time.

W. M. Darden and W. A. Darden, brothers, who are both salesmen, were pleasant callers at the Firing Line office last week. W. M. Darden has just returned to Atlanta from an extensive trip in behalf of his hosiery lines. Both are among the livest knights of the grip who travel out of Atlanta.

The "ins" at Fain & Stamps' yesterday were Cliff Edwards, W. Y. Bailey and S. E. Smith.

W. D. Colton, of the Havana-American company, and T. B. Lewis, of the Capital City Tobacco company, sent in an excellent business from Macon last week. They are working together, pushing especially the El Principe de Gales brand of cigar.



O. C. Long is never a loss for short cuts in getting about Atlanta when rounding up the city trade for the S. P. Richards company but when he took a run up to White Sulphur Springs the other day in his car he got lost. It was on the way back that he took a chance at a cross roads and two hours later found himself five miles further from Atlanta than when he made his guess. "I thought the best roads all led to Atlanta but that one didn't," he explains.

J. R. England, of E. L. Adams company, was away on his vacation last week. During his absence his territory was covered by Cliff McDowell.

H. P. Loveless, of the Consolidated Paper company, was mingling with the merchants at the barbecue and ball game last week. E. E. Shyer, of this company, came in to headquarters yesterday from Knoxville, Tenn.

W. O. Stamps will spend this week paying back some of the calls that were made him during the merchants' convention. He will spend a part of the week visiting with Cliff Edwards and part with Sanders Smith. "I am certainly delighted with the visits that the merchants paid me," said Mr. Stamps, "and to show my appreciation, I am going to get out next week and return all the calls."

Z. C. Allison, noted for raising prize oat crops, was a visitor at John Silvey & Co. the other day.

"They better look out for me in southeast Georgia next week," says R. L. Smith, A. M. Robinson company sample caser. "We've all got the heavy sales habit during the last two weeks and are going right after 'em Monday on the road."

F. W. Webb, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, says he will be glad to get back on the road next week and get a rest from the continual handshaking necessitated lately.

BANNER STATE GIDEONS PLAN BANNER CONVENTION HERE

Georgia Division Will Hold Annual Meeting Here September 6—Atlanta Camp Is Third Largest in the United States

THE CHAMPIONSHIP BANNER.

Winning the national championship for increase in membership at the Toronto convention has aroused interest and enthusiasm among the members of the Georgia division of Gideons that will help make the next state convention, to be held in Atlanta, September 6, the liveliest the organization has yet held.

Following the business session of Saturday, September 6, at which there will be the election of officers, a big rally of the Gideons will be held Sunday afternoon, September 7.

Last year's convention was held in Augusta and the one in Atlanta next month will be the sixth annual meet of the state organization. Each of the seven local camps, Atlanta, Athens, Augusta, Columbus, Macon, Rome and Valdosta, will be represented by from two to three delegates.

A year ago there were only two camps in the state. Five have been established during the year and it is planned to have half a dozen more by the 1914 convention.

In addition to showing a greater growth for the state organization than any other division, the Georgia division have, in the Atlanta camp, the third largest camp in the United States though it is only seven years old, while the national organization is fourteen years old.

Over five hundred special invitations will be sent out for the rally of Sunday, September 7. The Georgia Gideons declare they are going to make a showing next year that will stand comparison in proportion to their membership with the New York and Massachusetts divisions. Those two divisions have combined to carry out a resolve to distribute seventy-five thousand Bibles in the hotels of their territories by the next annual convention and have already the funds for fifteen thousand.

The Georgia Gideons have been quite active along that line but are out now to break all their former records.

CAPT. PHELPS TO ADDRESS GIDEON MEETING TODAY

At the regular weekly Gideon meeting today at the Piedmont hotel assembly room at 3 o'clock the feature will be Captain William H. H. Phelps' story of the recent trip to Toronto and the national convention there.

Captain Phelps, Confederate veteran, merchandise broker and former traveler, is an interesting member of this organization and the members have been looking forward to his report and the sketch of his personal exeriences on the Toronto jaunt.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

Everybody's Poloing

By Angus Perkerson

PIEDMONT PARK is becoming a sort of Middlebrook. No international polo matches have been held there yet; but at almost any time you can find some new devotee of this old game whacking a polo ball round the oval green in the middle of the race track.

A wiry little pony comes galloping over the green carpet of grass, pulls up a little as he reaches a white ball that looks snowy against the turf, a mallet flashes through the air, and the ball goes skimming over the green carpet.

Of these followers of the game which requires both skill and nerve, and also a liking for sport with a touch of danger, Miss Margaret McKee, daughter of Postmaster Hugh L. McKee, is one of the most apt.

Pictures printed here of Miss McKee as she played the game of polo at Piedmont Park, are evidence of the dash and go that are to be found in this sport. No other game surpasses it for "thrills."

You sweep down a smooth green field toward a white ball about the size of an orange, lean far over to the right, whirl the club through the air, and hit the ball as though you found it a particular aggravation.

And, just about the time you reach out for the ball, the pony decides he'll veer over to the left or take an imaginary hurdle, and you either fall off, or don't as the case may be.

"Maj." Miss McKee's pony, has very good manners, and his disposition reminds you of the "Maltese Cat," that pony which was one of the most human characters Kipling ever wrote about. But occasionally he takes the notion into his head to stand on his hind legs as he is doing now in the middle of this page. Yet, such whims never bother his very skillful rider. She merely sits firm in the saddle until the pony is over his frisky humor, and then reasons with him about such unpololike antics.

WOMEN TAKE TO POLO.

Miss McKee, Miss Mary Algood Jones, Mrs. John Hill and other Atlanta women who are skilled in horsemanship are taking to the game of polo, and all are acquiring no little aptitude at this enlivened form of golf.

When "Maj." who is the Maltese Cat over again in some ways, has a white ball pointed out to him on the green turf, he usually keeps straight at the ball, checks his pace the least bit when he comes alongside, his rider leans over, whirls the mallet, and away goes the ball, skipping over the grass.

As Miss McKee says, no game has the exhilaration the dash and the spirit of polo. It is the sport that makes your blood tingle, even beyond 60 miles an hour in an automobile that's all engine. With a fair sky overhead, grass like a green carpet underfoot, the pony so restless that he can't keep all four feet to the ground at the same time, and the round white ball looking at you in a mocking sort of way, you realize for the first time what is "sport."

Since the international match at Middlebrook when the English team made a great fight against the American four, but went home leaving the polo cup behind them, the increased interest in polo has been surprising.

POLO AND GOLF.

The game, before that, had something of the former strangeness of golf. Now, chasing a polo ball on horseback is almost as popular as hunting a golf ball afoot.

Recently, a polo match was held at Ft. McPherson, and now every afternoon or so, you can find someone practicing the game upon the natural polo field at Piedmont park.

Miss McKee says:

"It is just the game for one who likes horseback riding. It has an excitement, a dash, a go, that other games don't have. I'm just learning, but I'm very much interested."

The game itself is as old almost as time. Some Persian who had an eye to sport, originated it about 2,000 years ago, and drew up a set of rules that are

MR. DOOLEY ON WOMEN AND POLITICS.

By FINLEY PETER DUNNE.

"I SEE," said Mr. Dooley, "that a lady down in New York says that if we don't give thim th' vote be th' year nineteen fifteen they'll do in this counthry what they're doin' in England."

"I'd like to be chief iv polis f'r about five minyits if they thry it," said Mr. Hennessy.

"What wud ye do, ye big, sthrong man, to th' little pets?" Mr. Dooley asked. "Th' last time I see ye in a debate with th' fam'ly circle it was not an argymint but a foot race that ye won."

"I'd—I'd—I don't know what I'd do, but I'd do something," said Mr. Hennessy.

"Spoken like a prime ministher," said Mr. Dooley. "I must say that ye take a broad, statesmanly view iv ye'er jooty as a man, an' wan that has manny pricidints in histhry. Fr'm th' time iv Solomon, an' befure, whiniver a marrid man or other profissyonal diplomat has found himsilf in a wrangle with th' fair they'se been on'y wan thing he cud do, an' that was to wish she was a gintleman f'r a few minyits so he cud take a kick at her. But this transformation bein' impossible in nature, d'ye mind, th' prudent statesman will grab his hat while there is yet time an' take th' steps to th' sthreet at wan jump, showin' th' supeeryority iv his sex be bangin' th' dure afther him if possible.

"I know iv no battle in th' wurruld that's so onakel as wan between a rale lady an' a perfick gintleman. If ye win ye lose, an' if ye lose ye lose. It is shameful to th' prime ministher iv England to be slapped be Mrs. Pankhurst, but it is akelly shameful f'r him to slap her. It's hard to say whether 'tis more disgraceful to bate wan iv these gifts iv Hiven, or to be baten be her. Th' modhren lady is far fr'm bein' th' soft thing that she was in th' days whin primitive man coaxed her to do his biddin' with th' shin bone iv an illyphant. Like as not th' poor weak thing has just come home fr'm an afthernoon at th' gyminasium an' it ain't anny twinty to wan th' crool tyrant wudden't get licked. On th' other hand, if he happened to put his right acrost first, no matther if he done it to save his life, half th' neighborhood wud turn out to lynch him. May Hiven sind that if I am iver called on to choose between victhry an' defeat at th' hands iv wan iv these gintle priestesses iv th' fireside me nimble feet will save me honor. F'r shud I win ivry chivalrous soul will want me hanged, an' if I lose I'll be th' victim f'r th' rest iv me life iv all who love an aisy mark, an' that's th' entire fightin' wurruld.

"Yes, sir; ye gallant marrid fellows ar-re up against it. It's all right f'r us bachelors. This is none iv our battle. If th' ladies iv America takes it into their dear little heads f'r to adopt th' tactics iv their sisters in England I'll offer me sarvices to thim as insthructor. I'll organize a comp'ny iv sharpshooters an' have thim out in me back yard practicin' peggin' bricks at stuffed figures iv th' cab'net. An' I'll be out arly dhressed in me best on iliction mornin', an' 'twill be: 'Good mornin', fellow citizen. How well ye're lookin' this blessed day. That's a very becomin' bonnet ye have on top iv ye'er goolden hair an' matches th' blue iv ye'er eyes as well as annything cud excipt Hiven's own bright sky. Give ye a vote, me dear? With all th' pleasure in th' wurruld. Have I iver denied ye annything? Take me ar-rm an' hang on tight. I'll conduct ye to th' pollin' place. Wud ye like a sup iv ice crame sody to nerve ye f'r th' ordeel? Here we ar-re at th' pollin' place. Officer, step aside. Boys, throw thim see-gars away. Mulligan, where's ye'er manners? Take off ye'er hat befure I tache ye a lesson in etiket be kickin' it off. Casey, a pencil. Schmidt, some iv thim ballots. Which iv these d'ye think ye'd like best, allanna? I'll hold thim up to th' light f'r ye. Yes, that wan's a pretty shade. Now, if ye'll come into th' booth we'll mark th' ballot together. Here ye ar-re. Mark a cross at th' top iv this colyum. No, not there; here. I'll show ye. Give me ye'er hand an' I'll guide it. Did anny wan iver tell ye ye had little hands? What's ye'er hurry? O, all right. Boys, here's Mabel's ballot. Be sure ye give it a good place an' count it first.'

"Sure, th' bachelors will be th' boys in pollyticks if th' ladies gets th' votes. It's to us intilligent, raisonable, an' handsome men that th' dear things will come an' not to crusty ol' marrid men. We've niver took advantage iv thim with false promises an' led thim fr'm th' altar to th' washtub. I'll have fifty votes to ye'er wan if th' girls get their rights, an' I'll be a power in th' ward.

"I don't blame ye marrid men f'r not wantin' me thim to vote, but how ar-re ye goin' to stop thim? I don't know. Nobody knows. F'r thousands iv years th' greatest marrid minds in th' wurruld has been puzzled to decide what to do with a lady whin she stops bein' a lady an' acts like a gintleman at a quarther to twelve o'clock on a Saturdah night. In her own proper sphere she's as gintle as a lily an' often too tired to debate her rights. But whin she steps out iv th' refinin' influonce iv th' kitchen an' begins hurlin' things it is best f'r a thoughtful man to seek th' seeclusion iv his libry at th' corner iv th' sthreet an' wait till she sees hersilf in th' lookin' glass.

"Ye were all right as long as th' ladies come to ye an' pleaded f'r a vote an' begged it as a favor fr'm ye. Ye winked ye'er eye at ye'er fellow man an' chuckled to ye'ersilf an' thin ye turned to th' low spoken pettyshuner with th' white curls an' th' little lace cap an' ye said: 'We wud be glad to considher ye'er prayer, but we have too much respict f'r ye to grant it. Th' rough hurly-burly iv pollyticks is not sootable f'r such dainty flowers as ye. Go home an' cook th' supper.'

"An' they wint. But someway or another they heerd iv a gr-reat truth iv pollytikal pro-gress that us men has kept secret f'r years, which is that manny a fearless statesman wud rather lend an ear to th' cry iv th' oppressed thin to a lump iv coal an' th' like iv that. Th' rule iv pollyticks is, 'Do that f'r me or I'll do this to ye,' an' th' prayer is not complete without both sections bein' in it. To be a succissful reformer ye've got first to be a nuisance. There ain't manny principals that a statesman wud go to th' stake an' be burned f'r, but there ain't e'er a wan that he wudden't give up rather thin be pestered. If ye threaten to shoot a man onless he gives ye something he may take a chance on ye'er bein' a bad shot. But if ye tell him ye'll put a cinder in his eye an' keep it there till he grants what ye want ye've got him. No man wants to be a continyous martyr on a small scale all his life. An' statesmen ar-re always more sinsitive to pain thin ordhinry people. That's what makes thim statesmen.

"I ain't sayin', mind ye, that this is th' right theery, but it's th' wan th' ladies iv England has got into their feeble but tenacyous intellecks. An' I will say this, they're well equipped be nature f'r their task. With thim it's no longer, 'Won't ye listen to our prayer, O stately lords?' but 'Give us th' vote or we'll make life a burden to ye.' Ivry mornin' some ol' consarvitive mimber iv parlymint who thinks that a woman has reached th' highest pint in her mintal devilopmint whin she has larned th' herrin' bone stitch wakes up just in time to put out a fire in his clothes closet that's been set be th' wife iv his bosom. He goes down to breakfast to find an imitation dinnymite bomb cheerfully cracklin' undher th' table. He quenches it fr'm th' taypot, an' afther dustin' th' imitation prussic acid off th' eggs ates his breakfast with as much relish as he can considhrin' that his toast has been wrapped up be th' hired girl in a pamphlet callin' on him to remimber Mrs. Pankhurst an' that his 17 year old daughter is firin' crokay balls at him through th' window. But it is not till he goes out on th' goluf coorse to prepare himsilf f'r his jooty iv governin' but Grace,' she says. Thin whin he presooms to seize her coat sleeve with th' thumb an' forefinger she shrieks, 'Brute!' an' falls to th' pavemint in a faint. Th' polisman, lost to all sinse iv pity, puts smellin' salts to her nose an' brutally rubs her forehead an' wrists with cologne. She doesn't regain consciousness ontil she is lifted on th' shouldhers iv th' officer an' his comrades, whin it all comes back to her at wanst. Expeeryenced polismen, Hinnissy, tell me it's almost impossible to get an onaisy gintleman to go along with ye if he doesn't want to onless ye first take th' precaution iv dhroppin' a piece iv timber on his head just back iv th' ear. Thin think what it must be f'r modest constables to convey a fretful lady through th' busy sthreets iv a large city.

"Whin they fin'lly get her to th' polis coort an' th' judge asks her is she guilty or not guilty she pegs th' ink stand at him. He slips undher th' desk while pronouncin' sintence on her an' on'y comes out whin a male sympathizer is brought in. Thin he has a chanst to relieve his feelin's in safety. Whin th' lady is carrid away to jail an' her brutal captors has gone to th' hospital to have their wounds dhressed she refuses to ate anny-thing. This is conduct so unheerd iv in England that th' governmint don't know how to dale with it. They stock th' cell with sponge cake, pickled limes, currant jelly, ice crame, broiled lobster, an' f'r a pote to write pothry about a sinsitive plant who's sthrugglin' f'r a vote with her hair in her eyes. He'd find it hard wurruk to compose 'Lines to Delia Poorin' Molasses Into a Letter Box' or 'On Seein' Pansy Set Fire to a Race Thrack.' D'ye suppose Askith comin' out iv his house an' seein' a lady hitched to his fence with a dog chain wud speak iv her as a 'rosebud set with little thorns an' sweet as English air cud make her'? Ye can bet he wudden't. No more cud ye think iv a polisman on his back on th' sidewalk with a sufferage leader dancin' on him quotin' fr'm that pote Hogan knows: 'Here comes the lady! O, so light iv foot!' Or supposin' th' poor copper was sint to lade th' boochous Miss Pankhurst off to th' rest cure, wud he sigh, as he took out an accident policy:

"'Except I be by Sylvya in th' night
There is no music in th' nightingale'?

"What he wud say wud be, 'Onless I be by Sylvya in th' night I wudden't need to carry a night stick.' It wudden't stack up as well as pothry, but 'twud be a betther statement iv fact.

"It's very hard to know what to do with a lady who refuses to be cooed to, an' it looks to me as though th' language iv anty-nuptyal pothry was goin' into th' discard f'r awhile. If Hogan don't give these gintle things a vote he'll have to change his adjectives. An' aven if they do get into polly-

A polisman is sint to arrest her.

I'll orginize a comp'ny iv sharpshooters, an' have thim out in me back yard practicin' peggin' bricks at stuffed figures iv' th cab'net.

th' impire an' finds that his maiden aunt has burned 'Votes for women' with acid on th' puttin' green that he tears off f'r th' house iv commons an' puts on his hat an' gets up an' demands to know what th' deluded govermint is goin' to protict th' most sacred institutions iv Britain.

"The prime ministher, afther castin' a bold an' defiant glance at th' gall'ry to see that no ladies ar-re prisint, announces in an angry whisper that th' govermint is preparin' to discuss th' advisability iv considhrin' puttin' down these outrages with an ir'n hand. In th' future offinders will be threated just as if they were men, on'y th' counthry must remimber that this is impossible. He wud say that th' prisint intintion is to keep thim in jail as long as they came to stay an' thin to turn thim out without mercy. It is not thrue that Mrs. Pankhurst has been denied th' use iv curlin' ir'ns while in prison. She has not on'y used thim on her own head but on th' head iv th' chief warder, th' physician, an' siv'ral iv th' jailers. He regretted to repoort that siv'ral vally-able officyals has suffered th' loss iv their thumbs in feedin' th' pris'ners forcibly, an' he is seeryously considhrin' takin' th' Victorya Cross away fr'm th' military an' givin' it to th' polismen deetailed to pinch th' suffragit leaders.

"That afthernoon as th' prime ministher starts f'r home undher a sthrong guard iv polis a tall, blonde lady, iv ladylike appearance, takes a brick fr'm her reticule an' pitches it into his stovepipe hat. A polisman is sint to arrest her. He goes up to her politely an', gettin' quite red in the face, says: 'Vilet, will ye give me th' pleasure iv a waltz as far as th' callyboose?' 'I will not,' says she, hittin' him over th' head with her satchel. 'Crool monsther,' says she, hurlin' a No. 3 double 'A' into his midst. 'Down with th' tyranny iv man,' says she, stabbin' him with a hatpin. 'An' besides,' she says, 'me name is not Vilet other dainties supposed to tempt th' female palate, but she won't touch thim. If 'twas a man that scorned th' rude but wholesome jail fare th' jailer wud say, 'Thank ye, number nine hundherd an' fifty,' an' carry it home to his fam'ly. An' th' nex' day th' indomitle spirit wud be willin' to ate his boots. But th' lady spurns it ontil th' prime ministher says angrily: 'Very well, if ye won't ate ye'll have to get out or th' cook will. Ye've hurt his feelin's tur-rbly be refusin' his dishes.' An' he sets her free an' she goes out an' attinds bankits in her honor ontil th' doctor tells her it's time to go on a dite again, an' she returns to jail.

"This here application iv th' feminine argymint of tantrum to pollyticks is roonin' th' disposition iv English statesmen. Wan iv thim can't go to parlymint f'r a little rest without some lady throws something at him. She breaks into his home, she turns up at church an' intherrupts his prayers, an' she aven goes so far in sacrilege as to climb out on th' race thrack an' spile th' chances iv a 3 year old that he's backed down fr'm twinty to wan to avens. It's tur-rble.

"How's it goin' to end? Faith, I don't know, but it's knockin' all the pothry out iv our relations with th' fair sex. There's our frind Hogan. He's been expellin' pothry about th' ladies f'r so manny years that I have it be heart. They're this an' they're that. They're etarnal joy an' everlastin' love. Angels don't look like thim, but on'y pretind to. They're perfection nobly planned, says he. But whin wan iv thim wondherful crathers comes up an' thries to cash in his adjectives f'r a vote he wants to lock her up. It's hard f'r a lady to think he's on th' square with her whin he tells her men wud be brutes without her afther he's ordhered a polisman to chase her away fr'm th' polls.

"An' be th' same token it's not goin' to be aisy ticks it's goin' to be difficult f'r a pote to sing th' praises iv a lady that's got th' job iv bridgetender that he craved f'r himsilf. An' I will say this, firmly as I believe in th' akequality iv th' sex, I dhraw th' line at puttin' thim on th' polis foorce."

"They haven't done that?" Mr. Hennessy asked in a frightened whisper.

"They have," said Mr. Dooley. "Here it is in black an' white: 'Ten women appinted to th' polis foorce.' That ought to about end th' day iv th' troobadoor. I do not hesitate to say that nawthin' cud injooce me to twang me light guitar undher th' windows iv th' Deering shtreet station. Much as I am th' slave iv th' sex an' greatly as I admire an' love thim all, 'twud sthrain me corjality to be asked to set in th' moonlight in th' park with me ar-rm around a polisman, be she iver so much a lady. An' yet who cud resist an officer in th' circumstances? Who wud refuse to go along with a lady that had a club in her hand an' a revolver in her pocket? Th' on'y thing that wud save him wud be she mightn't be able to find her pocket. But think iv th' disgrace to impeeryal man iv bein' dhragged to th' pound be wan iv these harmless vestals, as Hogan wud say. I wud think nawthin' again ye if our frind Officer Muldoon took ye in—that is, if ye put up a respictable fight. But to hear that ye'd been lagged be Officer Lucy Larkspur wud break me heart. I'd niver want to see ye'er face again."

"Now, look here," said Mr. Hennessy; "I want to know right now whether ye're f'r thase things or not. Where d'ye stand?"

"Well," said Mr. Dooley, "I used to agree with Hogan whin he said pollyticks was too rough f'r women. But afther readin' what they've done in England I'm afraid to give thim th' vote because they may be too rough f'r pollyticks."

CAMERAS OF THE MOVIES MAY FOCUS ON ATLANTA

Moving Picture Stars Who may Some Day Play in Atlanta

LILLIAN WALKER VITAGRAPH

FLORA FINCH VITAGRAPH

PEARL WHITE CRYSTAL FILMS

BEFORE long Whitehall street may become almost as familiar in the films as Broadway; and the groves and hillsides of the suburbs may enter into as many bucolic scenes as Central Park.

Edison's and one or two other companies, which make the "movies," have discovered that Georgia sunlight has a clearness and yet a softness which brings out the smiles and the tears of the heroine as even the light of Southern California can never do.

All this time, while moving picture companies have been searching for the ideal studio, and have sent directors, actors, and scenarios even into foreign lands to find diversity of scenery and perfection of light, they have overlooked the exceptional photographic quality of Georgia sunlight.

Charley Seay, who was here not many weeks ago staging comics, dramatics, and scenics, for Edison, has discovered that Georgia sunlight not only makes cotton to bloom and corn to ripen, but encourages the most vivid and satisfactory pictures that he has ever wound out of a camera machine of the Edison's.

What is more, scenery here has a diversity to which the groves and greenness of southern California is unequal. A sameness of beauty prevails in that western picture land. But here a moving picture camera finds mountains, flat-lands, busy cities, quiet hamlets, and all else that is necessary to the setting of the scenario.

MOUNTAINS AND MEADOWS.

As Charley said, while he was busy staging the "Red Hills of Georgia," and was planning to go up Tallulah for scenics:

"You find every sort of trees in Georgia, every kind of scenery, and light you can't beat anywhere. The sun shines just right. You get a combination of shadow and light, of softness and brightness, that makes the film perfect, unless there's something wrong with the camera or the photographer forgot to have his coffee that morning and was feeling sort of nervous.

"Atlanta is the one place where moving picture companies ought to have studios, and the time isn't far off when you'll be cultivatin' films here as you do cotton and corn now.

"Right here in Atlanta you can take nearly any sort of picture you want. Set up a camera in Whitehall street about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and you get a picture that makes Broadway seem quiet. There isn't any sort of city picture you can't pull off here. And, on the other hand, you can jump into an automobile and be right out in the country in a few minutes. If you want water, there's Piedmont Park.

"Again, if you want an ocean scene, it is 't far to Tybee. If mountains are the background you are needing, there's Habersham and Rabun counties. Or, if you want the tropics, a trip to Florida will give you all you could find right jam-up against the equator.

ALL SCENERY IN ONE.

"Really, you shouldn't say that scenery in Georgia is diversified; it's just all sorts of scenery that anybody ever saw gathered together for the pleasure of man and the assistance of photographers.

"But more than everything else is the light. You can't beat Georgia sunlight. It's good for crops, men, and pictures. There is never a month in the year when the light here isn't good. You don't have bleak gray seasons in this state. You don't have streaks of gloomy weather that are as bad for pictures as they are for dispositions. All the year round, from summer back to summer, Georgia sunlight is the sort that films thrive and grow fat on."

Moving picture companies are beginning to see the truth of Charley Seay's discovery. The Edison was first to understand that light here, as he said, is unsurpassed; and their brothers in this business of picturing humankind are coming to the same understanding.

When Charley and a producing company came to Georgia for the purpose of "staging" several plays and of photographing scenery for scenery's sake, Edison was making an experiment. All the moving picture companies were beginning to realize that the western cactus was becoming a too familiar sight in the "pictures," and that relief in the form of a few Georgia pines was not undesirable.

DOUBTFUL OF THE LIGHT.

But, until Charley Seay's recent visit, none of the companies knew what to expect from a Georgia setting, and from Georgia sunlight. They were doubtful of the light, which is the chief good quality of this state as a moving picture studio.

But the pictures which were the result of Charley's few weeks' stay were all the proof necessary. After he had submitted them to Horace S Plimpton, who is manager of the negative department of the Edison company, the secret about Georgia sunlight began to leak out, and once the pictures were shown, the secret became about as "open" as a secret ever gets to be.

There is not a moving picture company of them all, now, who doesn't know that southern light, Georgia light in particular, is reels ahead of the western combination of light and shadows.

Rembrandt himself couldn't paint a better chiaro-oscuro effect than the photographer finds already arranged for him by the Georgia sun. The light is just right, soft yet bright; the shadows are just heavy enough and, yet, are not gloomy.

"We sent a producing company to Georgia as an experiment," said Mr. Plimpton, after he had looked over the result of Charley Seay's visit. "But we didn't expect the success that he had. We didn't think for a minute he could get the effects that he did."

LOOKING TOWARD GEORGIA.

And other companies began to think the same thing as soon as the pictures were produced. And, since they are all looking for new photographic fields, they all just now are looking toward Georgia.

Western pictures have been overdone; moving picture companies are beginning to leave no room in Florida for tourists; Georgia, with its diversity of scenery and its imitable sunlight is the studio of the future.

When the companies establish here, they will make Atlanta headquarters A large tract of land will be bought near the city, where "inside" pictures will be taken, and others for which an appropriate "outdoor" sitting may be prepared. But for those scenes which requires nature instead of a stage carpenter, the companies will go to north Georgia, to Tybee, or pose among the crowds on Whitehall street.

Already Atlanta is headquarters for the distribution of films. There are four or five companies here whose business is to lease pictures from the manufacturing companies and to release them to the theaters. A large part of the south depends for its pictures upon the companies which have offices here.

Alaska's Great Possibilities

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 17.—Congressman Clement Brumbaugh, who is member of the house committee on territories, is strong for the immediate development of Alaska.

He says that undoubtedly a bill will be passed which will put the whole matter of building government railroads, opening up coal mines and establishing collier lines in the hands of the president to carry through.

We gave $7,200,000 for Alaska. Last year we took out of Alaska in gold alone about $18,000,000. In the last fourteen years we have taken out of Alaska in gold, silver, copper, coal, fish and furs about $475,000,000. On account of lack of shipping and railroad facilities, we have hardly begun to scratch the surface of Alaska. No one can estimate the billions of undiscovered wealth awaiting us in this undeveloped wonderland.

"Most people are incredulous when told of the fine agricultural posibilities in Alaska, because they imagine that the country lacks sunlight.

"The shortest day in Alaska is December 22, when it has not more than two or three hours of sunshine. On March 22 the sun is shining twelve hours. On June 22 the Tanana valley has from 21 to 22 hours of direct, vigorous sunshine and heat, and such crops as wheat, rye, barley, oats and potatoes are grown, matured and harvested in the four months of constant sunshine and heat.

"During these months the Tanana valley has three-fourths of the year's sunshine—has more sunshine than any point on the earth's surface south of it; more sunshine than California, Ohio, Georgia or Florida.

"In answer to the question of why the government should assist in the development of Alaska it can be argued that in fairness we owe this to ourselves and to Alaska as well.

"If the development of Alaska is properly safeguarded and the people's rights protected, then the citizens of the United States, as well as the government, can hardly fail to realize $100 for every $1 expended in Alaska. But congress should be careful to see to it that in any plan of development permitted or adopted all mineral and coal deposits are forever preserved to the people of Alaska and to the people of the United States.

"The consensus of opinion is that a railroad should be built from the South sea of Alaska up through the interior, so that by branch lines it would open up the great coal fields and gold fields of the country and the great river valleys for home builders, ending at some great river navigable to the western ocean.

As I entered the alley the bells of the dim city tolled for the passing night. Far in the maze of filthy lanes and mist-choked streets a policeman whistled: I heard the distant din of an elevated, rushing through the fog, which rolled from river to river, heavy, stifling.

In the gloom of the alley a shadowy form passed. All around me the vapour became tainted with opium and a flare of yellow light streamed out from an opening door. There was a momentary murmur of voices, the soft shuffle of felt-shod feet, the rustle of silken sleeves. A painted paper lantern swung from the doorway, dipped and disappeared. I heard the deadened slam of the door and the black night veiled my eyes again.

I raised my eyes to the dark house before me where from a rusting balcony a sign hung low above the doorway:

"This was her house," I said aloud to myself; but I passed on to the next house. Before I could find the handle, the door flew open and I heard McManus' angry, bellow: "Git t' hell outer here, yer dope suckin' yap!" and a Chinaman was hustled into the area, fleeing like an infuriated ape.

I stepped into the low-ceilinged room and took a chair at a table beside the wall. Two young men sitting there said, "Hello, Jim!"

"Good evenin'," said McManus, leaning over the bar, "did you see me givin' de bounce to Wah-Wo?"

"Yes," I said, "when did he come back?"

"He jest come in. I told him to git an' he give me de ha-ha, so Charley han him down."

One of the young men at the table beside me looked up from the Welsh-rabbit he was eating and called for ale. McManus brought it himself, a brimming pewter mug. Then he bawled for Charley to take my order.

Lynde, of the "Herald," advised me to try a rabbit, and Penlow of the "Tribune," spoke well of the chops, so I left it to Charley and he retired, whistling, "Oh I don't know!"

"It's a wonder to me," I said, hanging my wet mackintosh on a peg and kicking off my overshoes, "its a wonder to me that Wah-Wo was discharged by the court."

"There was no evidence to hold him," observed Lynde.

Penlow lighted his pipe and rattled his mug on the table.

"No evidence," I repeated; "do you fellows doubt that Wah-Wo did it?"

"I suppose he did," said Penlow, "it was my scoop, too."

"We may scoop yet," said Lynde, "the man's bound to be caught."

"Gents," began McManus, "youse is dead off—. Wah-Wo ain't in it," he said contemptuously. "I give him de t'row down—fur why?—fur because I don't give de glad hand to no dope-suckin' chink. But he didn't do no dirt to the gal what youse gents was stuck on—he ain't that kind! He give me the laugh an' I crowed him down, see? An' I won't do a ting but push his face in. See?"

"Well, Mac," said Lynde, "what's your theory? You know as much about it as anybody. The girl came in here every night, didn't she? People say she lived alone, but of course she had company when she wanted it. What's your idea, Mac?

McManus looked out of the window and drummed on the bar with the blade of his oyster knife.

As I was eating in silence, thinking of Wah-Wo and the dead girl, Caithness, of the Consolidated Press, came in looking cold and ill, and we hastily made room for him at our table.

"You're sick," said Lynde sharply, "you ought to be in bed."

"I'm all right," said Caithness, glancing at us with his large dark eyes: "Mac, get me something hot."

I turned again to the chops, scarcely listening to the voices beside me, for I was thinking again of the dead girl.

I had no doubt that Wah-Wo had killed her. Again and again I had seen his eyes fastened upon her as she sat chatting with us, here at this very table. The motive was clear to me. I had spoken of this to the others but they laughed at me. The district attorney took no stock in it, either.

How could anybody but a Chinaman, crazed with jealousy and opium, harm the child? For she was a mere child, this pallid victim whose soul had mounted to the Judgment seat from the filth of New York's Chinatown.

Pale, slim, childish, she had never haunted Chinese resorts nor, to my knowledge, had she ever touched needle to flame. She had shunned the women of the quarter. I seldom saw her speak to any man except the reporters and newspaper artists who came to McManus' for a midnight chop or rarebit.

Her acquaintance with us had been open and guileless. She chatted with us about our business, discussed the latest police shakeup or the newest Tammany scandal, and glided away into the street again, followed by her dog.

Her dog!

A great hulking brute, with somber eyes and low hanging jowl—a creature, silent, unmoved except when she bent her pale face to his ear and whispered. Then and only then he would rise, shuffling from the sawdust, and stalk after her into the night.

He never paid the slightest attention to us. Calls, caresses, threats, left him unmoved.

"What is it you whisper into his ear, Lil?" we often asked, but she would only smile and answer:

"His name."

And so, as none of us knew his name, we called him simply, "her dog."

It had been two months now since Lil was found on her bed with a bullet in her heart and the dog lying stolidly across one bare little foot. And after we had clubbed together and buried her, we were kinder to her dog.

Every night he came gravely into McManus' to lie down just as he had done when Lil sat there chatting with us.

At first McManus was afraid that the dog would "hoodoo the place," but he left the silent brute undisturbed, and, after a while, began to grow fond of it.

As I sat thinking of all these things, I heard the iron door creak on its hinges. McManus stood up saying: "Here he comes, gents!"

Her dog entered.

Lynde held out his hand as the brute passed, and Penlow flung a bone one the floor. He noticed neither the caress nor the bone, but lay down under the bar and stretched his great limbs across the floor, sighing heavily.

"There is one thing certain," said Lynde, looking at the dog: "the man who killed the girl was in the habit of visiting her—and that dog knew him."

"I also believe the murderer was known to the dog," said Penlow.

"The murderer," said Caithness, "was her lover."

"It is strange," said I, "that none of us suspects anybody except Wah-Wo."

"Why strange?" asked Caithness, then he added impatiently, "yes, it is strange. Do you think she would have looked at a Chinaman?"

"The Chinaman looked at her; I saw him," I replied.

"After all, she was a common girl," said Penlow unaffectedly, "and I guess pride cut no figure with her."

"That is where you lie," said Caithness in a low voice.

There was a dead silence. Then Penlow said: "Did I understand you, Caithness?"

"I rose and laid my hand on Penlow's arm, which was twitching, though his face was calm.

"Are you crazy?" I said to Caithness.

"I think I am," said Caithness slowly, "I beg your pardon, Penlow."

Lynde turned his puzzled eyes from Penlow to Caithness and lifted his mug mechanically. Penlow straightened in his chair, but said nothing, and I leaned back motioning McManus to remove the covers.

Lynde picked up a paper and ran it through, unaffectedly searching for his own matter; after a while Penlow did the same.

I looked at Caithness, and he left my eyes, for presently he moved a little and passed his hand over his sunken cheeks.

"What's up?" I asked, dropping my voice and bending toward him.

"Nothing—why?"

"You look like the last rose of summer—you've got a beastly cough."

He smiled faintly. "It's consumption," he said, "I found out today."

I stared at him stupidly.

"I don't mind," he said, "I'm dead sick of the whole business."

"How do you know it's consumption?" I asked at length.

"I went to three doctors to make sure; I tell you I don't care."

Little Penlow was listening now; before I could speak again he leaned over and took Caithness' hand affectionately.

"Brace up, old boy," he said, "go to California and get well."

"Chuck up your job! Let the Consolidated Press go to the devil!" urged Lynde.

"I have resigned," said Caithness quietly. "I thought I'd come around tonight and say goodbye."

The dog shifted his position under the bar and sighed again.

"Do you fellows know that I have scooped?" said Caithness abruptly.

"No—not the fellow who shot Lil?" faltered Penlow, who had thrown his whole soul into solving the mystery.

"Yes—the murderer of Lily White," said Caithness. In the silence I could hear McManus grinding his toothpick in his yellow teeth.

"I'm out of the Consolidated now," continued Caithness calmly—"the scoop is yours if you want it, Penlow."

"But—but you"—began Penlow.

"I?" said Caithness fiercely, "what do I care for newspapers? What do I care who knows it now—what paper prints it first?"

Lynde leaned over the table, his head in his hand; Penlow's pipe went out.

"Did you ever know," said Caithness with a touch of scorn in his voice, "that I also loved the girl? Do you think I am ashamed to confess it? Do you know what I have been through since she died? Hell? Oh, yes, that's what they say in books. It doesn't matter—Penlow, when you are ready—"

Penlow started, then groped in his pocket for pencil and paper.

"I am ready, Jack," he said.

"This is the story," said Caithness, almost eagerly. "On the 13th of last November, Lily White, a girl living next door, was shot through the heart by a man who was jealous of her. He knew that she came into McManus' and gossiped with the newspaper men. When she was with us here, this man was not jealous—have you got that, Penlow?"

"Yes," said Penlow, scratching away on his pad.

"He was not jealous when Lily chatted with us, but when he saw Wah-Wo talking to her one night under the electric light by the Joss-house, he watched the girl night and day. She said that she loved him—she laughed at him when he offered her marriage—so he watched her. Have you got that, Penlow?"

"Yes."

"Then a day came when Lily was to go to the country to see her sister—that is what she said—to see her sister, and this man went with her to the train and saw her off on her journey. But something told him to watch the next in-coming train, and he did.

"And Lily was on it!

"He followed her. She came straight to Dovers street, heavily veiled, and entered a house that you all know—the house with the paper lanterns and red signs. Wah-Wo lives there. A week later she returned to the man who had followed her. He was waiting for her—have you written that?"

"Yes, Jack."

"He was waiting in her room—alone with that dog there. He accused her, and she denied it. She called heaven to witness her innocence. He offered her marriage again; she laughed at him. Then he shot her through the heart."

Penlow ceased writing and looked up expectantly.

"The murderer's name? Have patience," said Caithness, grimly smiling. "The man called to the dog—her dog there, and, because he was the ONLY LIVING SOUL who knew the brute's name, the dog answered and followed him out into the street.

"All day long he wandered about the city, and at night he went back to look upon the dead. He did not care who saw him—he courted discovery, but no one paid him any attention, and, as it now appears, nobody ever saw him. About midnight he went away, leaving the dog crouched at the dead girl's feet, and since then he has moved like a living death among the people of the city, unsuspected, unnoticed by any—except me."

He paused and looked at us. Tears had quenched the pale flame in his eyes, and the hair clung to his damp forehead.

"That man killed the woman I loved," he said, "and now I am going to give him up!" Then he rose trembling. The sleeping dog sighed heavily.

Caithness bent and touched the massive head, muttering, "Come."

At his touch the dog raised its head and looked at him with grave eyes.

Then, moving toward the door, he whispered again, CALLING THE DOG BY NAME; and the great brute rose stiffly, yawned, and slowly followed him out into the night.

The iron door slammed behind them; the damp odor of fog came from the black street. Lynde buried his head in his hands; McManus leaned heavily on the bar, pale as a corpse. Presently I heard the sound of rustling paper.

It was Penlow tearing up his notes.

PRACTICE OF MEDICENE BY THE INDIANS

CLAREMORE, Okla.—The results arrived at after a careful study of ancient Indian medical practice, says Clarence H. Reagan, will doubtless surprise many who have labored under the impresion that an Indian must necessarily have been a good doctor and that the medicine man or conjurer, with his theories of ghosts, witches and revengeful animals, knew more about the properties of plants and the curative powers of herbs than the trained botanist or physician who had devoted a lifetime of study to his specialty.

Those savage doctors of early centuries had their primitive methods handed down—not for their value in the medical world, but, as it developed, a curiosity for ethnology students. Withal, there were many who believed the child of the forest" was well versed in all the properties of its productions.

An extensive reading of divers tribes of Indians will show that none were more complete in ancient lore than those of the Cherokees, who ranked first in aboriginal customs and whose vocabulary of myths and creations were inexhaustible.

SOME "REMEDIES."

The medical practice of the Cherokee Shaman was complete of ancient formulas and an empiric development of the fetish idea. For example, the antidote for a disease caused by a rabbit was a plant called "rabbit's food," "rabbit's ear" or "rabbit's tail;" for snake diseases and the plant used was "snake's tooth," for worms, a plant resembling a worm, and for inflamed eyes a flower having the appearance and name of a "deer's eye." A yellow root was good when the patient vomited yellow bile, and a black one when dark circles appeared under the eyes, and in each case the disease and plant were named from the color. A decoction of burrs was a remedy or cure for forgetfulness, as there was nothing that would stick like a burr, and likewise a wiry root tea drank to make the muscles sinewy.

Under such a system the number of natures outnumbered the cures in the same proportion as the roots prescribed for certain cures in the Cherokee dispensary (procured in North Carolina from several old Indian Shaman and priests in 1887), failed to serve their purpose—estimated at 25 per cent correctly used, 60 per cent worthless and 15 per cent so used as to be difficult to ascertain whether they were of any benefit or not. Granting that two of these three produce good results there would have been about 35 per cent, or one-third of the whole, possessing medical virtue, while the remaining two-thirds were inert, if not injurious.

Their ignorance of true medical principles involved was shown by the regulations prescribed for the patient. With the exception of fasting, no sanitary precautions were taken to aid in the recovery of the sick person, and even in the fasting there was much religious ceremony, and the patient was forced to abstain from the use of food until sunset.

"DELICACIES" FOR THE SICK.

As the Indian cuisine was extremely limited, no delicate dishes were prepared for the patient, heavy, sodd n, cornmeal dumplings and bean bread being the "food de main." All animal food was abstained from, as the belief was prevalent among the redmen that it contained evil spirits, and rheumatics were under the ban of eating animal legs, as the leg was deemed the seat of malady. Lye entered into all food of the ancient Cherokee, as their bean and chestnut bread, cornmeal dumpling, hominy and gruel were all boiled in a pot and contained lye to a certain extent.

Old Cherokee doctors never recognized the necessity of quietness around the sick, and a war dance could take place in front of the sick room without his raising any objections on account of the sickness or likelihood of retarding the recovery of the patient. No rules were formulated for fresh air exercises, and for that reason the Cherokee cabin never had a door or window.

The Cherokees were very careless regarding the health and went bareheaded at all times, slept on the ground in all kinds of weather, and even went swimming in the cold months of midwinter. As a result of this carelessness they died in great numbers during the years of the civil war and in later years.

Many Love Letters for Women Jurors

ST. LOUIS.—The young women who served the other day on the first all-women jury in East St. Louis are being besieged with love letters from youths in Illinois and Missouri, and their mail is daily growing heavier with the gushing epistles. A number of messages have come to each, breathing love from admirers.

One of the writers, as an evidence of prosperity, states in his letter that he "owns his own horse and buggy," and knows he is "the one man for her." He pleads for an answer, and wants to accompany her on a joy ride for life.

Another tells a fanciful tale of a vivid dream, and refers to the young woman as his "dream girl." He states in romantic words that he would be the "happiest man in the world" if the young woman would answer his letter, and asserts that he "is all up in the air about it."

Miss Ruth Littlefield, eighteen years old, of No. 1305 St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis, who is a stenographer for the Builders' Exchange on the East Side, was the first to receive one of the love messages. It was written by a youth at Canton, Mo.

WHAT A QUESTION TO ASK!

She was asked by City Attorney Fekete, in questioning her for jury duty, if she was twenty-one years old.

"Indeed, I am not," she answered as she ruffled up and sent a withering glance toward the young lawyer. "I am not twenty yet, I am only eighteen."

When she opened her mail subsequently her curiosity was aroused by a letter addressed in a man's handwriting that she did not recognize.

This is what the missive said:

"My Dear Friend—I suppose you will be somewhat surprised to receive this letter, but after I explain my motives for taking the liberty of writing I hope you will not feel offended. Several weeks ago I had a very vivid dream in which a railroad accident occurred, and among the passengers was a young lady who called to me for assistance.

"I will not bother you with more of the dream, but since having the dream, the face of the girl has reappeared several times in other dreams and has been so impressed on my mind that she seems to be a real person instead of a dream fancy.

"Maybe you can imagine my surprised feelings when today I saw that same identical face in a photograph bearing your sweet name. I could not resist the impulse to write and tell you of the strange coincidence. I hope you will not feel offended, and if it interests you, I would be the happiest man in the world to hear from you. I must confess that I am all up in the air about it.

HOPES FOR A REPLY.

"I cannot understand it at all, unless it is one of those queer whims of fate to cause you and I to become acquainted. Hoping you will not be angry at me for writing, I will close, hoping to receive a letter from the living counterpart of my dream girl."

Miss Emma Mitchell, of No. 739 North Thirteenth street, East St. Louis, a stenographer for Attorney A. A. Hunt, who was forewoman of the jury during its deliberations, received her first love note from a "modest young man" of Red Bud, Ill. At least he so described himself.

He addressed her as "My dear Miss Mitchell of the woman's jury," and plunged at once into a word picture of his ideas of a perfect woman, and assured her that her picture is the "image of an ideal girl." After telling her that he had seen her photograph he states that at last his dreams have been realized in his chase for his ideal.

He is a home-loving man, he writes, and knows he would make her a good husband. He tells Miss Mitchell that he will come to East St. Louis to see her as soon as it is convenient, and closes the sentence with "Your loving friend."

A message received by Miss Ruth Brown, eighteen, of No. 3804 Waverly place, a stenographer for the Industrial league, was from a love sick youth of Bonne Terre, Mo. Her hands trembled slightly as she opened it, for she had read some of those received by the other jurors and was a little excited to see what her note contained.

"Kind friend," it read, "I saw your picture and I thought I would drop you a few lines to get acquainted with each other, as I would like to get acquainted with a nice girl like your photo in the paper. I hope you will accept the letter and answer it, for I think I am the one man for you. Although I have not seen you personally, I would like to.

HANDMADE BLOUSES OF PINK TULLE

"CHAIR"-colored tulle is flesh-colored tulle, and it in combination with dark blue is the latest cry in the French blouse story. The afternoon blouse or the theater blouse is worn with the blue or putty-colored serge suit. In the models here sketched it has supplanted all other types. Tulle, you will remember, as the term is used in Paris, is blonde or any fine weave of net. It is washable, comes in double width and many prices, and admits of hand work, which is the touch that must be apparent.

First of all, the blouse should have a fitted white underbodice, to which tucks, collar and all seams are attached. This produces a perfect fit and obviates all loose, careless lines that an unlined blouse of net always has.

The lady with the opera glasses is at the theater, where her "chair"-colored blouse is most appropriate. There are dropped armholes bound with pale pink taffeta. Fullness in the long sleeves is shown at the armhole and at the cuffs, which end in gathered ruffles. The fastening of the blouse is a slanting line, held not by buttons, but by flat bows of royal-blue velvet that hook over into loops of silk. A collar ends in points at the V-shaped line, a deep tulle frill edging it. Bands and bows of blue velvet trim the sleeves.

Below is a hand-tucked blouse, the tucks extending over the shoulders, the front ones forming a straight vest on each side of a two-inch pleat. Down this is a row of blue velvet bows from the end of the V neck to the belt of taffeta. Tucked cuffs are edged with ruffles of mechlin lace. A modified medici collar is wired and heads the top of the blouse.

In the center is a fichu bodice of pink tulle. The fullness of the outer net is held by hand stitches along the shoulder line and draped into a girdle that ends in a butterfly bow of royal-blue silk. Down each side is a straight band of silk. A ruffle of net edges the low neck line. The kimono sleeves are slanted into the arms, and at their three-quarter length are edged with a ruffle that extends up the outer line for three inches.

Below is a blouse that depends on a quaint double frill for its beauty. It is cut in kimono style, the sleeves being elbow length. At the edge of each sleeve, and outlining the collar and fronts, are double frills of net. Through the center of these runs a shirred band that holds black velvet.

By all means, have a tulle blouse for afternoon and evening, and chose a pale pink instead of white or ecru. It is delicate shell pink or flesh color and admits of any shade in trimming. In Paris the combination is pink and blue; but every woman is her own dictator in matters of becoming colors.

Make your blouse by hand. Have no raw seams, and add the wonderful little touches of hand work or finishing for which the French blouses are famous and that cost, oh! so much in the shops. If you yearn for the very latest in separate bodices, here it is for the bearing of your morning room, your pocketbook and of your fashionable appearance.

Fall Suit Features

IT'S TIME to think of the fall suit, for it will be here before we know it, and great decisions must be made regarding material, lines and decoration. There have been made decided changes in suits that will radically stamp a suit as of the new season.

Coats will be longer, especially at the back. The cutaway line with a three-quarter length is the model that has been accorded high favor.

In front there is great opportunity for decoration, and the most noticeable feature is the waistcoat. This is separate or incorporated in the suit, but it gives a note of color to a jacket and allows of so many novel touches that it virtually makes the coat. The waistcoats are of satin, all corded silks, suede cloth, chamois, moire and washable pique. Bindings of braid and trimmings of buttons are the decorative features, and a smoothness of fit is essential or else the entire effect is lost.

The waistcoats of these fall suits have square, pointed and crossed tops, with inset crossed revers of lace and satin and moire collars. Pockets are also used for the comfort of all wearers.

On the fall suits there will be used sleeves of the long, fitted type and the kimono sleeve with the dropped armhole. The eton effect, especially at the front, is particularly striking. From the front a sweeping line over the hips and a long tail at the back finish the coat.

A Russian model of velvet will bid for applause. The peplum of the skirt has considerable fullness, and rich fur trims the collar line and the cuffs. Braid and buttons give a dashing effect to the line of fastening.

In the skirts of the fall suits there will be many innovations. The long line, from waist to hem is rarely left unbroken. Seams are modified by tabs, extensions and flaps. Side seams are slashed. There is drapery at all points, the folds around the top of the skirt being the newest, and giving the peg-top effect, which is a sign of the times.

Fullness at the back of the skirt is held down flat under a short strap belt by a group of tucks.

Buttons, buttons everywhere is the cry when one looks at the suits for fall. They are useful and ornamental. The slashes on the skirt have frequently regular buttonholes and buttons which work. This keeps the length of the slash—and some of them come quite high—under the control of the wearer.

A military trimming of braid and buttons in horizontal lines on a coat is sure to appeal to the woman who prefers a jaunty style. A straight military collar is used with this type of coat.

The contrasting coat—long, remember—with checked or striped skirt, suggests a use of short lengths.

The Coming Hats

IN THE majority of fall models, women will look older. This is because the bonnet, mushroom and bell shapes have given way to the hat with an upturned brim, and to be strictly in style the brim must turn at the back.

If you are young and fair to look on, by all means wear a chinband on your new fall hat. This can be of velvet ribbon, taffeta or moire or of tulle and maline. It can have a fastening by means of a hook and eye or the streamers can be tied at one side, coquettishly under one ear or just in front. The chinband will be noticeable on hats for afternoon and evening.

One "cap" is of velvet, with a puffed crown and a visor which comes down in front. At one side is a panache mounting to great height and giving a dashing effect that would look well with a military suit.

On a black velvet hat for evening there is used chantilly lace for the brim and for the wired bow at the back that holds the turned-up brim.

The sugar-scoop hat of black velvet will be a typical fall style. It has no clearly defined crown and the greatest height is at the back. The tilt is down toward the nose, and a bandeau is frequently the means to the end.

THE RETURN OF THE FICHU

Of Bohemian Lace

Tucked Net Effectively Used

The Draped Fichu

THE fichu has returned with added popularity, which fact will be welcomed by dainty femininity the world over. This accessory has always been numbered among the artistic trimmings, and the woman who admires a picturesque gown should always choose this type of adornment. Parisian designers have extensively employed the fichu as a garniture on the lingerie frocks this season, and it appears in many phases.

Almost every sheer material has been successfully utilized in fashion the fichu, and it is made in all widths and lengths, from the broad Marie Antoinette fichu to the narrow strip of folded maline outlining the neck line of the bodice.

The more expensive fichus are of rare laces or embroideries, while simple designs of white net bordered with a narrow pleated frill of the same material are surprisingly inexpensive. Dainty in the extreme sense of the word is the fichu of Bohemian lace with inset medallions of embroidered net. The edges are bound with a bias fold of black mousseline de sole, and buttons covered with the same material adorn the front. A fichu of this type will make even the plainest frock elaborate.

If you admire grace and softness of line, choose the fichu of folded maline lace. It is draped artistically over the shoulders, one end passing beneath the bodice front and the other forming a pointed end. White maline is folded and arranged to fill in the place at the V-shaped neck line. This fichu is particularly becoming, and appears to the greatest advantage when used to trim a gown of soft silk.

The fichu of tucked net is charming and can be easily duplicated. Plain white net is finely tucked for the foundation, and this is bordered with bands of mallnes lace. To the edge of this is joined a scant frill of the lace. When worn, the ends of the fichu are crossed over in front, and you find it a model especially appropriate for the tub frock of linen, voile or crepe.

Other fichus are fashioned of chiffon, mousseline de sole, sheer linen or batiste. Solid or eyelet embroidery is extensively employed as a decoration, and the edges are buttonhole-stitched or bordered with lace. Filet, clunv, Irish crochet, valenciennes and Arabian are the varieties favored for this purpose. Your wardrobe is sadly lacking if it does not contain a fichu.

The Sash Question

THERE must be a sash in your wardrobe. It can be incorporated in a gown or separate, but it must be there.

The toreador sash of striped or bright silk is wound around the waist and tied over one hip in a knot, with short ends hanging at one side.

The sash that is quite broad, encircling the waist and tying in front, is the mauteh sash, worn by the dancing girl of India. It must be worn by the slender girl of America.

In the prelate sash the lines are straight and flat, one end passing up and over the other, both hanging in flat stock fashion.

The Japanese sash, with a butterfly bow high up at the back, will be a noticeable feature on afternoon and evening gowns.

Black Tulle

WHEN in doubt use black tulle or black net. Place it on your blouse, your lace dress, your hat or your neckwear. It gives a touch of the black that has long been recognized by the Parisienne as one of the most important notes in a costume.

So use it with discretion and watch the charm that results from a touch of this fabric of the moment.

French Fashion Notes

PARIS, Aug. 7.

THIS last week was noted for the many private exhibitions given by the leading couturieres, at which their patrons enjoyed the privilege of viewing the fall and winter modes under ideal conditions. The lovely manikins moved gracefully about the perfectly appointed salons, and all who were fortunate enough to have this glimpse of fall models readily admitted that the fashion artists have used fabrics and color to obtain as wonderful results as their brothers of the paints and brushes.

Colors are more subdued than they have been during the summer and seem to borrow the antique tones of the tapestries woven years ago. Blues, reds, greens, violets and yellows are not the glaring colors of the futurists, but are softened into less trying hues.

Tailored costumes are fashioned of velvet, moire, velour, in plain and cut-stripe patterns; sponge cloth, pebble cheviot, plaid materials, worsted poplin and ratine.

Drecoll shows a stunning model of chamois cloth in a deep tone of ochre. The skirt is draped tightly about the figure and has a tunic overskirt which extends slightly beyond the foundation. The coat is directoire in line, with a crossed-over vest effect, and has bands of skunk fur finishing the long kimono sleeves and bordering the collar. Tortoise-shell buttons are used to fasten the coat.

Paquin has designed a number of suits with Russian coats, and a handsome model of black silk velvet is worthy of description. Hortensia-blue chamois cloth is used for the collar and crossed-over vest, and an embroidered belt done in tones of silver-blue and black girdles the waist line. Below this the skirt of the coat falls rather full. In the skirt the velvet is draped tightly about the feet and forms soft folds across the front.

An unusually beautiful costume displayed by Callot Soeurs is developed of lapis-lazuli blue pebble cloth. The coat is oddly cut, with extremely large armholes and close-fitting sleeves. Where the seams are joined a fold of the material extends beyond the stitching to resemble a tuck. The skirt is cut in three sections, which are joined in the same manner, and the point emphasized in this suit is broken lines.

Bottle-green velvet is the material employed by Poiret, to create a lovely costume. The coat closely resembles a Russian cossack coat, and is trimmed with dark brown fur and black braid. The sleeves are kimono, with extremely large armholes. The skirt is draped to produce the pegtop silhouette, and a girdle of black satin is drawn about the waist.

The semi-formal gown is made of satin, chiffon, crepe de chine, tulle, messaline, chiffon, silk crepe, crepe meteor and moire. The colors favored for this type of gown are Copenhagen and French blue, bisque, beige, Paquin green, reddish purple, bright green, yellow, copper, terra cotta and taupe.

From brocaded satin in tones of green and blue is fashioned a Worth gown of unusual beauty. The upper portion of the bodice is of white maline lace veiled with a single thickness of black chiffon. A girdle of jet defines the waist line and the skirt is draped and opens in the front to reveal the feet and ankles.

From terra-cotta foulard in one of the effective Jacquard patterns is developed a gown of unusual beauty. The blouse is fashioned to resemble a bolero jacket buttoning over a chemisette of white crepe de chine in vest fashion. An inch-wide pleating of the silk finishes the bottom of the jacket, which falls loosely over a broad girdle of the folded silk, clasped in front with a dull green metal ornament. Sub-sleeves of the crepe de chine extend below the three-quarter length sleeves of the terra-cotta foulard.

The underskirt is accordion pleated, and over this is arranged a short tunic drapery. Designed to wear with this gown is a Niniche hat of terra-cotta velvet banked with roses of a lighter tone and loops of dull green ribbon velvet.

Topcoats are characterized by beauty of form, material and coloring, the oriental type predominating. They are cut with kimono sleeves, and have their greatest width at the hips, being drawn in graceful folds about the knees or ankles. Brocaded silks, velvets, silk poplins, fur and moire are used for the majority of models.

One of the smartest wraps of the mantelet-variety, suitable for wearing with the costume of white lace, is made of changeable moire silk in a flower design showing soft tones of rose and gray. Heavy gold lace is used for the "thick-neck" collar and turned-back cuffs.

A full-length wrap of brocaded velvet, showing a large design in black and white against a blue background, is swathed about the figure in such a complicated manner it is difficult to discover the seams. A rounded yoke outlined with a heavy covered cord is a feature introduced on many of the fall coats.

Separate blouses are made in surplice or fichu style, and are trimmed with frills, ruches or fluffings, and the models on the Place Vendome display a widely varied assortment. Crepe de chine in robin's-egg blue, rose, mauve and cotton yellow is a favorite material for blouses. Net, printed silks in modern art designs, silk sprig, ribbed velvet, silk duvet (resembling suede) and chiffon blouses will all demand attention.

Vests of brocaded silk, velvet or satin are worn extensively by Parisiennes, and will continue popular during the coming season.

Coats, as a rule, are much longer, and are broken at the waist line by a girdle or the arrangement of the vest. Broken lines seem to be the keynote of the fall modes, and skirts are cut or draped in such a manner that the long line from waist to hem is conspicuously absent.

Since it is considered smart to display the feet, the skirts of street costumes are short and narrow, with an uplifted drapery in front.

Gowns of supple materials have draperies which closely follow the outlines of the natural figure, and even the flounced skirts (and there are many of these) are mounted on closely fitted foundations, preserving the slender silhouette.

On costumes for formal occasions the trains are extremely slender, and some resemble scarfs, which are swathed about the figure and fastened at the belt.

Verily the changes are many in the world of fashion.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

IN THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME.

TWO letters on the same topic lie upon my desk. Hear what the first says:

"I should like to know what you really think about summer. I know it is customary to talk of it as if it were a period of delight and peace, but I don't believe there is any housekeeper who has a summer place who really feels this.

"Take my own case. We are not rich, but my husband and I have always felt the necessity of giving our children all the country air we could during their vacations, and we had so much difficulty in securing satisfactory boarding places in the summer that two years ago we bought a plot of ground, put up a sort of shack on it (I suppose you might call it a bungalow), and thought our troubles ended. They had just begun.

"People talk of summer rest, but I never worked so hard as I do when I am off on my so-called vacation. In the first place, I have trouble with service. There is room for only one maid in our limited quarters, and she usually finds the country lonesome and wants to go back to town at the end of a week. It is next to impossible to get help among the natives, and many other things are about as hard to come at.

"Fresh vegetables, for instance. We are not out here long enough to keep a garden, a cow, or chickens, and we are dependent for dairy supplies, eggs, poultry, and vegetables, as well as for ice, upon the resources of the neighborhood. My housekeeping in New York is play compared to what I do here, and by the time my summer 'rest' is ended I feel ready for a sanitarium.

"The children love it, of course, and my husband finds it delightful. He goes away early in the morning and comes back late in the afternoon, and is off at the ball games of the vicinity on the Saturday half holiday, and on Sunday I do my best to make him comfortable. So he can't understand why I don't form glowing plans for what we will do next summer and is a little sore that I don't enthuse about the place. To me the best part of the outing will be the day that takes me back to city comforts, and yet when I say this every one looks at me as though I were uttering the most fearful heresy.

"How do you feel about it? Don't you think the summer a terribly overrated season? And if you ever used slang would you or wouldn't you echo my sentiment, 'No good old summer time in mine'?"

Bad Manners of Guests.

The second epistle touches upon another phase of the same subject:

"Is there any way to teach our friends what one might call manners for the country place? Why will people who apparently know how to behave during the winter neglect all courtesy about summer engagements? Year after year I receive notifications from friends that they are coming to see me, and this when they have had no regular invitation. Sometimes they don't even send word that they are coming up, but drive up to my house at meal times or late in the evening as they might to a hotel.

"Those I have invited are little better, for they delay accepting or telling me when to look for them, as though they were the only guests I had to plan for, and I was not waiting to hear from them before fixing the dates for other visitors.

"Summer is a hard enough time to manage for anyhow, with the frightful extra expenses of every kind, and I do think our friends might spare us all they can. Won't you put a word about this in our Corner for the sake of other housekeepers who are struggling with the burden of the summer country vacation?"

"The burden of the summer country vacation." I don't suppose my correspondent was striving for satire, but she certainly achieved it.

I have printed these two letters because I have a shrewd surmise that they describe pretty accurately the state of mind of many women who do not put their trials into words, either because they do not wish to make others uncomfortable, or because they are bound up in what might be called the conspiracy of silence about "the good old summer time." Every one is supposed to find it the most delightful season of the year. Poets have sung of the joys of midsummer days and midsummer nights; romancers have dilated upon the beauty and bliss of the period [I don't believe any of them were housekeepers with slender incomes], and we have all come to the point where, as the writer of the first letter says, anything in the way of criticism is considered in the nature of a heresy.

Winter Preferred by Many.

For my own part, I say frankly, and I have said for years, that I do not care for the summer and that I love the winter. This does not mean that I do not enjoy verdure and flowers, long drives and walks, sunsets and fresh vegetables, country air and ripe fruits, any more than it implies that I like bleak, cutting winds, snow and slush, fogs and influenzas. But I find that the pleasures and comforts of the winter more than offset its drawbacks, just as the annoyances of the summer outweigh its advantages. That is, they do in my case. More than that, I believe there are a good many others who feel as I do, but who shrink from declaring themselves openly.

So far as young people are concerned, there is every reason why they should love the summer. In the first place, it means a release from school or college and a freedom from responsibility for the school boy or girl and the entrance upon a time of relaxation and amusement. It stands for vacation and outdoor sports—boating, fishing, swimming, riding, tramping, camping, excursions and picnics of various sorts in the midst of growth and greenery. All holiday fun and frolic are before them when summer reigns over the land. To those who live in cities it opens the door to wider liberty and gives them the key to the fields. Decidedly, summer was meant for the young.

To the housekeeper hot weather brings something altogether different. Long ago I reached the point where I appreciated the heavy additional expense of housekeeping in summer. Fresh vegetables call for more butter, fruit demands cream 'n abundance and implies ice creams and ices and other desserts which, while undoubtedly good, are likewise costly. The housekeeping allowance which may with care be made to cover the outlay in winter has a sore tug to meet in summer, and this, too, when there is no coal bill.

I know several housekeepers who never make a pretense of leaving the city in summer. I was talking with one of them the other day as we sat on the veranda of the country house where she and I were fellow guests for a week end.

"One of the best things about spending the summer in town is the added enjoyment you find when you do get to the country," she said. "I am quite sure this sunset and these mountains and valleys cannot mean as much to you who are here all the time as they do to me who see them only occasionally."

"John and the Children love it," she would say, and put her veto on any project of rest for herself.

"I can't understand why you don't see more of them," commented a listener. "It is beyond me how you can endure the stuffy city all summer. What induces you to stay there when you might get away?"

"It's not stuffy," returned the indignant visitor. "I have my big, roomy apartment, with free ventilation and good air. I have my own bathroom and all the hot and cold water I want, my own good bed, and my own table. My vegetables are sent to me fresh from a farm two or three times a week. I can get all the cream and eggs I want, and unlimited ice. Didn't I hear you bemoaning a little while ago that the ice man had not come, and that the cream was sour, and you couldn't get any more? And who was it that said that unless the pump was started pretty soon there would be no water for washing tomorrow morning? You have your drawbacks as well as your advantages, and I have my advantages as well as my drawbacks, but you work a good deal harder keeping house in the country than I do in the city."

Whether one agrees with all her points or not, my friend undoubtedly spoke a strongly felt truth when she claimed that the country housekeeper works harder during her alleged vacation than when she is in town. She rises earlier to get her commuting contingent off to town. Breakfast is more or less of a scramble, and the strain on her nerves tells, even if she do not worry as to what the drought will do to her young vegetables. If she depends upon a huckster for green food and for fruits she is not likely to procure as fresh as she could find at a first class place in town. Should she have no cow and no ice house her problems increase in geometrical ratio, and when she is dependent upon a pump or a windmill for her water supply a whole new field of possible discomfort and inconvenience opens to her.

Long ago I came to the conclusion that the country is really satisfactory to only two kinds of housekeepers. The woman of unlimited means, who runs a big establishment with plenty of servants, and to whom increased bills make no difference, ought to be able to enjoy her summer without the burdens which hamper the woman of small purse. Also the woman who lives on a farm all the year around, who with the aid of the others of the family does her own work and is independent of employés, who relies habitually on the products of the garden and dairy and poultry yard, probably finds summer an easier time than the winter.

But the housekeeper who must watch expenses closely, to whom the addition of a few dollars to her weekly bills means worry and distress, has a hard time to get alone in the summer. She has to plan closely to keep within her allowance, and besides this she must meet the countless small exigencies, such as those to which I have already referred, of marketing difficulties, of shortage of supplies, of failure on the part of her purveyors of provisions, of unsatisfactory domestic service, of insufficient water, of inconsiderate visitors. I have passed over unnoticed the plague of flies, the pest of mosquitoes, the struggle to keep both out of a house that is open as much as it is in mid, and the fact that if any guest or member of the household is kept awake by heat or noise or mosquitoes or anything else and comes down to breakfast unrefreshed the housekeeper, for some mysterious reason, always feels herself directly responsible for the discomfort.

Burden on the Housekeeper.

Yet, after all, the summer comes and the family goes to the country, and the housekeeper who has been in harness all winter, who has worked herself weary cleaning house and making ready for the flitting from town, must set her country house in order and take up the heavier burden of summer home making. If she had the chance to give it up she would probably decline. "John and the children love it and it does them so much good!" she would say, and put her veto on any project of rest for herself that would rob them of their special share in the "good old summer time."

What is to be done about it? Only two suggestions present themselves to me—one for the housekeeper and one for the others—the family and the visitors. First, for the housekeeper: If you are she, try to cultivate philosophy and not to take life too hard. After all, worry doubles the trouble, and if you can make a joke of contretemps the sting goes from them. Bring your religion to your help, and see in your annoyance a chance for development in patience, and recollect that no effort you can put forth for your family will mean half so much to them as your cheer and good temper. Even if you boil inside, try to maintain a calm appearance, and by and by the boiling will settle to a simmer, and this in time ceases to bubble and seethe and trouble and be at rest.

To those who are the family have our share in making matters light, in refraining from complaints, in trying to save steps and stumbles, in leaving unsaid the words that irritate or wound. If we are possible guests, it lies with us to spare the hostess the inconvenience of delayed replies to invitations, to come at the time we are asked and to go before she is tired of us, not to arrive unannounced, to show in every possible way that the visit is giving us genuine pleasure, and that when we conclude it we leave debtors to the hospitality which has made our pleasure possible.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"NOW that the canning season is here let me remind the housewives what a delicious dressing can be easily made and put away for a quickly prepared dessert for any season of the year. There is usually a great deal of juice with little fruit left at the end of canning pineapple, peaches, etc. To this add enough sugar to make a sirup and put in pint cans. When unexpected friends come in it is easy to order a little bulk ice cream, and nothing looks daintier *or tastes more delicious than this pre*served fruit juice poured over the white ice cream served in pretty glass sherbet cups.

I. G."

An excellent suggestion. The extra juice left over from canning, boiled to a sirup with the addition of more sugar, is good not only for ice cream but for other desserts. A plain cornstarch or gelatin blanc mange made the day before it is to be needed and placed on the ice to become thoroughly chilled is converted into a much more elaborate dish by such a fruit sauce, and this may also be used with white custards. Moreover, it is a delicious hot pudding sauce for cottage puddings, bread puddings, and the like—far better than the ordinary hard butter and sugar sauce and a decided saving in the days when butter is dear. Such sirup is also excellent to beat up with the hard sauce as flavoring and gives character and elegance to a plain pudding.

Holds a Rug in Place.

"Here is a hint which may be of service to some one. To hold a rug firmly in place in the middle of the room and yet allow it to be taken up easily and cleaned, drive brass headed tacks into the floor at each corner and midway between; then sew brass rings on the rug to hook over these when the rug is laid. I would also like to tell what I think the best way to cook eggplant. Use no flour, no bread or cracked crumbs, but cut the eggplant a third of an inch thick, rub both sides with salt, then stand the slices on edge in a deep dish to drain, for ten or fifteen minutes. It makes it tough to press it. Leave the skins on, as it turns better. Have plenty of good pure lard hot, pepper the eggplant, and fry it brown and crisp and you will find it nice for breakfast.

Thank you for both of these suggestions. Years ago I recollect reading in a story of Mrs. Whitney's of how a clever little housekeeper had sewed rings on her rug and fastened them over nails driven in the floor. I am glad to hear from some one who has tried the plan for herself. My fear had been lest the rug could not be stretched smoothly enough by this means and that there would be danger of stumbling or catching the toe on the edge of the rug between the places where it was fastened, but if you have experimented with the plan yourself you have probably proved that my doubt of its success was unfounded.

Fruit Salad Dressing.

"I have seen many requests for a fruit salad dressing, but none of the recipes given have been at all like this I send, or if they have been I have missed them: Juice of one orange and half a lemon, quarter cup of sugar and the yolks of two eggs, beaten. Mix orange and lemon juice with sugar and then with the beaten eggs, and cook, stirring constantly until it thickens. When cold, add one cup whipped cream. Jonathan apples and walnuts, fresh pineapples and sweet cherries, white grapes, seeded and skinned, with orange sections, are all good combinations. I have used all lemon juice in the dressing when oranges were not at hand and it was equally good. Mix any of the combinations named or others with the dressing and place on ice for an hour or so before using. It is not wise to use more than two ingredients for any salad, as the flavor of the dressing is all in the fruit.

"A FRIEND."

The fruit salads I have eaten have either been served with mayonnaise in which lemon juice took the place of vinegar or with a boiled dressing made by a different recipe from that which you give. I am glad to have yours and to pass it on to others.

Where to Sell Sofa Pillow.

"Will you kindly advise me of any place where I can sell a hand embroidered sofa pillow? It is white satin, embroidered with pink roses and could be used as a pillow cover or as a panel in an evening gown.

"MARIE."

A woman's exchange is generally a good place to dispose of such work, or you might place it on sale in some small shop which takes work of the sort on a commission basis. Probably better than either of these methods is to dispose of it by private sale. Tell your friends of it and see if they cannot suggest to some one who would like to purchase it. Some of the prettiest pieces of the kind I have ever owned I have secured in this way. *In these days when em*broidery on gowns is all the rage such articles should be in demand.

Novel Use for Thimble.

"Here is a hint which may prove as useful to you as it has to me. If you will place a thimble over the end of the rod when running it through sash curtains you will find that it will not tear them and the rod will slip through with surprising ease. I also wish to say to Mrs. T. S. that if she will use this bran bread recipe she will find the results highly satisfactory.

"Two cups bran, one cup white flour, half cup molasses, one cup sour milk, half teaspoon soda in milk, half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon baking powder, twelve prunes, washed and cut from the stone. Add half cup raisins, if liked. Bake slowly about an hour.

NEW CONTRIBUTOR."

Another curtain hint which sounds as practical as the other. Many a time I have groaned as the rough point of a brass rod caught in the material of the sash curtain when I was making it ready to put up. The thimble will solve the difficulty in future for me as well as for other housekeepers. Thank you for the bran bread recipe.

Children's Dress Trimmings.

"I would be grateful if some of the Cornerites who have trimmings or anything that could be utilized for young children's dresses would communicate with me. I have three girls and a boy, the eldest 9 years old, and as I do my own sewing I can always find a place for every little piece of goods or trimming and make over dresses of our older people's clothes to look like new. I am sure there are many who have such odds and ends that their children have outgrown or that they have no further use for. In return for such articles I would be glad to do something in the way of embroidery. I send recipes you may care to use. They are some I try nearly every week and I always find them a success.

MRS. R. C. L."

In view of the demand for embroidery, to which I have just referred, I should think you would have many offers of such articles as you wish for your children's clothing and would have your hands full negotiating an exchange of work. I will gladly give your address to any applicants writing for it and inclosing stamps for reply. The recipes you kindly give shall be printed elsewhere.

Easter Sunday in '71.

"I am glad to be able to tell you that Easter Sunday in 1871 fell on April 9. This I learned from a prayer book fifty years old. In return do you think someone can tell me the author of 'The Silkworm's Will,' a fable with a nice moral? I can't find it in print these late years, but it is more worthy than many things I see. The following is an extract:

On a plain rush hurdle a silkworm lay,
When a proud young princess passed that way.
The haughty child of a human king
Threw a sidelong glance at the humble thing

That took with a silent gratitude
From the mulberry tree its simple food;
And she shrank with a scorn and deep disgust
Away from her sister child of the dust.

"MRS. A. M."

Can some of our readers supply the name of the author of this selection? Mrs. A. M. did not give her name or address, but I will be happy to print in our corner any answer that may come to her inquiry.

Recipe for Sour Rabbit.

"I notice in the Corner a request for a recipe for sour rabbit or sour meat. I make these quite often by the following recipe:

"Stew two rabbits until half done, then pour off the liquor and add vinegar and half water, enough to half cover the meat, a teaspoon of whole allspice and one of whole black peppers, a few bay leaves, and a couple of sliced onions. Cook until the meat is tender, add salt to taste. Put away in a stone jar. This keeps finely in the winter.

"I pickle tongue, fish, duck, squirrel, and almost any kind of meat in the same way. I do not add mixed spices, as they turn the meat dark.

"I also wish to tell of a good way to use leftover meat. Grind it in the meat chopper, make a baking powder biscuit dough, and roll out half an inch thick, spread with butter and then with meat, roll up as you would a jelly roll, bake, but not too fast or too brown. Warm the left over gravy and pour over the roll before you serve or use a milk gravy.

Both of these recipes are good, but the second especially commends itself to me because of my interest in making wise use of leftovers. Let me suggest that when you make your meat roll you cover it closely during the early stages of its cookery and that when half done you rub a little butter over the outside. This will prevent the surface browning too quickly and will soften it a little. Season the meat well before you spread it on the dough. A tomato sauce ought to be good with this if you have no meat gravy to serve with it.

Wants Carriage for Triplets.

"Will some kind persons help a poor mother with triplets to secure a baby carriage and an ice box?

MRS. R. S."

One seldom sees a baby carriage built for triplets, and I am afraid that even in our constituency such a conveyance may not be readily found. But who will dare say that even a carriage which will hold two or one would be welcome to this mother of three. I hope her plea for something of the sort as well as for an ice box in which to keep sweet the food for the babies, may be forthcoming at an early day. The care of three little ones in hot weather is taxing enough at the best and those of us for whom life is easier should be eager to do all in our power to lighten the cares of this mother.

Bread from Chestnut Flour.

"Will you kindly tell me how I can obtain the knowledge of how to make chestnut bread instead of bread made from wheat flour?

M. H."

I have never eaten anything of the sort in this country. Your best plan is to consult an Italian grocer and see if you cannot get the chestnut flour from him. With it may come directions for making the bread. I have eaten something of the sort in Italy—thick, dark, and sweetish—but even then it was not a staff of life, but a kind of cake eaten as a treat. "Patona" they used to call it in Florence, but this word is not in my Italian dictionary, and it may have been local slang. Possibly some of the Cornerites may be able to help you out, and, if so, I will gladly make room for the recipe.

Recipe for Glazed Cherries.

"I would be much obliged if you or some of the Cornerites would reprint the recipe for Maraschino cherries and for bar le duc given a little while ago. I would also like a crystallized or glazed cherry recipe. On account of illness I have lost the recipes carefully saved by me last year in anticipation of using some of our fruit in that way this year.

MRS. M. W. H."

The recipes for which you ask for Maraschino cherries and bar le duc have appeared on this page since the date of your letter and I hope you have seen them and kept them. It would be too late for them to be of any use to you this year if I should repeat them now, and I have not the space from demands for other recipes which are needed at once if they are to be used this season. I will give bar le duc for candied cherries, however, and I hope this may be put in so safe a place, either in a scrapbook or in a card collection, that it may stay with you even through the exigencies which arise between now and the time when cherries come again.

GLAZED CHERRIES.—Put a pound of granulated sugar and a half cup of water together in a clean enamel or porcelain lined saucepan and boil to a sirup; do not stir while it is cooking. Try the sirup from time to time by dropping a little in cold water and when it is brittle take the saucepan from the fire and set in a pan of boiling water. Have ready firm, sweet cherries from which the stems have not been removed; dip each cherry quickly into the hot sirup and lay on a waxed paper to dry. Should the sirup thicken before you have finished, add boiling water to that in the outer vessel or set the saucepan in another vessel just filled from the boiling kettle. After the cherries are all dipped set them in a dry place until the coating on them is firm.

Supplies Tested Receipes.

"I send recipes which have been tested and I know they are fine. I don't want to crowd you, but these are so good I would like others to have them. MRS. M. L. W."

The recipes are welcome, as they always are when tested and proved and given with the clearness which marks yours. They will appear elsewhere.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

TEN MINUTES WITH a CHAIR

EVERY day I see numbers of unhealthy, weak-looking women on the streets and in the cars, and I cannot help wondering why it is that they allow themselves to become round-shouldered, hollow-chested and crooked of back when it is in every woman's power to keep herself in good physical condition if she will give ten minutes every day to the proper exercises.

Not long ago I ventured to ask a little woman who had allowed herself to become run down and round-shouldered from neglect, why she did not brace up and do something to improve her appearance. The answer I received amused, while it also disgusted me. Said she:

"Why, I can't afford dumbbells or Indian clubs and these expensive exercisers that are attached to the wall, and unless you have the right kind of appliances there is no use to try to be good looking and straight."

"My dear woman," I replied, "you don't have to have anything of the sort to keep yourself in good condition. All you have to do is to practice faithfully every day certain simple exercises that will develop the most important muscles in your body, and remember to stand and walk in an erect position."

No woman need go outside her home for "the proper implements for exercises." They are at hand in every home; simple articles in use every day in every household.

Take an ordinary dining-room chair, for example, a light-weight wooden chair, and you have the means of going through a course of exercises that will bring straight limbs, strength and health to any one who will give as little as ten minutes a day to them.

In the first place, it is important to stand erect, with the chest high, the abdomen held in and the hips in a straight line with your shoulders. Grasp the chairback and, holding it with both hands at arm's length straight out in front of you, swing it around from left to right, right to left, keeping the feet firmly on the floor. Then take one step forward with the right foot as you swing the chair, then with the left foot, until you have made five sweeping circles with the chair.

Unless you are very strong, you will not be able to do this the first or second time you try it. It will very likely take several days' exercise to accomplish this feat, but once getting it, you will very soon be aware of the great benefit the exercise is doing you in the way of strengthening the muscles of your back and arms.

For the arms, shoulders and wrists, stand erect and lift the chair from the floor until it is straight out in front of you. Lower it to the floor and lift it again. Repeat five times. That, too, will not be easy at first, but you can do it if you try persistently.

Another exercise that gives poise to the entire body is to lift the chair shoulder high at arm's length straight out from the side of the body. Repeat five times with each arm. At once you will feel the muscles of your back and neck, as well as those of your arms, wrists and hands, being brought into play and strengthened.

A very excellent general exercise, that which brings into action all the muscles of the body, especially those of the shoulders, back and hips, is to lie flat on an ordinary kitchen table and, with your arms above your head, grasp the back of the chair firmly with both hands, then slowly lift it above your head, over the body until it rests on the knees. At the same time raise the feet until the legs are in a straight line with the body.

This, too, is a rather difficult exercise, but when once accomplished will give strength to every muscle in the body. If all the muscles are strong and well-developed, the body will naturally be erect and in perfect harmony with the lines of beauty and grace.

You may vary the exercises each day by giving the time to one or two of them, then the next day practicing the others. There you have the ways and means of developing all the muscles of your body with no expense and by giving only a few minutes a day to this most important self-improvement.

PUNCTUALITY

SOME one has called punctuality "the politeness of princes." It also belongs to all who would pride themselves on an adherence to rules that have the consideration of others for their basis. That is the important thing, my dear readers—there must be a guiding star of unselfishness if your conduct is to be of the highest type.

How often have I seen an entire room full of guests kept waiting for a delinquent one who has a habit of arriving late. The habit of being behind an appointed time is unpardonable. If you are addicted to this expression of thoughtlessness and carelessness, it is time you begin to reform.

At a formal dinner party at which a certain hour has been mentioned, the guests should arrange to arrive ten or fifteen minutes beforehand, to remove wraps, be introduced to others and to have a short talk with the host and hostess. The dinner should be announced on the minute and guests who are late should join the party at the table after being greeted by the hostess and attending an excuse that, of course, must be a very strong one. Usually, lateness at any formal affair of this kind is inexcusable.

If an invitation be extended to you by a gentleman to take you to a dance or to the theater you should arrange to be ready when he arrives. He, of course, should plan his time to arrive conveniently early. He should certainly not be kept waiting very long while a woman sees how late she can be.

I have known some young girls to arrange deliberately to be late, so as to be seen walking down the aisle of a church or a theater. If they only knew how decidedly their actions stamp them as bourgeois, which opprobrium they are trying to escape. They are trying to attract attention and to make a show, which is never an evidence of refinement. They are also putting others to great inconvenience, which is inconsiderate.

If you arrange to have a friend call on you at half-past 8 o'clock, be ready for him. He should not be allowed to sit alone in the room where you entertain friends while you are adding a few touches to your toilette. You should be ready to receive a caller, to introduce him to your mother and father and to extend to him a punctual hospitality.

Punctuality in letter writing is also an important thing. When a letter is received asking you for information, answer it immediately. When a question is asked, give a polite, punctual reply. It is a sign of consideration. Stay out of bed a few minutes later in order to do this, or rise a little earlier in the morning. Do not let delinquency be one of your bad habits.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Wearing Mourning

DEAR Mrs. Adams:

How long should a widow and daughter wear mourning?

Do you think one should go to a picture theater while in mourning?

NELLIE L.

A widow who wishes to follow the conventional rules of mourning should wear the widow's bonnet and long veil, and crepe de chine, lusterless silk, etc., may be worn, with hats trimmed with black ribbon, black flowers, black chiffon or dull jet ornaments. When eighteen months have passed, white and lilac touches may be added to relieve the black, and after two years have expired colors may be resumed.

If the daughter is extremely young she should not wear heavy mourning. For her a black hat trimmed with crepe and a small face veil or plain chiffon set with a broad border of crepe, a black dress, gloved, etc., are proper for the first six months or year. After that, the crepe should be removed and white worn with the black. In the summer all white may be worn during the mourning period by young women.

While wearing deep mourning it would hardly be appropriate to attend places of amusement.

The Ushers

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Is it the bride's duty to appoint the ushers at a church wedding?

MAY.

It is customary for the bridegroom to appoint the ushers from among his own friends, but frequently he also invites the bride's brother or some male relative to act as usher.

The Engagement Ring

Dear Mrs. Adams:

I am a man in moderate circumstances and should like to know what kind of an engagement ring I should give to a girl who has promised to marry me.

WILLIAM.

You should not tax your resources to buy the ring. A ring set with your sweetheart's birthstone or her favorite stone or with a plain band ring would be very much appreciated by her.

Kissing Is Not Necessary

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Kindly inform me whether it is necessary for one to call and see his bride after the ceremony and before the auditorium in the church.

READER.

Asking a Man to Call

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Is it proper for a young woman to invite a man to call on her, or should the man ask to call? If so, after how many meetings may she ask him?

ELEANOR.

It is proper for a young woman to take the initiative in asking a man to call, but this invitation should not be given until after two or more meetings. Many girls, however, dislike to take this step and wait for the man to ask permission to call.

Desires Popularity

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Please tell me how I could become popular. People never seem to care for my opinion about things, and when I am at parties I am not popular. I am not bashful, but greatly enjoy the society of older people. I do not care especially for people of my own age.

I expect to go to Germany and study music for about three months. I have a modest talent. How may I secure instruction from an expert teacher?

MILLICENT.

I fear you are a little bit too sensitive and imagine you are less popular than you really are. It is not meant that every one of us should be a social belle, but we can make ourselves so amiable that our presence will always be desired. Possibly you do not express your opinions in a modest way. You will find that people do not care for the person who has decided opinions and has no time for the opinions of others. Be a good listener and be willing to join in any fun proposed. The best thing for you to do is to ask your teacher to recommend a good school or teacher in Germany.

Marriage of the Employer

Dear Mrs. Adams:

I have been employed for one month as a stenographer for a man who is going to be married very soon. Shall I give him a wedding present?

MARIE.

Under such conditions it would not be advisable to give a wedding gift. As your dealings with the man are of a business nature it is better not to introduce the social element.

A Call of Condolence

Dear Mrs. Adams:

What is the proper time to call on a friend who has lost her father? I left my card as soon as the funeral was announced.

A READER.

A call of condolence should be made ten days or three weeks after the funeral.

A Man's Card

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Is it proper for a man to have his nickname printed on a visiting card? Should the address be mentioned?

A READER.

Nicknames and contractions of names should not be engraved on a man's visiting card. The home address, but not a business address, may appear on a visiting card.

Breaking an Engagement

Dear Mrs. Adams:

Do you think it is proper for a girl who has promised to go to a place of amusement with a gentleman to break the engagement? In the case mentioned the parents are not willing for the girl to go.

SARAH.

Quite proper under such circumstances. I am sure the young man will understand the situation if you give reason for breaking the engagement.

A Home Wedding

Dear Mrs. Adams:

In planning a simple home wedding to take place in the evening, I find there are many things of which I am ignorant. Will you kindly give me answers to the following questions?

1. Is it correct for the mother of the bride to wear black silk when a veil is worn by the bride?

2. What is an attractive way to wear the veil?

3. What is the correct dress for the groom?

4. Must the wedding dress have high neck and long sleeves?

5. Should wedding announcements or invitations be sent or cards would be sufficient for those to attend the wedding? When should they be sent?

A READER.

1. Yes.

2. The newest veil is the one of tulle reaching just to the waist line. Around the shirred crown have a wreath of your favorite white flower of a small variety, and have the tulle pleated in a narrow, scant ruffle around the edge of the veil.

3. The bridegroom should wear evening dress when the ceremony is performed after 6 o'clock.

4. No. The low neck and short sleeves are more in evidence in the wedding gown than the high neck and long sleeves. However, a bride is at liberty to wear whichever is most becoming to her.

5. Send wedding invitations two weeks before the date of the ceremony.

For the Elbows

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you kindly tell me what I can do to improve my elbows?

HANNAH.

Scrub the elbows with a fleshbrush and use plenty of soap and water. Rinse the skin and rub into it cocoa butter. Do not form the habit of leaning on the elbows. The weight on them is sure to harden the skin and make it coarse and red.

The Effect of Brushing

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Do you think that brushing the hair will help to keep it clean?

KATHERINE.

The daily brushing of the hair will help to keep it clean and in a healthy condition. Separate the hair in strands and brush down the scalp made by the separation. Then with a silk handkerchief rub the scalp and the hair. The handkerchief will remove much of the dirt and will give a pretty gloss to the hair.

It is quite necessary to keep the hairbrush in a clean condition if the hair is to be kept so. Once a week cleanse the brush in water to which ammonia has been added. Rinse the bristles thoroughly and place the brush bristles down to dry.

To Whiten the Teeth

Dear Mrs. Symes:

My teeth look very yellow, and occasionally my breath has an awful odor. Please advise me what to do.

A READER.

It may be that your teeth are covered with tartar. If this is the case you need look no further for the cause of the bad breath. You should cleanse the teeth with diluted peroxide and rinse the mouth with it. Another good mouthwash that will sweeten the breath is made of:

Phenol	15 grains
Boric acid	6 drams
Thymol (in crystals)	15 grains
Essence of menthol	20 drops
Tincture of arnica	2½ drams
Distilled water	3 pints

Rinse the mouth with the above, which should be diluted for use in the proportion of one-half teaspoonful to same quantity of clear water. Use after each meal and at any time required. Visit the dentist twice a year.

Poor Circulation

Dear Mrs. Symes:

My face is very pale, due, I think, to poor circulation of the blood. Do you think walking would help me?

ELSIE.

There is no better exercise than walking for the person whose circulation is poor, and whose face is pale. In order to make it beneficial as an exercise, it should be done quickly and briskly so as to bring into play the muscles of the body.

You should sleep at least eight or nine hours every night. Too little sleep is often responsible for a pallor.

A plain simple diet should be followed. Avoid the rich foods and eat those that digest well and give nourishment.

A Curling Lotion

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please give me the recipe for a hair-curling lotion? Also give me the recipe for a tonic to be used on hair which is very dry.

WINIFRED.

Here are the recipes you desire:

Hair-Curling Lotion

Potassium carbonate	120 grains
Ammonia water	1 fluid dram
Alcohol	12 fluid drams
Rosewater enough to make	16 fluid ounces.

In using, moisten the hair, adjust it loosely, and it will curl upon drying.

Oil of Sweet Jasmine

(A Hair Oil.)

Scentless castor oil	2 ounces
Cocoanut oil	2 ounces
Oil of rosemary	1 ounce
Oil of jasmine	½ dram

To Reduce the Hips

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Kindly tell me what to do to reduce the hips.

ALMA.

Stooping exercises will do much to reduce the hips if they are practiced regularly. Stand erect, and then bend to a sitting position. Rise and repeat the movement until you begin to feel fatigue. Then stop. Exercises continued after the feeling of fatigue do more harm than good.

Rowing and brisk walking will also help to bring the hips down to normal size. Do not sit for any great length of time.

Falling Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Please give me the recipe for a tonic that I may use on my hair, which is falling out.

EDNA.

Castor oil rubbed into the scalp will frequently prevent the hair from falling. If this does not help in your case try the tonic for which the recipe is here given:

For Falling Hair

Cologne	8 ounces
Tincture of cantharides	1 ounce
Oil of English lavender	½ dram
Oil of rosemary	½ dram

Apply to the roots of the hair once or twice a day. It is positively necessary that the scalp should be kept clean. Shampoo at least once a week.

Cold Feet

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Can you tell me why it is that I suffer with cold feet? The rest of my body is quite warm.

L. P.

A poor circulation of the blood will cause cold feet. You should exercise daily for an hour in the fresh air. Bathe the feet with cold water and then rub them well to stimulate the circulation.

For the Nails

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Please tell me what to do for nails which are very brittle.

FLORENCE.

Olive oil or cold cream applied to the nails will make them less brittle. Another remedy is the paste for which I am giving you the recipe:

Paste for Brittle Finger Nails

Take equal parts of refined pitch and myrrh, of turpentine and myrrh melted. Mix together and spread upon the nails at night. Remove in the morning with a little olive oil. This paste will nourish the nails and make them stronger.

Oily Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes:

My hair is disagreeably oily. Will you please give me the recipe for a lotion which I may use on it?

D. G.

A very splendid recipe which you may use on your hair is made of the following:

Powdered bicarbonate of soda	¼ ounce
Borax, or soda, powdered	¼ ounce
Eau de cologne	1 fluid ounce
Alcohol	2 fluid ounces
Distilled water	18 fluid ounces

Mix and agitate until solution is complete. If used daily, it tends to produce a crispy condition.

An Egg Shampoo

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please tell me how to make an egg shampoo?

GRACE.

Following are the directions for making the egg shampoo: To half a cake of pure white castile soap add a pint of rainwater. Set on the stove and heat until the soap is perfectly dissolved. To this add an egg which has been thoroughly whipped with an eggbeater, stirring it into the mixture with the beater to prevent curdling. Add 1 scant teaspoonful of borax and a teaspoonful of alcohol to preserve the shampoo. When ready to shampoo the hair, rub well into the scalp and rinse in several clear waters, using a bath spray if you have one.

A Hair Tonic

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please give me the recipe for a harmless hair tonic?

A READER.

Jaborandi Tonic

Quinine sulphate	20 grains
Tincture of cantharides	2 fluid drams
Fluid extract of jaborandi	2 fluid drams
Alcohol	2 fluid ounces
Glycerin	2 ounces
Bay rum	2 fluid ounces
Rosewater	16 fluid ounces

The quinine should be dissolved in the alcohol. Heating by warming slightly, then the other ingredients added and the whole filtered. Rub into the roots of the hair every night.

The hairbrush is usually in need of cleansing once a week. Ammonia in water will cleanse the brush. Do not let the back of the brush get into the solution. When all of the dirt is removed, rinse the bristles with clean water. Then place the brush, bristles down, to dry.

A Dry Shampoo

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please tell me how often the hair should be washed? My hair is blonde. Will corn root make the hair light and fluffy? How should it be used? Will you also tell me how to make a dry shampoo and how to use it?

READER.

The hair should be washed as often as necessary. It is important to dry the hair thoroughly after water has been used on it.

Orris root will not make the hair light, but it will remove superfluous oil and make it fluffy.

A mixture of equal parts of orris root and corn meal is a splendid dry shampoo. A satisfactory way to apply it to the hair is to put it in a talcum powder box and sprinkle it over the head. Then brush the hair thoroughly. Rubbing a silk handkerchief over the hair, after dividing it in strands, will cleanse it and give an attractive gloss.

For Freckles

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please give me a remedy for freckles?

ANXIOUS.

Lemon juice applied to freckles will help slightly. If this does not prove satisfactory in your case, try the remedy for which I am giving the recipe:

Lemon and Glycerin Lotion

Citric acid (lemon)	3 drams
Hot water	11 ounces
Borax	1 dram
Red rose petals	1 ounce
Glycerin	1 ounce

Dissolve the acid and borax in the water; infuse the rose petals for an hour, strain through a jelly bag after twenty-four hours, decant the clear portion and add the glycerin. Apply as often as agreeable.

A Dandruff Cure

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please give me the recipe for a dandruff cure?

UNSIGNED.

The sulphur cure has proved most successful in many cases. To an ounce of sulphur add a quart of soft water, and during intervals of several days, agitate the mixture repeatedly. After the sulphur has settled to the bottom of the receptacle use the clear liquid. Saturate the head with it every morning, and in a few weeks every trace of dandruff will have disappeared. The hair will become soft and glossy, and there will be no return of the old trouble.

This remedy, however, will darken light hair.

To Darken the Lashes and Brows

Dear Mrs. Symes:

I would like to know what to use to darken the eyelashes and eyebrows?

READER.

You will find the eyebrow pencil the most satisfactory thing to use to darken the eyebrows and eyelashes. You can buy the pencil at almost any drug store.

A Growth of Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes:

I should like to know what to do to remove a growth of hair on the lips and arms?

MARIE H.

To remove the hairs permanently the electric needle should be used. Go to a reliable operator to have the work done.

To Reduce the Hips

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Please tell me what exercises to practice to reduce the hips?

ADA.

To Reduce the Hips

1. Bring the knee up to the chest, remaining perfectly erect. Practice in alternate movements.

3. Take standing position, hands on hips, and, with the hips resting, bend the knees and bending the chest and shoulders innovard. Come to erect position used in this exercise. Bending exercises also are good.

To Reduce the Waist

Dear Mrs. Symes:

I should like very much to reduce my waist measurement. Please tell me how this can be done.

ANNA.

Deep breathing will help reduce the waist measure and enlarge the bust. The stretching exercises, too, help the splendid as waist depleters. Raise the arms high above the head, then, holding knees straight, try to touch the floor without bending. Stand erect, place hands on hips; bend from waist as far as possible to the right, then to the left.

A Cleansing Cream

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Will you please give me the recipe for a cleansing cream?

AGNES.

Cleansing Cream

White wax	2 ounces
Spermaceti	2 ounces
Sweet almond oil	2 ounces
Distilled water	2 ounces
Glycerin	2 ounces
Salicylic acid	30 grains

Moles on the Face

Dear Mrs. Symes:

I have two moles on my face, and I am most anxious to get rid of them. Some one advised me to burn them off with an acid. Do you approve of this plan?

MOLLY.

I do not approve of any plan other than a treatment from a most reliable doctor. Too often experiments with such things meet with sad results.

Talcum Powder

Dear Mrs. Symes:

Please give me the directions for making a good, harmless talcum powder.

MARIE.

A harmless and very excellent talcum powder is made of:

Rice flour	10 ounces
Starch	10 ounces
Oxide of zinc	10 ounces

Mix thoroughly and sift through fine bolting cloth. Perfume to taste.

FORECAST OF COMING PARIS FASHIONS

BY MARY BUEL

WITH DRAWINGS FROM EXCLUSIVE PARIS PHOTOGRAPHS BY DAGMAR RASMUSSEN

Gown of white liberty satin, entirely veiled with lace. On the skirt there are two deep flounces of black Chantilly lace, the lower one falling straight, the upper one slightly draped. This drapery is formed by bunches of velvet acorns, which catch the lace up, and directly beneath these is a scarf of pale yellow satin, which is drawn closely about the skirt and is finished in the center of the back with a flat bow. Over the bodice is white maline lace and white chiffon combined. The center of the front and the center of the sleeves are of chiffon, the puff at the lower part and the kimono top being of lace. A narrow black tulle plaiting edges the throat and extends down either side of the bodice, and there are small black buttons down the center of the front. A perfectly plain yellow sash marks the waist, and is drawn about the hips, a large cluster of acorns finishing the upper part in front.—Model from Dieme.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—It generally remains for the last racing week in Paris to give a forecast of what coming fashions are to be, but for a wonder this year such is not the case, or if it is, then styles are to change but slightly, and there is to be nothing sensational in the coming modes. In late years the Prix d'Auteuil and drag day have been more fashionable events than the Grand Prix, and all the best and latest clothes are worn upon both of these occasions rather than upon the last great day, and so naturally on both Sunday and yesterday there was an enormous display of new toilets, which included everything from shoes to hats.

In a way it is difficult to generalize what all of these were, but there are a few special notes that stand out beyond the others which must be mentioned. In the first place many of the gowns that are now considered smart for day time wear would, a few seasons ago, have been suitable only for evening use. Lace prevails, black and white being equally worn, and toilets made of these had low cut necks and transparent sleeves and were frequently trimmed with flowers and the most filmy tulles. An especially new idea is the use of black and white lace together in a gown and not treated as formerly, one trimming the other, but instead a bodice will be of the one and the skirt of another, both perfectly distinct and separate, with not a connecting link. I saw a dozen of these on Sunday, the majority having white bodices with black skirts, the lining sometimes being white and sometimes of a deep peach shade, and all of them being elaborate. Then there were an immense number of frocks having black satin or chiffon skirts with bodices, sunsuits, and coats in the loveliest of white lace. Of all the gowns worn some of these were the most attractive, although there were many all white costumes that were not only pretty and dainty but striking and stunning.

Black and White Costumes.

One black and white frock that I especially admired had a satin skirt, with a lot of gathers let into the center front seam, which gave it a wrinkled appearance, but it was not otherwise draped. At the bottom it was rounded up in front, so that the instep and a part of the ankle could be seen, but this rounding is so much more graceful than the slashed skirts that it at once commends itself. Over the black skirt fell a tunic of point d'Alencon lace, exquisitely fine and of a yellowish shade. Its lower edge, which nearly reached to the knees, was of festoon shape, these being made by the pattern and not by drapery. The hip part of the tunic was absolutely tight fitting and so was the bodice, as far as the lace extended, which was in a deep point back and front. These points were covered with chiffon, the bodice really being made of this, and it was full, soft, loose, and comfortable looking, with sleeves of the same, also large and loose. Tulle plaitings bordered the neck and sleeves, the latter having two that fell over the hands and one that stood up onto the arms, these being divided by a black satin band. The girdle of the gown was wide, and it was made of Pompadour silk, caught together at one side by two clusters of artificial flowers.

Another good black and white costume was made of black satin and white crêpe de chine instead of lace and it also was one of the effective ones worn. The skirt and the bodice as high as the bust were of satin, the former being draped and shirred. This last took place about the hips, there being several rows eight or ten inches below the waist line, these holding in a great deal of fullness. All of this appeared in the center of the front, the back being straight and close, and this fullness was caught back on the sides in two or three under plaits, giving a graceful effect.

Over this skirt was worn a coat of white crêpe de chine, which was shaped like a Russian blouse, only that it ended at the sides and did not extend across the front. The skirt of this coat was full and there were three deep tucks that finished its lower edge. About the throat and going down the sides were full sleeves. There was a little chemisette of lace that appeared above the black satin on the front of the bodice, but this was so small that it had the appearance of a low square neck. There was also a girdle, but not a wide one, in a wonderful shade of Pompeian red which fastened at the side with jeweled buttons.

Of the white dresses there were some noticeable ones made of broche, with cunning little overskirts of tulle, this same delicate material forming a portion of the bodices and the sleeves. There were also many made of satin and the variety of styles in these were many.

One pretty one had a plain skirt over which was draped white chiffon and there was a little bolero of chiffon bordered with lace. Another had a draped satin skirt, with a bodice of white lace and an unusually high girdle of satin, at the top of which stood a tall plaiting of bright green tulle. This was so high that it stood like a frame about the body, the effect being odd, if not pretty. One white satin frock had a tulle tunic falling over it, the edges of this being bordered with a new fur in wonderful shades of yellow and brown. In fact there were several dresses upon which fur was used, one in particular of rose pink chiffon trimmed in chinchilla being lovely.

A race meeting would not be complete without some eighteenth century toilets, and of these there were some charming examples seen on Sunday. One was of mauve colored silk, the tone being of the faintest and softest. A wide puff of white tulle trimmed the bottom of the skirt, and another encircled it about midway. The bodice was basque shaped, with puffings edging it, and the sleeves of silk reached only to the elbow, with puffed tulle undersleeves appearing below them.

A pale green flowered silk gown was trimmed with several ruffles of pale pink tulle, and this had a bodice all of tulle, with a wide sash of the flowered silk. Another was of white satin with a skirt formed of three knife plaited flounces, and a satin coat with a rounded basque back, which was worn over a pointed waistcoat of cherry and white striped silk. There was a hat to match worn with this gown, this having a transparent white tulle crown and a striped silk brim, it being sailor shape and untrimmed.

Transparent Hat Popular in Paris.

The transparent hat has taken possession of Paris and so numerous were they on Sunday last that instead of counting them by the dozen their list went into the hundreds. Some were in new and wonderful shapes, one especially that I noticed being of black Chantilly lace. The crown was low and small and it had neither lining nor boning. The lace was stretched plainly over a delicate frame, which formed the brim, and this was shaped, the front being only just wide enough to cover the hair, while the back reached quite to the shoulders. At one side was a paradise feather, this being placed on the edge of the brim, from which it fell almost to the waist. Hats with figured tulle crowns and upstanding brims of Chantilly lace were among the prettiest seen, the brims being adjusted to the face, either high or low, according as their becomingness dictated.

Tulle hats having white crowns with black brims are smart and so are some of the colored tulle hats that are being worn. An unusually chic one at the races was in a soft shade of maroon, the entire hat being made of plate shaped pieces of tulle, one above the other, and each edged with narrow brown ribbon velvet. The hat sat perfectly on the head and was apparently kept on by a wider velvet ribbon, which was put crosswise over the top and was then brought down and tied under the chin. This ribbon was placed much nearer the front than the back, so that the former just covered the forehead and was straight, while in the back it tilted straight up and out, an effect particularly novel.

I have also seen this same shape in other colored tulle, the fabric instead of being plainly put over the frame being puffed or made of endless little ruffles. One of this last had a pink velvet rose resting on the brim in front just over the left eye, while in under the tilted back there reposed a stunning black velvet rose. The hat itself was of pink tulle.

For youthful faces there are some darling sailor hats made of tulle, light shades always being selected for these, and the trimming on them is simply a folded band of ribbon, which is tied in a bow in the back with the ends falling over the brim. Silk moire in pink, white, and blue is being made into sailor shaped hats, these being trimmed with donkey ear shaped bows that stand at one side. They are charming little hats and when worn with lace or chiffon gowns to match make a combination that is smart and youthful.

Peacock Blue Coming Color.

There are also some hats that are attractive from their oddness rather than from anything that is pretty in itself. For instance, I saw at the races a hat of black shiny leather, sailor shape, but with a low and oblong crown. Directly on the front of this was perched a huge butterfly of black Chantilly lace, the contrast between it and the hat being something to wonder at. Another had the same glazed leather crown with a lace brim and no trimming, while still another had a peacock blue velvet crown with a turned back brim of cream white lace, this also being untrimmed.

If one were to hazard a guess as to the coming color it would be for this beautiful shade of peacock blue, for in hats of this hue I saw several at Auteuil, all evidently made by some master hand. One a lovely tulle affair, practically toque shape, had a circlet of mustard colored aigrette standing up like a crown, while on the left side were two enormous bunches of these same feathers, one in blue, the other in mustard. It was one of the most noticeable hats worn. Another of the same shade of peacock was also in tulle and this was one of the few large hats seen. It was low crowned and the wide brim had fascinating curves and drooping lines in it. A half wreath of black and blue tulle flowers trimmed it and it was indescribably picturesque and smart.

I have several times lately spoken of the great number of red costumes that are being worn and these instead of decreasing are growing in numbers. It is a color used almost exclusively for tailored gowns, both the strict tailor and those known as "soft" effects, and the shades that are employed are countless. At the parade of the coaches yesterday half the women occupying seats were garbed in some tone of red, and as a rule their costumes included coats, skirts and blouses. One pretty one was in Pompeian red, the material being a silk sponge. The skirt was plain, but with a little fullness at the belt, and the coat was simply a suggestion of a garment, all cut away in front, with a pointed tail back and wide revers. The blouse was plainly visible below this, and this was of chiffon opening in front over a waistcoat of ecru colored embroidered batiste. The waistcoat was much longer than the coat and its lower edge was finished with a ruffle of the same material, this being quite a new idea.

Black and white checked costumes trimmed with red are for the moment among the best liked tailor clothes and some of these are both pretty and chic. On one of these there appeared a wide folded hip sash of crimson taffeta, with a touch of the same color trimming the coat and on another there was a belt of brick red velvet, with one long sash end falling in front from beneath the coat and with collar and cuffs of the same trimming it. A black and white checked voile that came from Beer was one of the best looking of the simple gowns seen yesterday, the skirt of this being draped and provided with sash ends of the same, these being edged with white cotton fringe. The bodice of the gown was all of English embroidery except the girdle of voile, and as a finish about the throat and on the sleeves were red satin collar and cuffs, with frills of tulle partly covering them.

Odd Uses of Sash.

Sashes are the mode and more, for they are used on everything and in the oddest and most unexpected ways. Moire is much used for the wide hip sashes and in unusual shades. For instance, a blue serge costume, made with a cutaway bolero, had a sash of dark gray moire, the bias silk being passed twice about the figure and then falling on the left side with two knotted ends. The gown had yellow collar and cuffs on its coat, and the gray sash was the only touch of that color. Sashes of two different tulles are new, and these are remarkably pretty, for they allow of some charming combinations and they trim up simple frocks wonderfully. I have seen green and magenta used on a white gown, and dark blue and gold on black, and both are smart.

Some of the newest sashes droop in the back, this effect being the tendency of a number of late models, the skirts being short in front and long in the back, the sash following that line. Velvet sashes, almost bust high in front and ending eight or nine inches below the waist line in the back, are being used on chiffon frocks and these are awfully pretty. The ends of the velvet are trimmed with a deep fringe, and perfectly glorious colors are employed for these, especially with white dresses.

On one model seen lately there appeared a jet sash, the belt part being formed of links of solid jet, while the sash was made of these connected by black moire ribbon. It was used on a white lace gown and was odd if not strictly comfortable.

Gown for evening of crepe de chine broche and chiffon cloth. The lower part of the skirt and panel back are of the broche, the color being a deep rose pink. The skirt has more than the usual amount of fullness, the train falling in soft plaits. The chiffon cloth is of the same shade as the broche, and is made to represent an overskirt in front and at the sides, the material being laid in large folds, four in number. The bodice is entirely of chiffon, this being also plaited, and in front it is surplice shaped. The sleeves are draped and are caught with velvet bands. The folded belt is of satin, with a velvet flower finishing it in front.—Model from Ney.

Gown of colonial yellow crepe de chine. The shape of the skirt is unusual, the front being laid in some shallow plaits that come from beneath the girdle, and to the knees there is a wide tuck which extends just across the front. The skirt is plain in the back, and the extra length formed by the tuck in front makes a drapery at the sides. The bodice is very loose, the material being gathered full into the belt. The kimono shaped sleeves are of white tulle, with folds and rows of knife plaitings to finish them. A large waistcoat of the same, finished with plaitings, covers the front of the bodice, the same plaitings extending about the round neck.

"Easy Money" That Didn't Pay

Easy money!

If Texas Ben were still alive, he could tell you whether the mints ever coined such a currency.

But a few months ago, after finishing fifteen years at the Atlanta federal penitentiary, Ben and another member of the old "Hole-in-the-wall" gang, held up a train on the Texas border, and were killed by a messenger who couldn't see that an express company's money should be "easier" than anyone else's.

A third member of the "Wild Bunch," as Ben's gang called themselves, spent some of his best days in the Atlanta federal prison, because of his belief in "easy money," and the rest are either dead or have become "numbers" instead of individuals.

This old "Hole-in-the-wall" gang is the best answer yet to the "easy money" question; and the answer is interesting here; for, while they robbed in the west, it was here that three came to pay for what they had stolen.

Just about 20 years ago this band of fourteen men and two women set out to find all the easy money that was lying around in Wyoming and Texas. There was Bill, of course; "Black Jack" Ketcham, "Bill" Carver; then, the lesser lights, Sam Ketcham, Elza Lay, Lonny and Harvey Logan, who were also known as the Curry brothers, "Bob" Lee, "Deaf" Charley Hanks, "Butch" Cassidy, "Sundance Kid," three other men and two women, Laura Bullion and Etta Place.

Death of "Texas Ben."

LIKE THE DOONES.

They called themselves the wild bunch, and took a pride in giving their thefts a bold and adventurous air. They were something like the Doones, though there was no Lorna among them, a "different" sort of bandit crowd in many ways.

For one thing, they believed in "easy money." That is, Ben and the leaders held to this belief. Their purpose was to steal one million dollars in ten years' time, each to take his share, and all to retire to comfortable honesty.

"Easy money" was to give them contentment and peace. Hard work, as Ben saw it, never got you anywhere. You stuck to a job till your working days were over, and what would you have to show for it?—a little money and less pleasure.

That was Texas Ben's view of the situation, and all other members of the old "Hole-in-the-wall" gang agreed with him that "easy money" might be set along with death and taxes as a certainty. All that you needed was a clear view of life and a determination to take your share.

None of the sixteen looked far enough ahead to see the Atlanta federal penitentiary, and Ben failed to learn, even after long experience, that express messengers often have the habit of shooting straight.

MILLION IN BOOTY.

It was the belief of the whole sixteen that in ten years' time at most, they would have one million dollars, and each would be ready to follow his heart's desire. Bill, so a mixed story of fact and fiction has it, came of a good family and once had lived several respectable years in London. His plan was to return some day and set up as a gentleman. Others had various desires, but their belief was common.

"Easy money" was just as easy as you wanted to make it. A little venture, some slight violation of customs, and you could live in future comfort, without bother over matters of money.

Well, out in Wyoming is the "Hole-in-the-wall" country, a refuge for "easy money" seekers; and there they made their headquarters. From this country, into which pursuit was difficult, they would ride down into Texas and rob anything or anybody who seemed to have money.

One bright morning, for instance, they robbed the Butte county bank at Belle Fourche, N. D., later on they held up the Union Pacific express train at Tipton, Wyo.; a month later they robbed the First National bank of Winnemucca, Nev., of $32,640, from the Great Northern train, at Wagner, Nev., they took $40,500 to add to their million, and so on they continued until in seven years' time they had gathered together half of the million upon which they were to "retire."

Up until that time they had found "easy money," half a million dollars worth of it. Their theory was working out exactly. All they needed was a venturesome spirit and a disregard for property rights; and soon, Texas Ben could go back to London, and "Deaf" Charlie and the rest could follow their particular heart's desire.

PAYING THE PRICE.

Then, they began to pay. Every one of them, in one way or another, began to pay the "price" for every penny that they had stolen. "Easy money" that had dropped out of the skies into their hands during seven years began to drag them down.

Over at Clayton, N. M., one morning "Black Jack" Ketcham killed the sheriff, who was so unreasonable as to interfere with a little expedition of the "Hole-in-the-wall" gang. It was just one of those untoward incidents that went along with the gang's easy methods, and wasn't much thought of until "Black Jack" found himself in the hands of a posse a few months later. They hanged him to the most convenient tree, and the "Hole-in-the-wall" gang had a glimpse of how hard "easy money" can come at times.

That hanging of "Black Jack" seemed to break the luck of the gang. It seemed that fate decided all at once to make them pay in a lump.

Half a million dollars had come easy in seven years' time, but it was paid for "hard" in the years that followed.

Just take what happened:

"Bill" Carver, killed in Texas by a sheriff who wanted "Bill" for murder, and who shot quicker than the "easy money" man.

"Sam" Ketcham, riddled with bullets by a sheriff's posse and dying in one of those close, hot, miserable little prisons on the border of Mexico.

PRISON FOR LIFE.

Elza Lay, shut up in another prison of exactly the same kind for the rest of his life because of the Cimarron train robbery.

"Flat Nose George" Curry, killed in Utah by a deputy sheriff who had been sent out to arrest him dead or alive, and who took his orders literally.

Lonny Logan, killed in Missouri.

Bob Lee, sentenced to ten years in the Wyoming penitentiary.

Harvey Logan, sentenced to twenty years at Knoxville, but later escaped.

Then, Texas Ben and two others who were sentenced to the Atlanta penitentiary.

The one with the shortest term was convinced by prison life that "easy money" isn't worth while, and went from prison into the concealment of a quiet, honest life.

But "Ben," although he had come to take a different view of the "easy money" question, thought he would have another try, once he was out of the Atlanta federal prison. He was something like a gambler. Just one more venture to put him in funds, and then he was done with the "easy money" game.

So he and the pal who were released about the same time, went straight from Atlanta to Texas, and were killed upon their first hold-up.

Meantime, "Butch" Cassidy, the "Sundance Kid" and Etta Place fled to South America. They bought a ranch on a high table land in Argentina from which they could see for twenty-five miles around. And for two years they rallied country banks, held up wagon trains and terrorized a large section of the interior. But finally, they were driven from their refuge, and fled across the border into Chili. There they are yet, or were when last heard of, three men and a woman who dare not come home and who dare not stay long where they are condemned through their own past record of crime to a life of constant "moving on."

"Easy money!"

It's a visionary currency.

AFFECTION OF BILLY BATES FOR SOUSE, HIS PUP

CLEVELAND.—Souse is no more.

Billy Bates had owned Souse since she was a friendly little pup, but he never realized what a genuine affection he cherished for her until he died.

When the next ship comes into the harbor the officers and crew will miss her, too. They will look in vain for her to race along the docks, barking as if she intended to bite a hole in the hull that dared enter her river.

Souse was not a refined dog. She was the vagabond of the river front, a drunkard that chewed tobacco and kept late hours; yet her heart was kind, and she had more friends than any sailor on the lakes.

Seamen never would fail to share their last bit of chewing tobacco with her. River men would take her over to a saloon on a hot day when they were thirsty and share their drink with her.

No one could refuse Souse anything when she stood patiently but alert with head cocked to one side and begged with talking eyes.

TREATED HER AS A COMRADE.

"She was only a mongrel," Billy Bates said. "She couldn't be a white ribbon dog, if you know wot I mean. She didn't 'ave any religion in 'er. But she seemed almost 'uman with them ways she 'ad and the bobbies treated 'er like a comrade."

Billy Bates, whose courage and resourcefulness are said to have been tested in many tight places when he was a salt water seaman out of London, admits the death of Souse has unstrung him.

Shouse fell off the Lake Shore railroad bridge over the river to Whiskey Island and was drowned. For several hours Billy Bates thought she committed suicide and, as he blamed himself, his heart was heavy.

In telling the story that night at Snug Harbor, on River avenue, N. W., a sailors' lodging house of which he is proprietor, Bates explained how he "got religion" in a mission house along the docks on the river front a few days ago and how he tried to instill a little of it into the soul of Souse.

"She needed it bad," he said. "She was a jolly rotten bum for sure. Would you believe me that h'on a day wot she was particularly nervous she'd chew 'alf a plug of tobacco, if she could get it?"

Billy Bates said Souse never smoked a pipe, but she "made believe" she did. Nothing pleased her so much as to have a pipe in her mouth. She would carry it all day if allowed to do so.

Drinking was, perhaps, her worst vice. Souse was a drunkard. It is well known along the river that after she had grown wabbly in legs and dulled in senses she had many narrow escapes from falling into the river, but invariably escaped with drunken luck.

SOBER FOR THREE DAYS.

Billy Bates says up to the time he "got religion" Souse never was sober entirely, but that immediately after he signed the pledge she made an effort to "straighten up," and for the two or three days before she died she went out on tugs to meet incoming boats with head clear, eye steady and breath pure.

It was because of this that Billy Bates thought Souse committed suicide. He thought he had drawn the social lines too tightly around the poor dog and that perhaps he should have allowed her to taper off in her drinking, at least until the dog days were over.

Other rivermen did not agree with Billy Bates. They considered it depraved and irreligious to suppose a dog would commit suicide because of craving for drink.

Billy Bates, however, asserted it was impossible for a sober dog to drown unless there was a stone tied to him and that Souse was not so encumbered.

Then it leaked out that Souse was not sober when she died. One of the stevedores present while Billy Bates was lamenting his loss explained the boys thought they would give the dog a sendoff before she became respectable and had filled her with more whiskey than three men would care to drink.

The stevedore said Souse was almost paralyzed when she started to cross the bridge and had fallen between the ties.

It is true though that various countries adapted polo to their needs.

In China, for instance, it became a crude sort of basketball; in Turkey, it was played with a racket, much as tennis now is played; in Japan, as in China, basketball was the form that the Persian polo took; but in India the ideas of the originator were followed out and developed, and from there came the polo which is now becoming popular.

PLAYING THE GAME.

The game, as it is played today, requires a field of turf, preferably 950 feet in length by 450 feet in width. The match is between two teams. In championship contest, each team is restricted to four members, but in other matches, the number of members may be as large as desirable. Points are scored by driving a ball through a goal which is protected by the opposing team. At each end of the field is placed a goal, the posts of which are about 10 feet high and 24 feet apart. To win a goal counts one; and, of course, the largest score decides the match.

Two minutes' time is allowed for rest between goals and seven minutes between periods. Under the Hurlingham rules, which are observed in Great Britain, in Canada, and in parts of the United States, the time for a match is limited to one hour of actual play. This time is divided into six periods of 10 minutes each, and an interval of five minutes is allowed after the second and fourth periods, and two minutes after the first, third, and fifth.

When play begins, the two teams line up in the middle of the field, each on its own side; and, in a way, their position suggests a sort of equestrain football. The white polo ball, which is to be the bone of contention, is tossed into the middle of the field and each team sets about hammering it past the other's goal.

The mallet that is used in driving the ball has a rattan handle and a head that either is square with beleved edges, or cigar-shaped. The club is light, and is easily swung high above the head and then down at the ball.

But polo balls, like golf balls, are elusive; and with a twisting, squirming pony between your knees; and four opposing mallets constantly getting in your way, polo is not the easiest game in the world. It also is a game where hard falls are not infrequent.

As Foxall Keene has said:

"There is always the element of danger in the real game, and it must be boldly faced, for there is no place on the field for a timid rider. But to be bold doesn't mean to be foolhardy or to ride in a reckless way. And, after all, it is the spice of danger that makes the game worth while.

TRAINING IS NEEDED.

"It is certainly one sport, though, to which men and ponies need to be trained. At first, the mallet seems as unmanageable as a telegraph pole, and the pony is a problem. He must be trained, and the rider must learn the polo style, which is as distinct in its way as riding a steeple chase.

"The way to begin, is first to walk the pony about, without touching your hands to the reins, and meanwhile lean from one side to the other, and also forward and back. Then, put the pony into a canter, and sway him into half circles by pressure with your leg and the lightest touch of the reins. Finally, you should be able to make the quick turns of the figure eight; and even when your pony is in a hard gallop, you should be able to stop him in an instant and wheel him about."

In other words, one must be an accomplished horseman before he is fitted for this game of polo. Yet, among the Atlanta women who ride there are those who have sufficient skill to stand the test of this game of daring. Certain ... is, that polo is making its appeal to all who take pleasure in horsemanship.

Mexico, the Monroe Doctrine, and Malignant Mammonism

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

OUR country was never confronted by a more perplexing situation than that which is presented by conditions in Mexico.

On the one hand, the Monroe doctrine, which forbids the intrusion of any European monarchy into this hemisphere under any pretext, must be maintained for the sake of our own welfare, as well as for the sake of the Latin-American nations to the south of us. On the other hand, this policy must not be asserted in such a way as to offend these Southern republics. If, however, we warn European powers off the Western hemisphere, we can not escape the responsibility for maintaining good order and the security of life and property in the lands over which we thus extend a quasi-protectorate. It is obvious that the position of our government in view of all these things, one of great delicacy and great danger.

The fact can not be disguised that some, if not all, the European powers, would be glad to see such conditions arise as would force the abandonment of the Monroe doctrine. And it is also a fact that in Latin-America, during the last decade, there has been developed a good deal of sentiment adverse to this polity of our government. European traders and native publicists in these countries south of us have contributed to the creation and maintenance of such a sentiment, and it is more or less prevalent in all these nations, from Mexico to the farthest extremity of South America. It is perhaps most active in Mexico on account of the Mexican war, for which most of the Mexican people have never quite forgiven us.

The disquietude which has prevailed in Mexico since the uprising against the administration of President Perfirio Diaz presents a most perplexing problem to our government. Our government can not look with indifference upon such conditions, and it can not recklessly intervene for the tranquilization of Mexico without incurring the gravest difficulties.

No man who knows any thing of the Mexico of today will think lightly of the possible consequences of intervention. Such an act upon the part of our government would instantly unite all Mexico in a common defense against us, and the worst of wars would follow. It would not be such an affair as that conducted by our cities under the leadership of General Taylor and General Scott. It would require an army of not less than 250,000 men and an expenditure of millions upon millions of money.

Such a conflict would invite complications with other powers, especially with Japan. The occasion would offer opportunity for those governments to wage war in any quarter of the globe to settle their grievances to their advantage. The opening of the Panama Canal, with all that is involved in this prodigious enterprise, would be imperilled.

If our country should be successful in such a war, at its close we would find ourselves isolated among the American nations. Every one of them would look upon us with distrust and suspicion. The smouldering sentiment against us, which now exists among them, would blaze like a continental forest such a conflict. A few may be conflagration.

The most far-reaching can not foretell all the results of evil which would brought in view.

(1) Our commerce with the Latin-American nations would be ill-affected. European merchants and manufacturers would take advantage of the situation to alienate trade from us, and that alienation would continue for a generations.

(2) In such a war thousands of precious lives would be sacrificed. Hundreds of homes would be plunged into mourning. By it homes which are now happy, would be shadowed by clouds of grief which never could be lifted. Women would be left in widowhood and children in orphanage.

(3) All the schemes of brotherhood and the moral movements by which the welfare of both Mexico and the United States is so substantially promoted would be arrested in their progress, if not utterly destroyed.

It would seem, therefore, that no one could be found in any country willing to do anything whereby such a ruinous conflict might be precipitated. This thing looks to be so inhuman as to be nothing less than monstrous.

Yet Senator Williams, of Mississippi, charged on the floor of the United States senate a few days ago that there was a lobby in Washington directing its energies to fomenting this Mexican trouble. He intimated that these lobbyists were operating in the interest of those who hoped to profit financially by a war with Mexico. The allegation of the senator from Mississippi seems to be somewhat justified.

The manufacturers of army supplies would like such a conflict to come to pass. The Krupps in Germany have been exposed recently in schemes to sell their products, and the men in our own country, who make dividends out of war materials, are probably not less virtuous than the Krupps. Men of their sort enriched themselves with government contracts during the war between the states, and others sold "embalmed beef" and like products to our army and navy during the recent war with Spain. By this time they are probably hungry for more profits.

There is also a class of brotherhood involved. Americans who own mines in the bordering states of Sonora, Sinaloa, and Chihuahua, and those who have a war with Mexico with the hope that in the end these states in which their mines are located might be annexed to the United States. Some of these men have mining interests in Arizona, Nevada, and New Mexico, which may account for the bellicose utterances of certain Western Senators concerning the Mexican situation.

In addition to the peril arising from the interlacing of all these and other interests in a lobby to promote intervention in Mexico by our government, there are certain sensational newspapers who lend themselves to the same diabolic ends. Some of them are paid by the "interests" to make their sensational publications; others are simply silly and senseless, like Nero, who fired Rome and fiddled while the city burned. The latter would not hesitate to kindle an international conflagration, if thereby they could issue millions of "extras" and find ready sale for their sensational issues.

Under all these inflamatory agencies lies the motive of malignant mammonism, ready to plunge two neighbouring countries into an awful war for no better reason than that of making monetary gains. The flight of hungry vultures, seeking to feed on the bodies of the dead, could not be more base. It is impossible to frame a statement which could do justice to the blackness of the infamy of such mammonism.

Nevertheless the administration of the United States is daily embarrassed by these foul agitators in his efforts to deal with the Mexican situation. The acts and utterances of the Secretary of State are misrepresented, and, thereby, obstacles are thrown in his way which add to the perplexities of a problem already extremely complicated. The Mexican people are irritated by these misrepresentations, and by the inflamatory utterances of men in position to make trouble by what they say.

It is time for the good people in our country to rebuke in the most marked manner the men who are conducting these machinations of malignant mammonism.

The men of commerce ought to rebuke them; for they are the enemies of our international trade.

The men of agriculture, who grow grain and cotton, ought to rise to arms against them; for they would hinder by war the international exchange of those products for the goods of Latin-America which our people need, such as coffee, sugar and rubber.

The men of humane purposes ought to resist them; indeed, they aim at an end which can not fail to hinder every humane enterprise designed to ameliorate conditions in the countries south of us.

The friends of peace ought to condemn them; for a war with Mexico would plunge the international peace-ousies and conflicts which would not end in the life-time of a generation.

All christian men should oppose them; for they set christian principles at nought, and agitate for the most godless purposes.

All men of all classes, who fear God or regard man, ought to withstand these agents of a malignant mammonism. They are nothing less than the enemies of the human race. They are ready to hinder the progress and well-being of mankind for years and years to come, in order to fill their own pockets with the profits of government contracts, the dividends of mining stocks, and the petty rewards of "yellow journalism."

President Wilson and his advisers have a task sufficiently difficult without the additional complications which arise from the machinations of these agitators. Every patriotic American citizen should support the administration in its efforts on behalf of peace.

One thing any man and every man can do to support the pacific efforts of the administration is to be calm, self-control, and refused to be excited by any thing the agitators may do or say. There are senators at Washington who would better serve their country by silence on the Mexican situation than by the wild talking which they are indulging. There are at least a number of Senators who come near to earning their salaries by masterly silence. Many of the "masterly arguments" attributed to them.

In fact, for some time Western gales have been blowing too strongly from the capitol at Washington for the good of the Republic.

SOME NEEDS OF THE LIVE STOCK INDUSTRY

By DR. ANDREW M. SOULE

THE desirability of increasing our live stock industries is recognized by all. Just how to accomplish this end admits of some speculation and considerable argument, especially on the part of the uninitiated. The improvement of the live stock interests of any community is fundamentally rooted in the introduction of a better grade of animals. It makes little difference what the class of stock under consideration may be. This fundamental undertaking is especially important in any community where the scrub has been allowed to predominate beyond the memory of the oldest inhabitant. On the other hand, it should not be gathered from this statement that it is necessary to introduce a large number of animals to effect a marked improvement in a community in short period of time. Eliminate the scrub sires and replace them with pure breds, and there is generally in any community a sufficient number of females of fair quality to be used as foundation stock, although there may be some exceptions to this rule.

The value and power of the pure-bred sire is not appreciated by those who are not familiar with what has been accomplished through their introduction into communities where the scrub has hitherto reigned supreme, and no one can adequately portray the transformation which will result in a few years where pure-bred sires of the right type have been selected and given proper care and treatment. It is possible, for instance, to increase the slaughter test from an average of 40 to 60 per cent. This means a difference of twenty pounds of beef on every 1,000 pounds of live weight. Therefore on a 1,000-pound animal the gain will represent, at 6 cents a pound, $12. A sire will very quickly pay for himself in a community where good females and a number of animals are maintained. The original investment need not be large and a few farmers clubbing together can always finance such an undertaking. Especially is this true where the interest centers in hogs, sheep or cattle. It is also easily possible with horses, though the investment required will be much greater. To say that a community is so poor that a few farmers co-operating together cannot buy a $50 boar, a $200 bull or a $1,000 stallion is a shameful libel. Why do our southern farmers neglect the great benefits and advantages which the maintenance of live stock will bring to them? Only because the industry is so new that it conveys to the layman an element of uncertainty and danger. We are loath to believe those things with which we are unfamiliar, and until some citizen of more than ordinary force of character breaks through this crust of prejudice the farmer prefers to continue on in the old rut.

The live stock business needs leaders, therefore, of courage and ability for many of their initial efforts will of necessity be experimental in character and they may suffer some loss and discomfiture on that account, but perseverence with live stock as in any other line of farming will win ultimate success for the individual and the community. There is room for the development of every phase of the live stock business in the south. There are very few if any localities where the business has been overdone, as one desires to purchase pure bred sires the chances are that in many instances he will be compelled to go north of the Ohio river to find the type of animals he is seeking. Of course, there are plenty of sires of a kind in existence but they are worse than useless in many instances and depress rather than uplift the stock business. What use is there in continuing to breed mares suffering from periodic or chronic ophthalmia, spavin, ring bone, roaring and other diseases to a little undersized jack which probably inherits some or all of these defects? Again the idea of building up a mule breeding business in a community is impossible. The proverbial phrase, "Carrying coals to Newcastle, is beautifully illustrated where such an undertaking is in progress. Unfortunately, illustrations of this kind are frequently met with. In fact, in many localities are no ideals and no standards and no progress can be anticipated. There is a wonderful opportunity for the development of horse and mule breeding. It has been shown that the draft type of mare may be made to replace the mule and still foal a mule colt which will be the equal of the best

Lady of the Dolls

BY MARY CARTER WINTER.

DO you know the proud Roxana Rosebud, formerly of Paris, but now a resident of Bookland? And have you made the acquaintance of the striped fog and Thomaso, the black cat? Perhaps you have even met Miss Jessie West and her good fairy, Jessalina?

Or, maybe you are too prosaic and ignorant to know anything at all about these personages; and certainly, if you know not these, you know nothing about fairies, which is too bad.

But ignorance is no sign that some things do not exist, and "there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in your philosophy," Mistress Prosy.

And the thing for you to do is to sit at the feet of some dreamer among little children and grow wise. Then you will learn who it is that at all, as "The Lady of the Dolls" can tell you. She knows that with every drop of rain that falls from the skies, a little fairy comes sliding down to see that the rain reaches the right places; and that just as the drops are nearly to the bottom each little fairy jumps nimbly off. It is the pattering of their feet you hear on the roof, the whir of their tiny wings that sing against the air; and it is the diving fairies that ruffle up the water when the rain is pouring down.

FAIRIES OF THE FLOWERS.

And it is the fairies, of course, that touch the eyes of all the blossoms and bid them waken to the light; and the fairies, too, who come back at night to close the blossomy eyes.

Maybe, knowing these things, you will admit, now, that the Lady of the Dolls knows more than you.

The Lady of the Dolls is young Miss Margaret Ashley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude L. Ashley. She is one of a diminishing band of children who have peeped into fairyland, and to whom the doings of the little folk are real.

She knows that fairies exist, because she has a big doll with fairy wings, that the diminutive people left in her fairy arbor one night; and every morning finds signs left by the elves.

She knows that every litle girl has a special fairy to look after her—one who smiles when her human charge is good, and who weeps when she is selfish and bad. She knows, too, the proud Roxana Rosebud, formerly of Paris, and all the band of fairy folk; and she has learned that every night at midnight all the toys of the world converse.

PROTECTOR OF THE TOYS.

She has tried hard some nights to stay awake to hear what they may say; but everybody knows that the Sand Man is unwilling for mortal children to share the secrets of the toys, though often in a dream, he will waft a little girl to a fairy ball or conclave.

Little Miss Ashley has a large family of dolls, and to her they are not toys but personalities. Each one of the thirty doll children is as completely provided for as a child may be. Beds, individual towels, dainty clothes and hats of varying nations, parasols, soaps and perfumes, all have their place in the nursery; and every night each one of the thirty is arrayed in fitting style for a midnight party. They are seated about the low play-table in the nursery, sweets and cake are left for refreshments for the gathering, and sometimes a nosegay of flowers adds adornment for the party. Next morning the young mistres beseeches her bisque doll to tell her all about it, but the Paris beauty remains mute.

Birds, rabbits, squirrels and other kinds of pets are not quite so unresponsive though, and little Margaret is learning many of their secrets. She has a table and chair built under a big fig tree in her back yard, and there she holds a daily conference with the birds. With bits of bread and other food she has wheedled them to the point where they know her, and they are not afraid to come and eat close to her hand.

TUB FOR THE BIRDS.

On the lawn she has a copper bathtub for her pets. It is about four or five inches wide and about twelve or fourteen feet long. It is sunk in the ground level with the lawn, and it is a favorite assembly place for the birds of the neighborhood. Margaret has a campstool which she takes to the end of the pretty little bathing place and as the birds come and go she sits and watches them, and coaxes them to come near and eat. Some of them are so tame that they will hop up on the toe of her broad little shoe, and with inquisitive eyes and noisy chirpings, carry on a regular conversation.

Every morning the little girl and her father go for a walk to a pretty stretch of woods near their home, and there little Miss Ashley learns the names of the trees and flowers and also the different kinds of birds.

She knows the legends, too, of the birds, flowers and trees; and to her indeed there is a sermon in every leaf and stone and in the babbling of the little rill that runs through the wood.

FAIRY SIGNS.

The first thing she does every morning is to look for the signs of fairy feet; and sometimes she finds them. If you will ask her she will tell you that the vaporous webs on the grass and shrubs carry in the morning are the gossamer mantles dropped by the night fairies as they ran at the first rosy touch of dawn. There are other signs, too.

It is rather nice to believe in fairies, isn't it? Especially in this day and time when children are grown before they are ten, and when Kris Kingle and all the other "realities" are being thrown into the discard. And how kind it makes the little girl who believes that birds and animals have personality and feeling, and how uniquely satisfying it must be to know one's dolls as people. What a contented nursery is the one where the child will sit for hours playing and talking to her doll children, enjoying the pleasures of the moment, and learning instinctively the sweet little traits of motherhood.

Most Behutiful of Cities

Washington is one of the most beautiful cities of the world because its foundations were laid in advance of its building. It was not the work of a chance engineer, but of an expert, who first studied the cities of the Old World before laying out the capital of America. The same is true of Paris, of Berlin, of Munich, Vienna, Dresden, Dusseldorf, Geneva—the charm of a city depends on its street plans.

When the district of Columbia was chosen as the site of the nation's capital, President Washington sent for an old army friend, Peter Charles L'Enfant, a French engineer, and intrusted him with its planning. Both men had imaginations in advance of their age. They saw Washington as the capital of a great nation. They planned for a city of 800,000 people.

They located the capitol and the white house at opposite ends of Pennsylvania avenue, with an unobstructed vista from one to the other. Radiating from Capitol hill, and at an acute angle with Pennsylvania avenue, a spacious mall was planned two thousand feet in width, about which the public buildings of the future were to be grouped. Here the Smithsonian institution, the national museum, the agricultural building, the bureau of engraving and printing were located.

About the white house grounds the new state department, commerce and labor and municipal buildings are being grouped in harmony with one another and their surroundings. The Potomac river front has been reserved for public uses and dedicated to parks, harbors and open spaces. About the Washington monument, and under plans recently approved by congress, spacious playgrounds, parks, harbors and bathing pavilions are being planned.

The beauty of Washington is not traceable to its natural advantages, but to its intelligent ground plan.

The lady with the sunshade and the cream cone has discovered what summer comfort is. A sunshade, particularly if it's pink, and an ice cream cone, provided it's heaping full, will make you forget altogether about temperatures and discomforts.

Just under her feet are city officials firing up the crematory for its first day's work. Summer health will depend in no small measure upon the manner in which the crematory will rid the city of disease-breeding refuse.

At the bottom of the page is shown the cereus plant, a night-blooming flower. Until it has reached the age of seven years, this plant puts forth no blossoms. And afterward it blooms only at night and the blossoms wither and are gone by the dawn of day. The blooms shown here are unusually numerous for one plant.

There is scarcely a time when Piedmont park has fewer bathers than you see right now in the photograph at the top of this page. At first glance you would take this picture to be a photograph of some popular seaside resort. And really, it does show a stretch of water that gives more pleasure to bathers than any part of the sea.

The three watermelons are just Georgia melons. They need neither comment nor praise. Every Georgia melon speaks for itself.

The group with flags and automobiles are the southern merchants who gathered in Atlanta from every part of the south to discuss business and to observe market conditions. Their convention has proved to be one of the most important ever held in Atlanta.

From the day that it opened, on August 4, the Southern Merchants' convention proved to be of the utmost interest and importance. At the opening session, the convention was begun auspiciously with addresses by Governor Slaton and by Mayor Woodward, and the merchants at once settled down to a discussion of vital topics.

Subjects of the greatest moment to the south were taken up, and plans were proposed and steps actually were taken which will mean much to southern business and to southern prosperity.

In his address of welcome, Governor Slaton very appropriately greeted the merchants as the "optimists of the state and yet the business men who show by their daily life and business methods the virtues of economy.
